Keep your temper. Gain a little knowledge every day. Make few promises, and speak the truth. Give full measure, and weigh with a just balance. Consent to common custom, but not to common folly. Be cautious of believing ill, but more cautious of reporting it. Have courage to wear your old clothes until you can pay for new ones. Think of heaven with hearty purpose and strong hope to get there. Do good to all, that you may keep your friends and gain your enemies. Count your resources, find out what you are not fit for, and give up wishing for it.—Selected.

WHY HE BROKE DOWN.

Everybody wondered why Mr. Roe broke down. He had a magnificent constitution, and was perfectly temperate. If any man was ever made for hard work, Mr. Roe was that man. He delighted in hard work. Sunday he was always found in his place in Sunday-school and church. He was treasurer, and took charge of the church collections and kept the accounts. He was trustee, also, and invariably present at the meetings of the trustees. He was auditor of the public school accounts, and present at all school meetings. He was always wanted to be on committees of various sorts, to be judge at fairs. He was prominent among the alumni of his alma mater. All these activities he gave his evenings to.

In the daytime, six days in the week, he was at his desk in the city, and pushing with all his might the very heavy business interests of the firm with which he was connected. After the business day came the social day, and if he wasn't at some trustee or school or committee meeting, he was entertaining friends at his own home or being entertained in somebody else's home. So he rarely got to bed before eleven or twelve o'clock, and the breakfast hour was eight. As he felt that he must have exercise, and as he delighted in gardening, he was often up at six o'clock in the morning in the warm season, running the lawn mower, pruning and cultivating his trees and vines, or hoeing in the garden.

If he felt a little dull, an extra cup of coffee at lunch would brighten him up for his afternoon work, or at dinner for his evening outing. So he burned the candle at both ends till there was little but snuff left.

General Grant is reported to have said on one occasion that, if he could have nine hours' sleep every night, any amount of work could be piled on him during the rest of the twenty-four hours without hurting him. Probably the same amount of sleep taken regularly, minus the coffee, would have kept Mr. Roe in good working condition indefinitely or till age set in; or if he could have taken naps at intervals during the day, he might have stood the strain. Josephine said that the impression that Napoleon slept only three or four hours in the twenty-four was erroneous; that he refreshed himself with brief periods of sleep during business hours. Napoleon seems to have been able to sleep at will. He said his mind was like a bureau, and he could shut up its various drawers and go to sleep when he pleased.

Achilles had given him to choose a life short and glorious, or long and uneventful. There is no evidence that he shortened his life by overwork, and it is a serious question whether any man has a right to do this. A valuable man like Mr. Roe is always in demand, and will be continually tempted and urged to load himself down so heavily with various obligations and enterprises that a little thing apparently will cause his overladen bark to founder and go down.—New York Advocate.

THE CIGARETTE VICTIM.

The cigarette victim is becoming a daily feature of the current news now. It took the filthy little rolls longer than we expected to perfect their work, but they are now making a brave showing, which may be expected to increase rapidly as the constitutions of the victims give way. It should not be forgotten by those contemplating this form of suicide that cigarettes owe much of their attractiveness and their daily effect to opium. The lower brands contain nothing worse than refuse tobacco and rubbish of various kinds, but they are soon succeeded by higher grades flavored with opium, and the smoker becomes an opium fiend before he knows it.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Out of every hundred patients I have charge of at the London Hospital, seventy of them owe their ill-health to alcohol. I do not say these seventy per cent were drunkards—to the excessive use.—Sir Andrew Clark, M. D.

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT,

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living

Much has been said about reducing the subscription price of the ADVOCATE. The only way in which a reduction can be brought about is by an increase in the number of subscribers. In order to facilitate this result, we make the following offer: Until further notice we will take new subscriptions at the rate of $1 for eight months. When seven thousand five hundred new names have been sent in at this rate with the cash, we will extend the time four months longer, thus reducing the price to $1 per annum. OBITUARIES.

THOMAS—Mrs. MATTIE G. THOMAS was born in Houston county, Ga., Sept. 12, 1843; joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of sixteen years, and lived a consistent Christian till on the morning of her death, which sad event occurred Feb. 13, 1899. She was united in marriage to N. Battle Toomss, in the State of Arkansas, on Aug. 23, 1866, with whom she lived happy till four years (previous), to a day, from the date of her death, her sainted husband was taken from her.

The Midway Church, of which she was a member, has sustained a very heavy loss; her pastor a warm friend and ardent supporter. She was an intelligent Christian—modest, unassuming. The good she did was, perhaps, felt more than seen. In a judicious way she was always helpful to her pastor. If anyone spoke complimentary of him, she made it convenient to inform him—a thing that a great many Christians do not think of. She was a regular attendant and a real worshiper at the preaching of the Word. By her genial and responsive face she actually aided her minister in delivering his message to the congregation.

God had a wise purpose in taking Sister Thomas from us, but it was indeed sad to part with her. The writer conducted her funeral in Delhi, and, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, a large crowd was present, both at the church and the grave. She leaves a brother in Georgia and a sister in Texas, and a host of friends, to mourn her loss. "Lift up your heads, O ye gates; and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in." Yea, the King of glory came in, and flooded her soul with his gleam. She is gathered unto God. May the Lord, who comforteth those who are bereaved, pour forth his divine consolation upon the grief-stricken ones in this time of need!

Her pastor, JAS. M. MARTIN.
Floyd, La.

PORTIS—MARGARET MARIA PORTIS, wife of Rev. J. C. Portis, of the Congregational Methodist Church, was born in Newton county, Miss., near Union, Feb. 23, 1841; was married to Rev. J. C. Portis, Sept. 27, 1860, and died at her home at Union, Miss., Feb. 21, 1899. She had lived in and around Union all her life; loved by all who knew her. She lived a sweet-spirited life, but did not attach herself to the church till about the year 1890, under the ministry of Rev. J. G. Cammack. She joined the M. E. Church, South; she lived a consistent life till death.

Just before the end came she gave full directions for burial, etc. "Don't hurry," was her request. So, on the evening of the twenty-third (her birthday), assisted by Rev. J. M. Bolen, pastor of the Congregational Methodist Church at Union, we laid her body to rest in the cemetery near Union, in the presence of loved ones and a host of friends. The universal belief is, "All is well with Sister Portis." She leaves three children (one son and two daughters), six grandchildren—all present when the end came.

Bro. Portis finds comfort in the gospel of Christ, which, for years, he has preached to others. Looking far beyond this dark hour, he has a glimpse of glory. Press on, dear brother, and you shall meet her. God bless the bereaved ones, and bring them all home at last!

R. S. GALE, Pastor.

BLACKBURN—ARTHUR BLACKBURN was born in Belfast, Ireland, Nov. 6, 1825; died at Newton Station, Newton county, Miss., Feb. 6, 1899; married to Margaret Collville in Drumbo Church (Belfast, Ireland), Nov. 30, 1847; emigrated to Vicksburg, Miss., in 1848; remained there two years, then removed to Scott county, Miss., where he remained one year; then to Newton county, where he lived till death. He was reared a member of the Episcopal Church. There being no church of that order in Newton county, he joined first the Congregational Methodist Church; afterward joined the M. E. Church, South.

Bro. Blackburn for years was a member of this circuit (Decatur), where he has many kindred and loved ones. A few years since he moved his membership to Newton Station. I never knew him, never saw him, till I laid his form in the grave; yet I feel that I do know him through his many friends here. He lived a consistent Christian life; was ready when the end came; had not lived his life in vain. At Conehatta, surrounded by friends and loved ones, on the twenty-fifth of February, 1899, we tenderly placed his body in the grave. His aged wife, children and grandchildren mourn, but not without hope. They, too, are passing on in his footsteps. God's grace is sufficient for them.

R. S. GALE.

TURNER—Mrs. CAROLINA MATILDA TURNER (nee Kinchen) was born in Livingston parish, La., Nov. 14, 1817, and died at Denham Springs, La., Jan. 22, 1899, in her eighty-second year. In 1834 she was married to W. H. Pendleton. To them were born four children, two of whom survive her. She was afterwards left a widow, and was married the second time to Cyrus Turner, of Massachusetts. This union was blessed with five children. Two of these preceded her to the other world, thus leaving five children, thirty-three grandchildren, and eight great-grandchildren to mourn her departure. Most of her life was spent in East Feliciana parish, where she has a host of friends. Early in life she united with the M. E. Church; was happily converted, and always had a bright Christian experience.

Sister Turner was a Methodist of the old type. She could relate many wonderful things incident of early Methodism, of the good old camp meetings and glorious revivals seventy years ago. She endeavored to "rear up her children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." She "endured afflict on" with patience and Christian fortitude; spent much time in prayer and devotion; had a faith that took "no denial at the throne of grace." When the summons came she was ready. May her God comfort the broken-hearted, and may her Christ be their Savior!

J. M. ALFORD.

CORKERN—Mrs. INEZ M. CORKERN (nee Carter) was born at Franklinton, La., Nov. 2, 1881, and departed this life at Denham Springs, La., Feb. 7, 1899. Two years ago she was married to Stephen D. Corkern, of Washington parish, La. To them was born one child, which survives her. She was the daughter of Hon. Printess B. Carter and J. C. Carter. Her mother preceded her to the better land several years. She was a model character; identified herself with the cause of Christ; became a member of the Methodist Church under the pastorate of Rev. W. H. Benton, at Franklinton, La., before her marriage, in which she remained a consistent member, devoted and earnest worker, until her death. As she had lived, so she died; yea, in an enduring and ever-abiding faith in her Lord and Master. She was called away just as she was entering a life of usefulness, filled with hope and ambition to live for others and for the glory of God. She was gentle and amiable, daily exhibiting in her life the noblest Christian virtues. She was loved by all who knew her; was an obedient child, and proved to be a devoted wife. God bless and comfort the heart-broken husband, the grief-stricken father, step-mother, and relatives. And may they so live as to meet her in heaven!

J. MARTIN ALFORD.

Dallas, Texas, paper please copy.

McLEOD—Another good woman gone. After a short illness Sister ELIZABETH A. MCLEOD (nee McGraw) died Jan. 19, 1899. She was an Alabamian by birth, but came with her parents from Atauga county to Mississippi at about ten years of age (1815). She professed religion while young; afterwards joined the M. E. Church, South, in which she was an humble follower of the "Man of Galilee" as long as she lived.

Sister McLeod will be greatly missed at church. She was always at her place when circumstances would at all admit. She was a faithful, obliging neighbor; a wife unswerving in her duties as a companion; a careful and painstaking mother, seasoning her instructions to her children with prayer, all of whom, six in number, live to remember a loving mother's counsels except one.

She was happily married to J. Murry McLeod, Nov. 25 1858, whom she leaves to sorrow, not as those who have no hope, but leaning on the promises of God, expecting to meet the companion of his youth where "all tears will be wiped away." So mote it be.

D. W. BANE.

GROUT—Died on Thursday, Feb. 9, 1899, at the residence of Mrs. A. D. Ewing, Brookhaven, Miss., ROBERT EVERETT, son of Edward Everett Grout and Mattie Dennett Ewing.

Just one brief year had the little presence brought joy and sunshine to the home of the adoring parents, when God sent a messengar to bear the pure little soul back to its heavenly home. The bright blue eyes have closed to open no more on this earth, the merry smile has been forever stilled, the beautiful bud has been transplanted to grow and blossom in the garden of our Father's love. It is hard indeed to give him up yet.

If we could push ajar the gates of life,
And stand within and all God's workings see,
We could interpret all the doubt and strife,
And for each mystery find a key!

But not to-day. Then be content, poor heart!
God's plans, like lilies, pure and white, unfold;
We must not tear the tender leaves apart;
Time will reveal the calyxes of gold.

And if, through patient toil, we reach the land
Where tired feet, with sandals loosed, may rest,
When we shall clearly see and understand,
I think we will say, "God knew the best!"

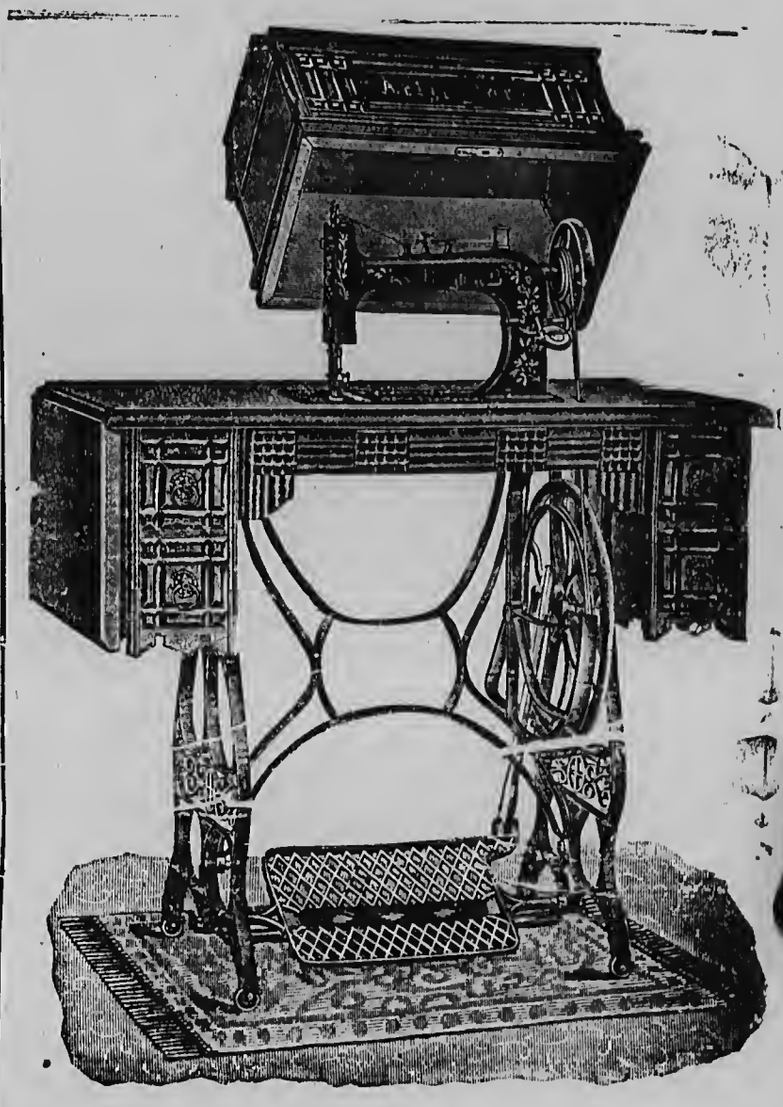
New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great length; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

General Otis is rapidly carrying out his plans. The insurgent forces have been divided and demoralized. Americans are following up their advantages so quickly that Aguinaldo's men have not time to recover from one blow before another town has been attacked and captured.

The recent announcement of the British naval programme for the current year, showing an increase over the preceding year of $15,000,000, due entirely to increased building of new ships, serves to call attention afresh to rapid strides being made in naval armaments in Europe.

Prominent citizens of Washington are planning to get Admiral Dewey there on May 20. The Secretary of the Navy will be asked to authorize the admiral to accept an invitation from the city of Washington to be the guest of honor at the peace festival which is to be held there the latter part of May. The request will be submitted to the President.

Senor Silvela, Spanish premier and minister of foreign affairs, has had a conference with the French ambassador regarding the liberation of Spanish prisoners in the hands of the Filipinos. Spain, it is reported, has determined to protest to the civilized world against the attitude of the Americans in hindering the efforts of General Rios, Spanish commander in the Philippines, to liberate the prisoners. The government will demand a credit for the payment of the interest on the Cuban debt.

A riot in Havana, Saturday night, between the police and the populace resulted in the wounding of a large number of persons, some of them seriously. A disturbance of this kind has been feared for some time past. The situation in the Cuban capital has been growing more strained from day to day, with two ugly features to still further stir up riot and mob violence—the quarrel between Gomez and the so-called Military Assembly, and the weakness or ignorance of the police in dealing with mobs.

Under a clause of the Treaty of Peace the United States is obliged to pay the claims of American citizens for losses sustained in Cuba by acts of the Spaniards. The number of claims already filed call for about $20,000,000, the claimants being largely naturalized Cubans. It is probable that a commission will be appointed to adjust these claims. The claims are, many of them, extravagant, and will be cut down. Two widows ask $100,000 and $75,000 respectively for the killing of their husbands, and $100,000 for a son. Most of the claims relate to sugar destroyed or seized.

At the Capitol.

I am in my seventy-third year, and for fifty years I have been a great sufferer from indigestion, constipation and biliousness. I have tried all the remedies advertised for these diseases, and got no permanent relief. About one year ago, the disease assuming a more severe and dangerous form, I became very weak, and lost flesh rapidly. I commenced using Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir. I gained twelve pounds in three months. My strength and health, my appetite and my digestion were perfectly restored, and now I feel as young and vigorous as I ever did in my life.

DR BULL'S COUGH SYRUP CONQUERS croup. Every mother should know this and always keep this wonderful remedy handy.

JOB EARNED HIS TITLE BY GREAT SUFFERING. Had he flourished in these days, his recourse for consolation would not have been the company of three nagging friends, but a bottle of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL, which has a wonderful power to dissipate the inflammation, cool the feverishness, and completely cure boils and carbuncles.

SOCRATES died from a cup of poison administered by the hand of a friend. How many in this land have died by poisonous remedies given by friendly hands to combat diseases? It is quite a comfort to know that when giving DICKS' CHILLIFUGE there is not a drop of poison in a bottle full of this beneficent remedy.

THE DRUM BEAT

of consumption is a backing cough. It sounds a melancholy dirge in the march to the coffin. How many swell the ranks of this gloomy procession who could have been saved by a timely resort to the King of cures, Marsden's Balm.

HIS WILL.

If the dear Lord should send an angel down,
A seraph radiant in robes of light,
To do some menial service in our streets
As braying stone, we'll say, from morn till night—
Think you the faintest blush would rise
To mar the whiteness of his holy face?
Think you a thought of discontent would find
Within his perfect heart abiding-place?

I love to think the sweet will of his God
Would seem as gracious in a seraph's eyes
In the dark, miry, crowded lanes of earth
As in the ambrosial bowers of Paradise;
That those fair hands which lately swept the lyre
Would not against their lowly work rebel,
But as they ever wrought his will in heaven,
Would work it here as faithfully and well
—Anon.

OUR OPPORTUNITY.

The subject of education is engaging the attention of the world as never before. The question of every parent worthy of the name is, How can I give my child the best educational advantages? The State makes this answer, Give me your child, and he shall be educated, and an enlightened citizenship is the only charge we make. The church of Christ sees the breakers ahead—dangers threatening State and society—and the church says, Give me your child, and there will be an effort made to bring your child into harmony with the principles of our holy religion. "The true purpose of education is to cherish and unfold the seed of immortality already sown within us; to develop, to their fullest extent, the capacities of every kind with which the God who made us has endowed us."

The State may have the money and the accomplished faculty, but it is not in the province of the State to teach religion. It remains for the church to furnish lofty ideals, the spiritual teachers—the open Bible, the social environments calculated to lessen the temptations of college life. The teacher must not only have an interest in the mental development of the student, but there must be a profound solicitude for the student's spiritual progress.

The Christian college emphasizes character and the duties of Christian citizenship. If the greed of materialism is to be checked, the liquor power destroyed, the ballot-box made sacred, lofty character the goal of ambition, the Christian college must be placed on basis of permanent prosperity.

OUR ABILITY.

Louisiana has vast resources of wealth. With much of her soil as fertile as the famous valley of the Nile, with her inviting sugar farms, the productive rice farms, the immense cotton plantations, the forest of oak and pine, the Louisianian has everything to create hope, industry, and prosperity.

The Methodist Church having a membership of over 30,000, many of the members enjoying comfortable fortunes, while a large number are able to contribute liberally, and still leave something for a "rainy day," we have a right to expect our people to make the twentieth century movement mark an inspiring era in the history of education in the bounds of the Louisiana Conference.

Let there be the widow's mite, those sums ranging from $1 to $25,00. It is not a question of ability, but one of willingness to honor Christ with our substance.

OUR NEEDS.

As we have to compete with State schools, we must furnish as broad curriculum and a faculty as equally competent. Centenary's faculty will compare favorably with that of any State institution of learning. Last year, when the celebrated Tyne wanted a Greek professor, the trustees elected Rev. Thomas Carter. This noted scholar had been at Centenary for several years on a small salary. Why the small salary? Because our college has no large endowment to supplement the small tuition fees. Centenary has had some true friends, but there ought to have been one hundred where there have been ten. Let us have $100,000 endowment for Centenary College. We need it. Who will be the first to start the movement of a permanent endowment? We could use five thousand dollars in building a spacious dining-hall, and making other necessary improvement on our buildings. Let some generous friend give us this amount.

To the members and laymen of the Louisiana Conference: I appeal to you in the name of Christ, whom we love, to help us to place Centenary College on a basis of permanent and glorious success. "Education alone can conduct us to that enjoyment which is at once best in quality and infinite in quantity."

I. W. COOPER.

CARING FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

The helplessness of the orphan children in Cuba must appeal to every sympathetic heart. A consecrated layman, Mr. E. E. Hubbard, of New York, has been so impressed by their need that he has gone at his own expense to open an orphan asylum. He has connected himself with our church, and is in fullest sympathy with our work and workers. Mr. Hubbard is a graduate of Ann Arbor University, a gentleman of ability and culture, and was for several years a teacher in a government school in Japan, where, as he had opportunity, he tried to bring the students to Christ. With the true missionary spirit, with a heart full of tender sympathy, he is now in a position to save hundreds of these little ones, body and soul.

We give below a recent letter from Mr. Hubbard, which shows how this work is opening up and what are its needs:

"The municipal authorities have agreed to put in repair, at a cost of six or seven hundred dollars, a house large enough to accommodate one hundred children, and turn it over to us, and we are to pay $30 a month rent for it. They want us to take at the start 70 or 80 boys from the overcrowded asylum here, and the number will probably soon be increased to a full hundred. Major Ives tells us that the United States Government will supply us with rations and medicines. Possibly we can get cots and bedding from the War Department, but the Major could not promise that.

"We believe that the Lord wants us to take up this work, and we are going forward trusting that he will supply all our needs through the voluntary contributions of his people. I have $300 that I can use where it is needed, and when that is gone, I am sure more will come.

"We shall need a large amount of light clothing for boys from ten to twelve years old, bedding, towels, soap, etc. As soon as I find out more definitely what we shall need in this line, I will let you know. I think we shall arrange to have supplies sent in care of some city official. Money contributions ought to be sent to Bro. H. W. Baker, who will act as treasurer.

"You will please call the attention of our people to this work and its needs through the church papers, or through such other means as you think best.

"For a time, or until the Cuban assistants can be thoroughly trained to the work, I shall need two American lady assistants—one who will have the oversight of the mending, sewing, washing, bed-making, sweeping, dish-washing and nursing, a lady of much experience, and if she is a trained nurse, so much the better; and another who can take charge of the educational feature of the work. She ought to be able to play the organ or piano, and teach the boys how to sing; and it would be a great advantage if she had some training or experience as a kindergarten teacher. This leads me to say that we shall need a supply of kindergarten materials, or something of that nature, to entertain and instruct the children.

"Of course, these assistants will have to come, as I have come, at their own expense and without salary, except as their friends or the church will furnish the means. On account of the climate, it would be an advantage to have one who has lived in the southern part of the country.

"Besides having a general oversight of the work, I can look after bathing the boys and their personal cleanliness, and superintend the preparation of the meals and the gardening, etc. We shall try to find suitable Cuban assistants in the persons of needy widows, or husband and wife who have no one dependent upon them; but I feel it would be too much for me to attempt this work with only native helpers. Please see what can be done in this matter as soon as possible. I think the house will be ready in about two weeks, and the boys ought to be put into it at once. We went through the asylum where the boys are now this afternoon. The Sisters are doing all they can for them, but from being overburdened with 175 where they have room for only 100, and from lack of resources and lack of knowledge of sanitary acquirements, they come very far short of giving the boys what they ought to have. A few weeks' delay would undoubtedly mean the loss of more than one of these precious little lives. It was pitiful indeed to see the little wasted forms lying on the cots, and to feel that the needed remedies, sufficient and proper care, could not be administered at once.'

May the Great Head of the church, whose compassionate heart is ever moved by earth's sorrow and suffering, cause our people to heed this cry for help! Let us give the Lord of his own, and let us give quickly.

WALTER R. LAMBUTH.

TEMPERANCE.

Every white ribboner throughout the land, and all of the noble brothers-in-law of the W. C. T. U. in our loved America, must be rejoicing with exceeding gladness over the news that our chieftain, Frances E. Willard, has been so greatly honored by the Legislature of her home State, Illinois. The bill to provide for a statue of Miss Willard in Statuary Hall, at the National Capitol, Washington, passed the Senate by a unanimous vote, and passed the House with few dissenting votes, and has been signed by the governor.

How glad and grateful we are that since men have not thought to accord this distinction to any woman heretofore, our beloved leader should be the first to receive this noble recognition of an illustrious citizenship! The men of Illinois have honored themselves, their State and all womanhood in this deed. We must feel now that when our St. Frances takes her place, even in marble or bronze, among that company of the great, the dawn of the twentieth century is indeed brightening along the eastern horizon of time, and will bring to the world a fulfillment of prophecy, a fruition of hope, and the glad inauguration of "sweeter manners, purer laws" for all mankind.

We have further cause for thankfulness and encouragement in the final outcome of the Army bill amendment, which provided for the prohibition of liquor selling in the army and all military posts. The amendment originated in the House, and was passed by an almost unanimous vote. In the Senate it was threatened with defeat, as the committee having it in hand reported it unfavorably, and offered a substitute allowing the sale of beer in the "canteens" and elsewhere. But a great pressure was brought to bear upon the senators from different sources, especially from many of their constituents, and the amendment passed. There were members who favored this action from the first, and would have voted for it without a doubt, but a reply that one senator made to Rev. W. F. Crafts, when the latter expressed appreciation and pleasure concerning this victory for sobriety, gives the real key to the situation: "Oh, we didn't do it because you asked us. We have heard from home." Our white ribboners all over the country well know the meaning of that "hearing from home," and numbers of them had a hand in the "hearing." Let the faint-hearted have more courage henceforth, and be not slow to use their influence, at least, in getting the power of constituencies trained upon the votes of their congressmen, so that laws may be written upon our statute books "for God and home and native land."

Now, it is in order for the earnest, grateful temperance men and women of these United States to write their sincere thanks to the men who voted for this righteous measure. We hope they will not fail to let our law makers know that we watch them all the time, look to them, and rejoice when they take any step forward and upward for the good of our common country and the race.

Secretary Long has issued an order abolishing the sale and use of beer on all ships of the navy. He says he did this at the request of the officers in command, and for the sake of the boys and young men who have enlisted on the men-of-war. This is a great victory also. On land and sea the white banner of temperance will evermore float by the side of the "Stars and Stripes." Now, then, both in the army and navy, "three cheers for the red, white and blue!"

ARCADIA DISTRICT.

MR EDITOR: I have just finished my first round on the Arcadia district, except Arcadia. Am here next Saturday and Sunday. Bro. Davies has a firm hold upon our people here, and the outlook for a prosperous year is encouraging. He has sent in a good part of his missionary assessment.

I commenced my first round at Calhoun first Sunday in January, where Bro. Wafer is commencing his second year, we trust, under favorable conditions.

Next charge visited was Lisbon and Summerfield, where the energetic B. H. Sheppard is serving his third year. He has secured a long list of subscribers to the ADVOCATE, and has a large part of his missionary assessment in hand. The outlook is good.

On my way home I take in the Simsboro quarterly meeting, where studious, ever-willing and devoted H. W. Ledbetter is serving his second year. His people love him, and he loves them. Success will follow.

Next we are on the Vernon circuit, where the sturdy, easy-going W. A. Clark is serving his second year. He has a large circuit and a good people, and it is to be hoped that all church interests will be advanced.

On to Ruston, where we find the firm, quiet, steady-moving A. J. Nocentine with all his work well in hand, and his missionary assessment in full at this writing. We expect full reports from Ruston at Conference in Monroe.

Next I find myself on the Downsville circuit, with the tall, slender, scrawny, but never known to tire or falter in his work, Robt. W. Vaughan. He also is serving his second year. Had a good year in '98, and outlook is good for '99.

On to Farmerville, where I find the painstaking, investigating, everything connected with his work, Hyden B. Thomason, who has been well received, and expects to accomplish a good year's work.

On the first Saturday and Sunday in February I am with that true and tried, sweet-spirited, much-loved and lovable N. S. Cornell, on the Haynesville circuit, where the people are delighted with their pastor. All know what to expect in N. S. Cornell.

On my return I take in Homer, where is Rev. W. F. Henderson, who is the embodiment of brotherly love and good cheer, a first-class man, and has good people to serve. Everything promising in that field.

Well, after this—zero, and ten days at home trying to keep warm.

Next Lanesville, where Charlie Staples is serving for the third year. He is comfortable in his new parsonage, built last year. He is not the man to stay much in a parsonage. He is much on the move, in the interest of his work, and I look for the best year of the three. Charlie and his good wife are happy over their new baby boy that I was instructed to call John Wesley when I baptized him. May he be in the succession!

After all the above I find myself in the Valley circuit with Bro. H. Armstrong, whose people are delighted with him. His is a railroad circuit of four appointments—all near the railroad stations. His work has a saw-mill that cuts 100,000 feet of lumber per day. A part of the company are Methodists. They have built a church, and Bro. Armstrong lives at the mill, where everybody loves him, and he will accomplish much for the Master.

From there I go to the Flat Lick circuit, a new work made out of a part of the Minden charge, and one appointment from Valley (Bellview), and Evergreen, formerly of the Haynesville circuit. There I have Floyd A. Vaughan, a local preacher, young, active, and energetic, already got a hold on the people, and the people say that he will succeed. He has organized classes and appointed class leaders. Why not every preacher do this? It will pay; try it.

Now, I drop back to Minden, where our transfer from Baltimore Conference, Courtland P. Smith (the only "Smith" in the Conference, and I am glad that I have got him) is situated. Well, he is full of snap. In two months after he arrives all his collections secured, all salaries full and ahead, the church moving up and on. May all the preachers and people in the district catch the inspiration!

Next comes Bienville, where Bro. J. M. Franklin has charge, with his keen eye on all the field. He has been well received, and will succeed in doing much good.

From there on to Gansville, where Bro. H. M. Banks has been busy in his work. He has started well; knows how to use the pruning-knife to purge the church; spiritually-minded, preaching good sermons, loving everybody, but not afraid to do what ought to be done in his work.

Now, after three weeks away from home, except three days and a half, I rest for a while, hold Arcadia Quarterly Conference and Preachers' Meeting, and rejoice that I serve as good and true preachers and people as can be found in Louisiana. North Louisiana is blessed with some of the truest laymen I have ever known. May God help us all to do our duty, and witness the best year in all our history!

B. T. CREWS.

P. S.—This may be an item of news: A former member of our Conference, but now a member of the M. E. Church and Louisiana Conference, has been sent up here as a missionary in the bounds of Arcadia district. They have no church nor a single member in this country. We have six thousand Southern Methodists in this district, and yet our big sister of even age must send a missionary among us, and a man that, at the last Conference he attended before leaving us, was complained of by his presiding elder, and barely passed muster. Selah! What shall we expect next?

NOTICE.

To the Pastors and Sunday-school Workers of the North Mississippi Conference—

DEAR BRETHREN: The watchword for our church work on all lines this year is, "Forward." Particular emphasis is being put upon Christian education, and special efforts are being made for the promotion of this great interest. But while thus engaged, it should be borne in mind that the Sunday-school is an essential factor in this service.

When we seriously consider the true purpose and great possibilities of our Sunday-school work, we can not but be impressed with the fact that it deserves, and should have, our most diligent watch-care and earnest effort, with a view to greater results than hitherto attained. Therefore, let us devote ourselves with renewed ardor and activity to the study and advancement of this cause within our bounds during this year.

According to the statistical reports made at the last session of our Conference, we had as follows: Pastoral charges, 140; churches, 522; Sunday-schools, 470; church members, 45,047; Sunday-school members, 24,966. Thus we see that there were 52 fewer Sunday-schools than churches, and 20,081 less in numbers in the Sunday-schools than there were members of the church. Of the 140 pastoral charges, 58 reported as many schools as churches; 31 reported 38 in the aggregate more schools than churches, while 51 reported 96 churches without a school. Only one charge made no report. There were 29 charges which made no report of Children's Day collection.

With these facts before us, and with a consciousness of obligation upon us for the enlargement of this all-important work in sphere and efficiency, let us, as co-laborers together with God, adopt the following as our aim for this A. D. 1899:

1. A Sunday-school in every church or congregation

2. A competent superintendent for every school.

3 A trained and qualified teacher for every class.

4 An ample supply of lesson literature, a circulating library, and Children's Day observance in every school.

5. The Holy Spirit using all for the glory of the Master in the conversion and spiritual edification of men, women, and children.

The Sunday-school Board continues the offer of $1 for every $2 raised by the Sunday-schools for libraries; also to aid needy schools in procuring Bibles and lesson literature.

Children's Day programmes will be sent to the pastors in due time, without order.

As your fellow-laborer for Christ and souls, I am at your command for any information or service that I can render.

Yours in the work,

G. W. BACHMAN.
Sunday-school Agent.

NOTICE.

To the Presiding Elders of the Mississippi Conference—

DEAR BRETHREN: Permit me to call your attention to the following extract taken from the report of the Joint Board of Finance, made at the last session of our Conference.

"This Board calls the attention of our presiding elders to ¶ 327. The moneys collected for Bishops must be sent to the treasurer of the Joint Board of Finance. Hereafter this Board will not recognize receipts from the Agents of the Publishing House. The funds must go through the proper channel."

I call your attention to this, thinking it may have escaped your attention, and to avoid any confusion in the future. Bro. W. M. Thornton, at Lake, Miss, is still our treasurer.

GEO. H THOMPSON,
Sec. Joint Board of Finance.

THE LAW OF LOVE.

BY R. C. TRENCH.

Make channels for the streams of love,
Where they may broadly run;
And love has overflowing streams
To fill them, every one,

But, if at any time we cease
Such channels to provide,
The very founts of love for us
Will soon be parched and dried.

For we must share if we would keep
That blessing from above.
Ceasing to give, we cease to have;
Such is the law of love.

FROM THE PARSONAGE.

I am the home of the Methodist itinerancy of Hard-times circuit, in Post-Oak Conference, and having many friends who I know would like to have a message from me, I am going to send you a few lines of my history for some eight or ten years past. I am not well cared for in my old age—a fact which will grieve some of my former tenants, for they took good care of me. I am slowly tumbling down. The marrow in my bones is thin, but I am still cheerfully giving partial shelter to my beloved children, and they say if they could get a little help from the people, they would fix me up, replace the gallery pillars which time (not Sampson) has pulled down, wash my face, and improve my general appearance—a thing much needed if we would have our Methodism respected.

I am a strong advocate of honest pride, and I am never so well pleased as when my master goes forth to his pulpit looking as well dressed and finished as any man to whom he may preach, and I whisper in his ear not to forget the text, "Cleanliness is next to godliness;" but I must say that in some cases he has not heeded as he should, and I hung my head in shame. But enough on this line.

Some ten years ago a grand, real good man was sent to my shelter, and I did welcome him with open doors and heart, for he was all that I could wish for as God's servant. He had nine blessings, counting his dear wife and six children. He enjoyed these blessings, too, the six days as well as the seventh, which is more than I can say of some that followed. Well, they were considerate of me, and never were thoughtless or unfeeling in their treatment of me. When, after four years, they were taken away, and I heard their dear voices no more, oh, I was so lonely! They respected my pride and left me with a clean face and neat appearance.

My next tenants were a dear old brother and his good wife, who constituted his second blessing. They were kind and appreciative of my meager accommodations. They, too, were called away, but left me with an all-over bath and an inviting appearance for my next occupants, who came in with such a rush and commotion that I was overwhelmed, for there were a number of the children, and they were a noisy family; but not in many years have I heard so much religion talked, prayed and sung as by that family. They seemed brimful and running over all the time. They, too, were glad of my shelter, and offered to repair my damaged parts, if the material was furnished; but it was not, and they left me as they found me, but considerably the worse for wear. I do not remember ever to have felt as lonely as I did when their happy, singing voices were all gone. Oh, how they could sing, "Old-time religion, it's good enough for me!"

They were succeeded by a family so quiet and indifferent to church duties, so far as the young members of the home were concerned.

My next master came in with such a sweet, pretty young wife. She was refined and elegant in her manners, but she did not take the interest in home affairs that she should, and I blushed at my neglected appearance. She, too, was unwilling to bear the burdens of motherhood which at the same time is the crown of womanhood.

It is the duty of every minister's wife to make the parsonage look its best, and present a nice appearance, if our Methodism (specially in towns) is to remain at par; but I must say from sad experience, but in all kindness and love, that this is not always the case. In the system of regular moving they forget sometimes that it is their home, and should be so cared for. The minister's wife should take interest in the Parsonage Society, and urge and help the good women in everything they undertake for such as myself.

Just here I think of a nice parsonage larger than myself, which chanced to be occupied by a minister with a young family. They had no special use for the parlor (?) (strange to say in a town of 5000 thousand population), and what do you think they did? Rented it to a family who cooked and ate in it all the year, and when, after Conference, the next minister came in, he found the matting, put down barely one year before by the ladies themselves, ruined, and had to be taken up; also the wall re-papered in order that there might be a respectable reception-room—a thing as necessary in every parsonage as the pastor's study.

Now, was not this an outrage? I assure you, the "Ladies' Aid" of that church were not encouraged to buy and work for the parsonage to have it so abused and ill-treated. I hope, dear children, that you will be careful about such matters.

But to return to myself. When this couple left me people came and peered through my windows in curiosity, having heard of the shameful condition in which I was left. Everything was disarranged; not a floor swept, and the dishes left on the table just as they had been used. When the new pastor came and saw me, he refused to bring his family to such a place, and moved elsewhere.

What would dear Bro. Christian Keener think and feel if he could know of this neglect? I am now the home of a noble young man and his faithful wife, who are doing all they can for me, and I begin to look like a home should.

Dear children, I have rambled over these years with a few memories, and now I close with a prayer that you will work and care for the preachers' homes, for they deserve this consideration. PARSONAGE.

"SUCCESS VS. FAILURE."

We not only have different environments, but also different classes of talent, and then several talents in different proportions. We would judge from some people's statements that it was a crime not to have all the talents in the greatest degree. Like Procrustes and his iron bedstead, they are the standards of all excellence, and all who do not just as they do, and accomplish just what they do, are weaklings and unnecessary factors in the great work.

But our heavenly Father has informed us in his Holy Word that he is the author of all classes and degrees of talent. (Read I. Cor. xii.) He says all gifts are by the same spirit. Whether it be wisdom, faith, working miracles, or whatever it be, it is the gift of God. And our blessed Lord has given us the parable of the talents—one, two, and five. So we must accept our place in the church as given us by our heavenly Father, with the assurance that it takes all these different classes and degrees of talents to complete the body of Christ. The head can not say to the feet, nor the eye to the ear, "I have no need of you," for one can not do the work of the other. The body is not complete without all the parts, and we are told that the part that may seem to us to be more feeble is necessary; not hanging on for its own benefit, a kind of burden to the stronger or more successful members, but actually a necessary member. If any member of the body be absent or crippled, so it can not perform its very small function, the whole body suffers loss. And it seems that our itinerant system, in its connectionalism, is wonderfully adapted to the divine plan, the working and developing the great body of Christ—a body in parts, yet members one of another, so closely united that if one member suffers, all suffer with it; and if one member be honored, all the members rejoice with it. We are told that there should be no schism in the body. The big head should not be used to abuse, crush, or crowd out the little feet; the big hand should not be used to blacken the dim eye, nor bruise the dull ear, but to the contrary. "Ye that are strong bear the infirmities of the weak," and each esteem other better than themselves. Because the great talent finds itself in the environment of success, it should not berate the little talent that, perchance, finds itself in the environment of failure, but the strong should sympathize with and help the weak. "Weep with those that weep, and rejoice with those that do rejoice."

Our system can well adjust the preacher to the charge. For instance: A charge is doing nicely in the spiritual interest, but is far behind in financial work. They need a preacher with a talent to bring up collections, and if the collections are usually in full, but the charge is growing formal and cold, spiritually, they need a revivalist; and if they are in a disorganized state, but are well indoctrinated, they need the special talent of a pastor; and if they are well organized and working smoothly, but are getting shaky on doctrines, they need a theologian; and so on, each charge with the preacher that will specially tone them up in that that they are most wanting in.

Our system is beautifully adjustable, not only in the classes of talent, but in the degrees and strength of talent also. For instance: If a charge is well up, financially, but is getting a little indifferent, spiritually, they need a revivalist, but a one-talented revivalist can do their work; if the charge is in good shape with its collections, but is considerably run down, spiritually, they need a two-talented revivalist; if the charge is getting along nicely with its collections, but is all gone to the bad, spiritually, they need the five-talented revivalist; and if, on the other hand, a charge is getting along nicely in its spiritual interest, but the collections are a little uncertain, a one-talented collector will do their work. If, however, the spiritual interest is good, but the collections drag very slowly, they need a two-talented collector; if their spiritual interest is good, but is almost impossible to raise their collections, they need the five-talented collector; but if the financial talent is continuously sent to charges where the financial interest is in good condition and always in full, and the great revivalist is constantly shifted where the spiritual interest is good. Each class of preachers will begin to think that if all the other preachers would adopt the plans by which he works, they would all be the success he is, while he is really only half a success—that is, a success in only one line of work, and part of that attributable to his environments, and he will be fortunate if he does not grow to think that his special class of work is the great thing needful, and he develops to be a crank, rides a hobby, and probably gets crusty and sour, and the churches constantly served by one class of talent develop one-sidedly, become freaks of deformity, and are subjects of ridicule. But if it be said that the great talents of any class can not be sent to poor mission works, well, I would ask, Why? If it be alleged there is not a living there for them, I answer that men of as large families as they have have been serving those charges; and if a one-talented man can live there, surely a five-talented man ought to, particularly if the talents are of the financial class. Surely the economy of grace would be to send the greatest talents where they are needed most. But it will be seen that all talents are largely subject to their environments, and the so-called great financial talents dread to undertake the unpromising places, for the results would be largely the same that they had been there before. But if it is asked, What about the well-rounded men, who have all classes of talents in the greatest degree, I answer: They exist only in fancy. Our heavenly Father has planned it differently. "Shall the thinly formed say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus?"

Brethren, let us find our place in the church of the living God, and by his grace do the best we can, and trust him for results, and with brotherly love weep with those that weep, and rejoice with those that do rejoice, and by and by, when heavan sings harvest home, go rejoicing together, carrying our sheaves with us.

J. H. SMITH.

DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

MR. EDITOR: I do not wish to stick myself up as a target to be shot at, but, as there has been much said of late in regard to our domestic missions, I wish to say a few words. Two years ago I served a work which had the small sum of seventy-five dollars appropriated to it by our Board of Domestic Missions. In the bounds of that circuit are Methodists who are worth thousands of dollars. They have found out about this appropriation business. I fully believe that if they knew there was but ten dollars appropriated to it, that many of them would hide themselves behind it, and take it for granted that when the Conference meets the preacher will be paid something to make up what they fail to do. Many of them will look you in the face and ask you, "How much will the Conference pay you?" Many of them will say to the stewards when he presents his claim to them, "He (the preacher) will be paid when Conference meets." So things drag along from year to year. Some of our best people of this charge feel they are discounted by being partially supported by a Mission Board. I have heard them talk along all these lines. I was called before the Board of Domestic Missions one year ago. I said emphatically that I did not believe that this work would ever be developed with this pitiful appropriation to it, and asked for it to be taken off last year. I served Marietta circuit with seventy-five dollars appropriated to it. I made the same statement to my presiding elder that I did to the Board. He said I was right. The appropriation was taken off. My people seem delighted that they are expected to stand alone, self-supporting, and now I meet with one other trouble. Around me on three sides are circuits, some of which are far more wealthy than Marietta circuit, and those circuits have appropriations, and those preachers are perfect heroes, and need every dollar they get, and their families need it, and so does my own; but the question is, Will these circuits ever be developed? Now, my trouble is, when I put my domestic mission claim before my people, and am forced to explain what it is for, they tell me, "Let them support their own preacher like we do." Will some kind brother tell me what to say? W. R. WILLIAMS.

"KICKING ITINERANT" KICKED.

In the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, of March 9, a brother signing himself as above gets after the secretaries with a sharp stick because of the delay in the publishing of the Annual Conference Minutes. His cause is a just one, and calls for an explanation from those charged with this trust, which, fortunately, it is easy to give. It is evident, though, that the justness of his cause is only exceeded by the profoundness of his ignorance.

In the first place, the secretaries are not, as he affirms, "remunerated for their arduous labors." I have been doing the statistical work for a number of years, and I have yet to receive the first farthing for my services. Who among us has ever heard of the Annual Conference agreeing to raise a fund to pay the secretaries (they sometimes take up a collection for the sexton), or even by a vote of thanks call attention to their "arduous labors?"

Now, mark you, the secretaries do not ask this. They are only doing their just part of the work of the Conference, and that is no more than is asked of many other laymen and preachers who serve on the various boards in responsible places.

That Dr. Sawyer, as editor of the Minutes, may make a few dollars out of the advertisements, may be possible, but, then, who would be small enough to begrudge him that? (See Luke x, 7.)

In the second place, the secretaries are not responsible for the publishing of the Minutes. Their work is done when they have put the necessary information in the hands of the editor of the Minutes, who, in this case, is the secretary of the Conference.

In regard to the delay: It is due to several causes which Dr. Sawyer will, no doubt, explain, if he thinks best.

Now, in regard to the editor of the Minutes: As I am the author of the resolution that brought him into existence, I want to say just here that the sole object was that we might get the Minutes at the earliest possible date. The original plan was to so word the resolution that the secretary would be instructed to furnish him the necessary data, and then to further define the duties of editor; but, on account of the lengthy debate of a few days previous, I decided to avoid controversy and insure its passage by putting the resolution in the simple form in which it was acted upon, and leave it to the man elected to work out the details.

It was hoped by those who signed the resolution that the man elected would make all his arrangements for publishing the Minutes before the convening of the Conference, and by making his contracts with printers for a term of four years, cut down the cost of the work.

It seems to me that at the next Conference we should make provision for facilitating the work of the editor by requiring that all reports, resolutions, etc., be furnished in duplicate, one of them going to the editor of the Minutes, the other to the secretary; also requiring all statistical reports to be filed by noon of the second day of the Conference, and then forbidding any changes to be made. In this way the statistical tables could be turned over to the printer on the close of the Conference session.

It might also be well to, as is done in other Conferences, relieve the editor of the Minutes of all other work, and give him a table on the platform where he could better attend to his important and "arduous labors."

Respectfully, WM G. EVANS.

NEW ORLEANS CITY MISSION SOCIETY.

The Woman's City Mission Society of this city held its first quarterly meeting for the year at Carondelet Street Church, on Friday, March 17. It was what is called an "all-day meeting," beginning at 11 A. M., and closing at 4 P. M., with an intermission of two hours for lunch and social enjoyment.

The president, Mrs. E. A. Carre, presided with her usual dignity and grace. Reports from the various auxiliaries were presented.

The secretary, Miss Lizzie G. Wasson, presented a report giving a resume of the work of the society since its organization a year ago, calling special attention to Tchonpitoulas Mission.

Mrs. F. A. Lyons gave a talk concerning the "Educational Loan Fund," showing its purpose and the work it is accomplishing. Mrs. Florence Ross gave an account of the work of the recent Conference at Alexandria. Miss Mary Werlein presented her report as organizer. Dr. W. H. LaPrade talked upon the importance of parsonages. Mrs. Meekin, city missionary, presented an itemized report of her work for the quarter, the report showing her to have been abundant in labor.

Rev. E N. Evans and Rev. F. B. Clifford also took part in the programme. The exercises were interspersed with delightful music.

A toothsome luncheon was served in one of the rooms of the church. The social feature of the occasion was very enjoyable.

TO MEMBERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

During the closing hours of the late session of the Mississippi Conference, held at Hattiesburg, Miss., I was informed by Bishop Galloway that the Conference had passed a resolution requesting that I prepare for publication in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE the substance of the remarks made by me in open Conference (by permission of the brethren) relative to my early life, call and labors in the ministry. If left to my own judgment, this I would not do, as many in the audience that listened to my talk were fully acquainted with my forty years' service as an itinerant, and all knew of my physical disabilities, and all in full sympathy, while the unknown audience before whom I now appear will wonder why such valuable space in our Conference organ is devoted to personal reminiscences of a superannuated preacher. I find also a great difference between the permission of Bishop Galloway, "Make any remarks you choose," and the warning of all good editors, "Boil it down." Immediately after Conference I wrote to Bishop Galloway, offering to prepare an autobiography in full, with request that he edit such data that in his judgment would edify the ADVOCATE readers; but, owing to pressure of more important duties and expected absence from home, he regretted it would be impossible to undertake it. Since Conference I have been unsettled and incapacitated by care of my afflicted wife, and threatened loss of sight, from any attempt to prepare anything for publication; but, as Spring advances, I will try to comply with the Conference request, and have Bro. Black to eliminate any feature he may deem unsuitable for his paper. R. B. DOWNER.

It is very gratifying to receive the following encouraging reports:

Miss Mary Lee Farish, Sec, Capitol Street Auxiliary, W. F. M S., Jackson: "With much pleasure I write to you again. Regardless of the drawbacks of the year, we find at the close of our missionary year we made very good collections. We opened our mite-boxes at a missionary tea at Mrs. Sharkey's, and found $22. We made our ever-faithful recording secretary, Mrs. Enochs, a life member. We now have five, with 29 regular and 1 honorary. We raised during last quarter $37.20.

"We will have our regular monthly meeting Wednesday, and elect officers for the year. We have 10 subscribers to our Woman's Missionary Advocate, and 4 new subscribers to the Evangel.

"At our 'tea' Mrs. C. B. Galloway, Mrs. West, Mrs. Cavitt and Mrs. Sharkey had papers on our school work in China. After they were read questions were asked and each school discussed. All enjoyed it and were benefited.

"So many of the ladies expressed their regret at our tea that they did not read your article in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Many thanks for your kind words. All hope to have you with us very often in the future."

Mrs. Clara B. Drake, Bay St. Louis: "We held our anniversary meeting of the W. F. M. S. at the parsonage this afternoon (March 13). Quite a number were present. We had refreshments and a very delightful time. Re-elected officers and transacted a great deal of business."

We appreciate the kind invitation by Miss Sallie Smylie and Mrs. Scott Phillips, Vicksburg, to be present at the district meeting to convene at Port Gibson, March 31. Mrs. Phillips, the district secretary, wrote that the "Vicksburg auxiliary is hard at work, and will compete for the banner of the Conference." Rev. A. F. Watkins will preach and assist in the meeting. Miss Sallie Smylie is "anxious to meet as many members of the district as possible."

The Christian Life.

HE COULD NOT FORGET.

A captain of an ocean vessel, one day as his ship was speeding through the waters, saw a signal of distress some distance off. A glass was turned to the spot, and it was seen that there was only one man on a piece of wreck. To go to his rescue the ship would have to be stopped and turned back in her course, losing much time.

"No," said the captain, "some other vessel will pick him up." He speeded on, was in port in good time and was commended for his swift passage. But he could not get out of his mind the memory of that signal of distress out there on the wild seas, and the sight through the glass of that one man on the piece of wreck, left there to perish. By day and night that picture haunted him.

As we are hurrying on these busy days, do we see no signals of distress on life's broad sea? Do we hear no cries, no bitter wails from souls that are out on the angry waves? Do we heed the signals and hearken to the cries? Do we turn away from our business, our pleasure, our ease, our money-getting, our petty ambitions to rescue those souls that are perishing, or that are in sorrow? Or do we hurry on and say we have no time for these things, no time to save our brothers, no time to lift up fallen ones, no time to wipe away a tear? If we do not turn aside to help or save, may not our deepest sorrow in eternity be the memory of cries of distress unheeded? May not the visions of the perishing ones who called to us for help, and got no answer, whom we have left unhelped out on the wild waves, haunt us forever?—Mrs. C. H. Buchanan, in The Review of Missions.

We can never see this world in its true light unless we consider our life in it as a state of discipline, a condition through which we are passing to prepare us for another state beyond.—J. W. Alexander.

"He That is Warm Thinks All So."

Thousands are "cold" in that they do not understand the glow of health. This implies disordered kidneys, liver, bowels, blood or brain. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes "warm" because it gives all who take it perfect health.

GOD HELP ME TO RESIGN!

BY M. L. GUSTINE.

O! pure and snowy lids
Closed over violet eyes!
O! beauteous waxen hand
That on the still breast lies!

O! lips that erst did smile,
Robbed of their rich life-hue!
O! darling that could wile
My heart from all untrue!

Cold is thy marble brow;
Thy cheek, how cold and pale!
It is not strange my stricken heart
Should never cease to wail.

Ah! what can ere replace
The soul so pure and fair?
That ever sweetly bade me hope
When tempted by despair!

On all thy loving ways
My tried heart dwells with pain;
I almost long—rebellious thought!—
To have thee back again.

God help me to resign
My darling to her rest,
Feeling assured that she is safe
Within thy loving breast!

DISGUSTED.

I was visiting a family lately, and the preacher came to the house to spend a few hours. The weather was cold, and after supper we all gathered round a nice wood fire, thinking we were going to have a good time; but the preacher took a big chew of tobacco, and he would spit in the fire, and it would string down over the wood and looked so nasty I just got so sick I wanted to leave the room. The man of the house afterwards said he was disgusted with preachers; moreover that man needs the prayers of good people.

I love the Methodist Church and have been a member for twenty-seven years, but I never saw a Methodist preacher chewing tobacco before. I give the tenth of my income to the cause of Christ, but I will not give it to a preacher who uses tobacco, if I know it.

Brother, can't you give it up for Jesus' sake? It is impossible for you to have the good influence you should while you are defiling your bodies and disgusting people with your tobacco chewing. I pray God may soon send the day when we will have the right kind of a ministry, and none of our preachers will be so foolish as to use tobacco and set an example of such a hurtful and filthy habit before our young men and boys. METHODIST.

We invite special attention to our sewing machine offer. Take notice that the machine is sold under a guarantee. If, after a ten days' test, the machine is not found satisfactory, the money will be refunded.

A QUOTATION WORTH STUDYING.

"A church is not likely to find scriptural sermons unappetizing so long as its faith in the Bible is warm; only when that faith begins to cool does the church begin to grow clinical in its requirements. It has no longer a healthy spiritual appetite, but requires that its scriptural palate shall be piqued with all sorts of spices of artificial pulpit condiments."—New York Advocate.

There is a vast difference between character and reputation. Reputation is what men think we are; character is what God knows us to be. Reputation is seeming; character is being. Reputation is the breath of men; character is the breathing of the eternal God. One may for a time have a good reputation and a bad character or the reverse, but not for long. What is in will come out. It is impossible for any man long to play the hypocrite. No man falls suddenly, except in the eyes of his fellowmen. The man who falls has long been leaning in the eyes of God.—R. S. McArthur, D. D.

What more dost thou want when thou hast done a man a service? Art thou not content that thou hast done something conformable to thy nature, and dost thou seek to be paid for it? just as if the eye demanded a recompense for seeing, or the feet for walking.—Marcus Aurelius.

Praise is God's due. It is comely to celebrate his goodness, to extol his majesty, to magnify his excellence and to sound his glories. No more acceptable employment can engage mortal man. No sweeter music can charm God's ear. It is of the same purport and worth as the melody of heaven.—Presbyterian.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, Mansfield, La., March 16, 1899: "The outlook for this charge is hopeful. Congregation large for this place; good prayer meeting, well attended; both Senior and Junior Leagues doing good work; Senior League has the Missionary Library; foreign missionary assessment all forwarded to our Conference treasurer; domestic mission assessment all subscribed and being collected; pastor's salary paid in full to date; our parsonage property greatly improved, and we hope soon to begin needed repairs on our church. The college was never on a better basis, and never did better work than is now being done. A very decided increase in patronage since the meeting of our Conference here in December."

Rev. N. J. Roberts, Franklinton, La.: "While the condition of this charge is far from being satisfactory, some advances have been made, and we are still endeavoring to go forward. Our first quarterly meeting was held Feb. 2. Our presiding elder, Rev. R. W. Tucker, was present, looking after all of the interests of the church. He is proving the wisdom of Bishop Hargrove in appointing him to this responsible position in the church. The stewards made a liberal assessment for the support of their preacher. We have not had such a storm as some of our preachers have written about, but a steady breeze, wafting us favors of many kinds, and that breeze keeps stirring once in a while, bringing us tokens of Christian fellowship and good-will. Success to the ADVOCATE."

Rev. R. S. Isbell, Natchitoches, La., March 18, 1899: "We arrived here Jan. 3, and were cordially received by our brethren and friends. Glad to say, we are gaining friends all the time, and the people say the work is progressing. Have large congregations and interesting services at every service. Have received several into the church at Natchitoches and other appointments; several good and true men. We have no parsonage here, although we have had a church here for twenty years. I have bought a beautiful lot for a parsonage, paid the cash, and expect to have a parsonage during the year. My people are very much enthused, and the ladies of our church have gone to work with renewed energy. We are living in a very neat and handsome cottage, and comfortably fixed up in every way. We are encouraged to look forward to a glorious year all along the line. Expect to send you some subscriptions to the ADVOCATE soon. Will begin a protracted meeting in Natchitoches, April 1. Bro. T. B. Clifford will assist me. Expect a glorious meeting. More anon."

Rev. P. R. Knickerbocker, P. C., Crowley, La., March 20, 1899: "We have just closed a glorious meeting, Bro. H. D. Knickerbocker, of Weatherford, Texas, assisting me as evangelist. There were thirty-five professions of conversion and reclamation, and twenty accessions to the church by profession of faith. We have had since Conference twenty-five accessions by profession of faith and twenty-five by letter, making fifty accessions. We are planning to raise all of our Conference collections in April, and also a debt on the parsonage, so that we may have the coast clear in the Fall for commencing the building fund for our new church. We have added a hundred and forty chairs to the seating capacity of the house; now have a capacity of four hundred and ten. We need a new church that will seat at least six hundred and fifty. With God's help and the people's help we expect to begin the building next Fall. We now have a membership of three hundred and ninety. God is blessing us in all of our services. Sunday night service is a grand rally service in the church. We have a house crowded. Wednesday night from about 100 to 150 as regular attendants. More anon."

Rev. W. B. Van Valkenburgh, Winnfield, La.: "Our first Quarterly Conference has come and gone. Dr Parker presided to the satisfaction of all. He preached us three most excellent sermons, which were highly appreciated by our people, the town people being very favorably impressed with his services. I should not neglect to mention just here a special lecture on 'Our Duty to Our Newly-Acquired Possessions,' delivered at the court-house on the Monday morning after the Conference at the earnest solicitation of several of our best citizens. The Doctor 'knows how' both to instruct and entertain. On Sunday evening, with Miss Eva Machen, the talented daughter of our district judge (Hon. M. F. Machen), at the organ, the Doctor gathered the Sunday-school children around the instrument, and they sang with him (892),

'Around the throne of God in heaven
Thousands of children stand,'

the Doctor singing the chorus. It is needless to say that we raised our presiding elder's collection in full. By the by, I should like to say that if any of the brethren wish some good singing in their churches, that if they can secure the services of Miss Machen at the organ and the Doctor to do the singing, that they will have it at least; so our people here have conceded. We have added six new members up to date to the roll at this place, with as many more soon to follow. The prospects are bright, and this scribe is hopeful. Pray for us, brethren."

Rev. B. W. Lewis, Chunkey, Miss., March 18, 1899: "Our first Quarterly Conference was held at Suqualena. Our 'beloved' presiding elder was on hand, and preached two splendid sermons, which we enjoyed very much. We like his plan of carrying on the business of the Conference. Every item of interest was looked after with the greatest of care. The assessment made upon this work by the district stewards for the district parsonage was paid, and we are in hopes that we will have the same success with the other assessments. I know that if the preacher and people will come as near looking after every interest entrusted to their care as he who, in the providence of God, has been placed over us as our spiritual guide, that every collection will be overpaid. The assessment made upon this work by the district stewards is very small, and if we don't pay up, it will be because we need more of the love of God. But I believe that the people of this work will be among the first to pay up their assessment. Let us attend to this matter at once, and get the collections off our hands. Let every member of this work who reads this try and be ready to pay up their Conference collections the next time your preacher calls. Two made application for membership last Sunday. May the Lord bless them and prepare them for the taking of the vows of the church! It would be well for every member to have a Discipline, and read and study it next to their Bible. I find so few who have the Discipline, and those that have them keep them hid away, or upon some shelf, and if you should pick it up, you would see that there was a collection of dust of long standing. We have the best church government in the world. Let us be loyal to it. Success to the ADVOCATE."

PORT GIBSON, MISS.

Despite the rainy weather, we have been going on with our revival services since last Sabbath morning. Our morning congregations have grown from 12 souls to 35 in 3 days. The first night without rain we had largely over one hundred. The people seem hungry for the Word of Life. They are deeply impressed with the truth. I am running this meeting alone—i. e., "without an evangelist"—not that I am opposed to evangelists, for I am not in any sense. I believe in them. While it may be true, as some contend, that "every preacher ought to be his own evangelist," it has never been so in the history of our church. John Wesley himself was nothing short of the grandest evangelist the world has ever known. However, let everybody think about that as he may think best for himself and his charge, but for me I have always found the evangelist a very great help to myself and my people. God bless the evangelists, especially the one who, about five months ago, in Yazoo City, brought me the news of a full salvation. Praise God for entire sanctification! Oh, that the brethren would quit theorizing about this blessed truth, and enter into the precious experience! May the brethren I love so devotedly "groan after it" till they obtain it. I believe God sent me to Port Gibson to tell our people of this pearl of great price.

We expect to go on with our meeting here for some time. We are confident God is going to do a great work in this place in the next few weeks. Our foreign and domestic missions will all be paid by the first of April. I must not fail to say Bro. Ellis did a good work here. May God bless him in his new field of labor! We hope to report shortly many conversions, reclamations and many who have entered into the experience of "entire sanctification." The ADVOCATE shall not be forgotten. Pray for us and our meeting. We had more than one hundred out this morning (March 17). L. S. JONES.

Men of tender heart and loving sympathy and gentle touch are wanted to give comfort to the world's sorrow, to help other tempted men in their battles, to rescue the perishing out of their bondage.—J. R. Miller.

Nearly all women look forward to the ordeal of motherhood with so much dread and anxiety that only after the baby has safely arrived and made a warm little place for himself in the mother's heart, does she fairly realize that it was indeed a good angel who brought this wee nestling to brighten and sweeten her life.

Women who are approaching motherhood with a sense of fear and solicitude, or in a weakened physical condition, need the help of that marvelous "Favorite Prescription," invented by Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and designed expressly to restore healthy vigor to the delicate feminine structure involved in motherhood. It takes away all of the danger and most of the pain attendant upon motherhood, and confers on the baby that lusty hardihood which is a joy to a mother's heart.

An Ohio lady, Mrs. Lefa Hoffmire, of Clarington, Monroe Co., in a letter to Dr. Pierce, says: "I had always been healthy until four years ago. Before the birth of my child I suffered almost death a dozen times. Had what we call milk leg for four years. Could not stand it to be on my feet long at a time without swelling dreadfully. Before my last baby was born, I had every symptom of a return of the trouble. My leg swelled badly. I read of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and thought I would try it. I took six bottles, and when my baby was born I was not sick at all after I was out of labor, which lasted only a short time. In times previous, labor had lasted twelve to fifteen hours. I am a well woman to-day, and have been since I got out of bed, when my little boy was nine days old. I give the credit all to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I will never do without it during such a time."

Best Edition of the World's Best Book

—THE—

"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangment for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

"Could we with ink the ocean fill,
Were the whole earth of parchment made;
Were every single stick a quill
And every man a scribe by trade,
To write the love of God above
Would drain the ocean dry;
Nor could the scroll contain the whole,
Though stretched from sky to sky."

He is bravest who dares to speak the truth to himself.—Selected.

There is no such thing as a church without the Holy Ghost; they are only so-called churches.—Rev. F. M. Hussey.

A holy life has a voice; it speaks when the tongue is silent, and is either a constant attraction or a perpetual reproof.—Hinton.

O that men would hasten to become as good as they want all their neighbors to be! The millennium would almost be upon us.—Churchman.

The errors and blunders that we make, and the sins into which we fall, ought to teach us to be very gentle in judging our brother-men.—Selected.

Intemperance is a hydra with a hundred heads. She stalks abroad in company with impunity, anger and the most infamous profligacies.—Chrysostom.

The only possession we can carry over from earth to heaven is a Christ like character. Is it not worth while to seek that more earnestly than gold or silver?—Exchange.

To live in the presence of great truths and eternal laws, to be led by permanent ideals—that is what keeps a man patient when the world ignores him, and calm and unspoiled when the world praises him.—Balzac.

God as frequently and as abundantly blesses in withholding some things as in giving others. Much time is wasted in complaining of those things we have not rather than in thanking God for those we have.—Selected.

The great means of doing good, though we can not tell why or how, only because God so directed it, is by example. We are to be ourselves what we would have others to be. And this not only when others know it, but in all places; for I believe that even what we do in secret affects others.—Mary Lyon.

Whatever mitigates the woes or increases the happiness of others is a just criterion of goodness, and whatever injures society at large, or any individual in it, is a criterion of iniquity. One should not quarrel with a dog without a reason sufficiently to vindicate one through the courts of morality.—Goldsmith.

There are many more shining qualities in the mind of man, but none is more useful than discretion; it is this, indeed, which gives a value to all the rest, which sets them at work in their proper times and places, and turns them to the advantage of the person who is possessed of them. Without it, learning is pedantry, and wit, impertinence. Virtue itself looks like weakness; the best parts only qualify a man to be more sprightly in errors, and active to his own prejudice.—Addison.

SPIRITUAL SOMNOLENCE.

One of the sure signs of decadence of spiritual life is sleepiness of soul. Here is where nearly all backslidings begin. First a little indifference to the things of God, a slight slumber of conscience, the entrance and entertainment of a feeling that religion, after all, is not so important as some other things—this is often the origin of spiritual decline, which is followed by spiritual darkness and death.

Satan is too cunning to tempt the Christian to commit gross sin. He makes his first attack, perhaps, by suggesting that it is not well to be "righteous overmuch;" that inasmuch as we are to serve God all our days, we might as well take things easy. And so, unless we are fully awake to his devices, we yield in a measure to a spirit of slumber, and our zeal for God suffers serious abatement. The peril of spiritual somnolency is thus depicted by Martin Luther: "The devil held a great anniversary, at which his emissaries were commanded to report the result of their several missions. Said one: 'I let loose the wild beasts of the desert on a caravan of Christians, and their bones are now bleaching in the sands.' 'What of that?' said the devil. 'Their souls were all saved.' 'I drove the east wind,' said another, 'against a ship freighted with Christians, and they were all drowned.' 'What of that?' said the devil. 'Their souls were all saved.' 'For ten years I tried to get a single Christian asleep,' said a third, 'and finally I succeeded and left him so.' Then the devil shouted, and all the wicked spirits sang for joy."

One of the greatest misfortunes that can befall any church or community is for the members thereof to become sleepy of soul. When this is the case, piety languishes, the work of the Lord is neglected, and sin and vice flourish like a green bay tree. What multitudes of professing Christians do we find who are thoroughly alive to every other interest, but asleep as to their duty to God and humanity. Though wide-awake as to every opportunity of enjoyment, of money-making and self-advancement, they manifest an alarming stupor as regards the opportunities and the obligations of grace.

The tendency to indulge spiritual drowsiness is felt by all more or less, and is one that must be resisted, if we would be true disciples. If men were half as apathetic in business as the average Christian is in religious matters, ruin would soon stare them in the face. And yet nowhere is there so much at stake as in the realm of religion.

"Go to the ants; for one poor grain,
See how they toil and strive;
Yet we who have a heaven to obtain,
How negligent we live!"

Well do the Scriptures say of many in our day, "God hath given them the spirit of slumber; eyes that they should not see and ears that they should not hear."

Sleepy-souled Christians are not only in danger themselves, but, alas! their attitude endangers the spiritual welfare of others, who are thus encouraged to be "at ease in Zion," or at ease in their sins. The direful influence of a slumbering disciple—who can estimate it? And when a community or commonwealth reaches a condition of Gallio-like indifference to questions of right and wrong, then no prophet's eye is needed to foresee a plenteous harvest of vice and woe. "If the salt hath lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted?"

The more drowsy a Christian is, the less he likes to be disturbed, the more unwelcome to him are words of warning; and the same is true of a church, or a community. But, wherever there are the signs of spiritual torpor, nothing will suffice save the strong stimulants of unvarnished truth, and the burning declaration of the wrath of God against lukewarmness and all unrighteousness. Church members often clamor for sedative sermons when they need pungent eye-openers, red-hot, but loving proclamations of the fate and folly of neglect and sin. Spurgeon once said, "A pulpit on fire quickly raises the temperature of the pews." This is to a large extent true. The converse is also true. If the pews are on fire, the pulpit is apt to feel the heat. A Yorkshire minister, being asked what a congregation should do that had "a dry stick" of a minister in the pulpit," replied, "Clap on more fire in the pews; you know dry sticks burn easily."

The great need of the church is members who are fully alive to their duty, and who are on fire with love of God and man. "Therefore, let us not sleep as do others, but let us watch and be sober."

AN EDITOR'S FUN.

While editors have some peculiar trials and tribulations, it is our belief that they have much more than an average share of fun. For instance: We received recently a postal card from a personal friend, which we here copy, making some omissions and alterations which do not affect the point at issue.

"Can you give me the rule in grammar which permits or requires the use of a verb in the singular number when it has for the subject, or subjects, two nouns connected by the conjunction 'and'? I think I wrote, 'Every preacher and member are expected,' etc. I notice that 'is' has been substituted for 'are' It is an offense that merits the death penalty."

Now, any brother must have fallen into the decadence of old age who does not remember the syntactical rule which says in substance (we have no text-book before us): "Two or more singular nouns preceded by each, every, no, or as-well-as require a singular verb" Under this rule exercises in false syntax are usually given similar to the following: "'Each bird and beast cower before the storm.' 'Cower' should be 'cowers.' 'Every man, woman and child on board were lost.' 'Were' should be 'was.' 'All work and no play make Jack a dull boy.' 'Make' should be 'makes.' 'John, as well as James, go to school.' 'Go' should be 'goes.'"

We are sincerely sorry for those who have reached the memory-obliteration stage of senility. We shall probably be there ourselves in a half century from now.

Another case in point. Some time since a college graduate criticised this editor because he had changed "Between you and I" to "Between you and me." Of course, there would be as much propriety in saying "Go with I" as in saying "Between you and I."

These are fair samples of the character of many of the kicks which an editor gets. We pity the occupant of the tripod who gets no fun out of such things. His lot is a hard one. We have many a hearty laugh which we would be glad to share with our readers, if we could

Before giving a kick it is well to examine one's boots.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

The commencement sermon of Millsaps College will be preached by Bishop W. A. Candler. The annual Y. M. C. A. sermon will be preached by Dr. W. A. Bolling, of the Louisiana Conference. The literary address will be delivered by Bishop Candler. We hope a large number of the preachers in the two Mississippi Conferences will make arrangements to attend. Some who can not well be present on Sunday can come on Monday. Those who do so will be amply rewarded. Both in the pulpit and on the platform Bishop Candler is "a master of assemblies." On the subject of "Education" he is especially strong. We are sure he will use this occasion to blow a bugle blast that will stir the heart of the church in behalf of the "Twentieth Century Educational Movement."

A NEW CHRISTIAN ENTERPRISE.

A new interdenominational enterprise has been projected at Newton, Miss., called "The Bible Institute for Christian Workers." The "Advisory Board" is to be composed of two ministers from each of the five denominations represented, viz.—Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Cumberland Presbyterian and Christian. The members of the Board from the Methodist Church are Rev. J. M. Weems, D. D., and Rev. W. M. Sullivan. The Presbyterian Church is represented by Revs. R. E. Janes and R. E. Campbell. Other representatives are L. S. Foster, Baptist; A. M. McBryde, Cumberland Presbyterian; W. H. Meyers, Christian. The vacancies on the Board will be filled at an early date. The faculty as far as selected is as follows: R. B. Hodge, president; J. M. Conley, superintendent; E. E. Powe, treasurer; Miss Elma Bingham, secretary; J. G. Galloway, instructor. The first session will be held from June twenty-first to August thirtieth, '99.

PASTORAL RESOURCEFULNESS.

In a recent issue of the local paper in his charge, Rev. W. L. Anderson, of the North Mississippi Conference, occupies about a half column with an announcements concerning the second Quarterly Conference for the charge, the Quarterly Conference being two months off. A full programme is given for both Saturday and Sunday. On Saturday, commencing at 9:30, and closing in time for the presiding elder's sermon at eleven, a service will be held in which laymen are expected to do the talking. The programme is as follows:

Our Sunday-school Work—Its Condition, Needs, Prospects—W. H. Adams, J. A. Shumaker, S. A. Reed, J. F. McMillin.

Epworth League—W. C. Stacy, F. E. Gunter, Sam'l Ray, G. T. Roff, H. A. Pollard.

Missions—W. C. Pollard, W. H. Williams, Wesley Ray, E. B. Weaver.

The need of stressing the essential saving doctrines of the Bible, and our need of a genuine revival of Holy Ghost religion—J. H. Evans, W. C. Buck, J. L. Ray, Wm. Moss.

After those on the programme have spoken, the meeting will be thrown open for general discussion. Such discussions are likely, in our judgment, to be prolific of good results.

We like the idea of magnifying the Quarterly Conference. This plan might not work successfully everywhere. But it is worthy of consideration nevertheless, as showing enterprise and resourcefulness on the part of a successful pastor. Numerous are the ways in which a wide-awake pastor can magnify the Quarterly Conference, or any other church service or institution. Fertility of resources counts for as much in the Methodist pastorate as anywhere on earth. Success comes to the man who uses the wits that God has given him. It is sometimes wise to get out of the ruts.

THE FORT WORTH CONFERENCE.

The last issue of the Texas Advocate has a very extended account of the Educational Conference, held at Fort Worth, on the fifteenth. Bishops Galloway and Key presided by turns. Both the Bishops delivered addresses that stirred the hearts of the people tremendously. Many other addresses were delivered. Thirty-six of the forty presiding elders were in attendance, and the four absentees were absent from necessity. About 250 preachers and laymen from a distance were present. The Holy Spirit came down in great power and there were scenes like unto those of the early days of Methodism. A mighty impetus was given to the Twentieth Century movement. Bishop Galloway remained in Fort Worth over Sunday and gave two addresses and took two collections for Polytechnic College which aggregated over $5,000. A blaze of revival glory followed by a princely thank-offering to the Great Head of the church is the prospective result of the Fort Worth Conference. May this history repeat itself every where!

A FAVOR TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

As soon as we had examined the first issue of "The American Illustrated Methodist Magazine," of which we gave a highly commendatory notice in our issue of March sixteen, we resolved that we would endeavor to make some arrangement whereby we could offer it to our subscribers at a reduced rate. We are happy to be able to state that we have succeeded. Our offer will be found on another page. We congratulate our readers upon the opportunity afforded them of getting this high-grade magazine on such favorable terms.

"THE BOOK OPENED."

"The Book Opened; or, An Analysis of the Bible," by Alfred Nevin, D. D., is a book to be commended. It will help to an appreciation and to an understanding of God's Holy Word. Such a book would be useful and helpful in the homes of our people. The Analysis is very suggestive and well calculated to aid the student in finding and in studying important facts, incidents, miracles and parables. GILDEROY.

TRY IT.

We would like to send to every preacher who wishes to work for the ADVOCATE a sample copy of our Combination Bible to be used in canvassing. It can be returned at our expense, if not disposed of.

NOTES.

Bro. W. M. Thornton, Lake, Miss., has been quite ill, but is now convalescent.

Bishop Wilson has returned from his visit to our mission fields across the Pacific.

"Kent on Ecclesiastical Finance" will be reviewed in our next issue by "A Beloved."

We regret to have missed a call recently from Rev. J. W. Chambers, of Whitworth College.

The New Orleans Sunday-school Union will hold its anniversary next Sabbath at Carondelet.

Rev. G. H. Thompson has made an auspicious beginning on his new charge at Benton, Miss.

The next convention of the Louisiana State Sunday-school Association will be held at Baton Rouge.

Mrs. Unrah, a national organizer of the W. C. T. U, lectured in this city last Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Rev. J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake and Rev. J. H. Montgomery attended the Sunday-school Convention.

Dr. J. T. Sawyer will preach the commencement sermon of Fort Jessup Masonic College, Fort Jessup, La., May 21.

We regret to have missed a call recently from J. M. Conley, superintendent of the Newton Bible Institute for Christian Workers.

While attending the Convention, Rev. J. B. Kent made a mid-week trip to Covington, and preached to the delight of his old parishioners.

Rev. H. A. Gatlin, of the Mississippi Conference, writes: "We are moving on nicely on the Beauregard charge. The people gave us a warm welcome."

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, of the North Mississippi Conference, in a private letter says: "My people are highly pleased with the ADVOCATE."

Rev. R. P. Howell, of the Louisiana Conference, wears with grace and dignity the honor of the secretaryship of the State Sunday-school Convention.

Rev. R. H. Wynn began a meeting at Algiers on Sunday. There was a large attendance both morning and evening, and considerable interest was manifested.

Dr. I. W. Cooper has been for some days in North Louisiana in the interest of Centenary College. He has visited Haughton, Arcadia, Delhi, and Shreveport.

That veteran Methodist layman, Capt. J. N. Pharr, gave a good account of himself when his name was called as one of the speakers at the Sunday-school Convention.

New Orleans Methodism was ably represented on the programme of the Sunday-school Convention by Rev. W. H. LaPrade, Rev. E. N. Evans, A. F. Godat, and E. P. Mackie.

Rev. N. J. Roberts writes: "I shall do my best to put the ADVOCATE into every home in my charge" Thanks, brother. We hope you will succeed. May your example prove contagious!

Rev. H. W. May writes: "My work is developing nicely. Congregations are growing at each service. I am planning for a searching revival. The ADVOCATE gets better all the time."

Rev. R. W. Burton, a faithful and efficient local preacher of Lake charge, died, after a few weeks' illness, of appendicitis, in Water Valley, Miss., on March 4, 1899. A suitable memoir will appear later.

We are in receipt of the following note from Rev. T. L. Mellen:

Rev. L. J. Jones, P. C., Walnut Grove, is quite ill with slow fever. The whole family is down. Bro. P. H. Howse is with them. Sickness is almost every home in Walnut Grove.

We bespeak the prayers of the brethren in behalf of this faithful itinerant and his family.

Bishop Galloway spent last week in Arkansas in the interest of Galloway College, delivering addresses in several cities. Magnificent buildings are to be erected soon in place of those destroyed by the fire.

The officers of the State Sunday-school Association for the ensuing year are as follows: President, A. M. Mayo; corresponding secretary, Mrs. A. M. Mayo; recording secretary, Rev. R. P. Howell; treasurer, T. G. Hardie.

First Church, Jackson, Miss., during the present year will finish paying for Epworth Hall, a most eligible building purchased some time since for the use of the Sunday-school and the Epworth League.

Rev. D. P. Bradford has the honor of being the first preacher in the Mississippi Conference to pay over his full assessment for foreign missions. When a live pastor and a live church get together, something happens.

The meeting at Parker Memorial closed on Sunday night with a crowded house. Dr. Clifford left Monday for home, where he will remain two or three days, and then go to North Louisiana to meet a number of engagements.

An accomplished woman, the daughter of one of our preachers, writes: "The ADVOCATE seems, if possible, to grow better all the time. The article by Bro. Meek, in last week's issue, is almost worth the price of the paper."

The man and the occasion met when Rev. J. B. Kent appeared before the Louisiana State Sunday-school Convention to talk upon "The Value of Sunday-school Work." It was a capital address, and was much enjoyed by the large audience.

We were pleased to meet in the city, a few days since, our genial friend, Dr. W. B. Murrah, and to learn of the satisfactory status and gratifying prospects of Millsaps College. The personelle of the student-body is fine, the demeanor good, and class-room work excellent.

A contract has been let for the erection of a new Methodist Church at Vicksburg, Miss., at a cost of $20,297.39. The work will begin on Monday, April 3, and the building is to be completed by the first of October. The next session of the Mississippi Conference will, therefore, be held in the new church. Pastor Watkins and his flock are to be congratulated. The present edifice, though a substantial one, does not exactly represent the Methodism of to-day.

Rev. W. M. Stevens writes: "One of the greatest necessities of my people is the circulation of a good, orthodox, religious weekly newspaper, such as the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. When I came to this work I found only about five or six ADVOCATES taken, but I hope to leave it with its benign and elevating influence in fifty homes or more." In keeping with his record, Bro. Stevens is likely to carry out his programme. He is one of those who work as well as talk.

Dr. H. Walter Featherston, presiding elder of the Brookhaven district, in a private letter says: "I shall press the claims of the ADVOCATE in each Quarterly Conference on my second round. During my first round I have had to preach, lecture, exhort, etc., to get better salaries for the preachers. The ADVOCATE'S interests are prominent in my purpose. You shall have my heartiest support, and all the aid I can in my office give you." Thank you, brother. May your tribe increase!

Rev. J. W. Raper, of the North Mississippi Conference, writes: "Your proposition to send the paper eight months for one dollar is taking hold of the people. I believe that the requisite number of new subscribers can be gotten. All can help in the work by getting a large list of new subscribers. I think I can get four times as many in this charge as we now have. If all will do the same, we will have about fourteen thousand new subscribers." Thank you, brother. We hope your example will prove contagious.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Jackson, La., EDITOR.

The Junior Leagne at Parker Memorial, New Orleans, is small in nnmbers, bnt faithfnl. The children are greatly interested in the work.

A social was given by the Lonisiana Avenne Epworth Leagne last Friday evening at the residence of Dr. J B. A. Ahrens. We appreciated the very cordial invitation to be present, bnt engagements elsewhere prevented.

The prayer-meeting topic for Snnday, April 2, is an intensely interesting one. We trnst the Leagners everywhere will stndy it carefnlly.

"The Birthday of Hope" is the snbject, the verses being fonnd in I. Peter i, 1-9. Read carefnlly each verse and also the references, and, if convenient, consnlt a good commentary.

The "Resnrrection of Jesns Christ from the Dead" is the inspiring thought and main trnth herein set forth and emphasized.

In many of the chnrches "Easter Day" will be a time of special services as to forms, rites, and ordinances. As Methodists, we lay bnt little stress upon snch things, bnt let us not forget the great fact to which they all point—the resnrrection of Jesns Christ from the dead.

Whether "Easter" is the proper word to nse, or whether the date is exactly correct, matters little to us; bnt that Jesns Christ, thongh crnci fied, dead, and bnried, is risen and glorified, and ever liveth to make intercession for his people, is a divine trnth to which every true Christian continnally attests.

As we look ont in natnre at this season of the year, and see the bnrsting buds and newly-developed flowers—evidences of fresh vigor and new life—we shonld be forcibly reminded of that new life offered to mankind by Him who said, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me."

Jesns Christ is the great monnmental character in hnman history. Overcoming the sharpness of death, he hath opened the kingdom of heaven to all believers Beyond the darkness, amid the splendors of immortality, we see him holding ont crowns of life to his followers. Let us follow on nnshrinking to the final conflict, realizing that faith in him shall make ns more than conqnerors.

"Then fling ont yonr banners, brave tollers;
Brisg lillies to altar and shrine.
Risg out, silver bells, 'He is risen,'
For yon is the token and sign.
There's a world moving upward and Godward;
Ye are called to the front, ye must lead;
Behind are the grave and the darkness—
The Master is risen indeed."

NOTICE.

To the Pastors and Epworth Leagnes of the Shreveport District:

I mailed to-day to each pastor a general ontline of onr District Leagne Rally program, and it is very necessary for yon to respond promptly by nominating some one to fill some one of the parts named. We will also need several lay members for leading devotional meetings. Please suggest one from yonr charge, and reply promptly. The Rally will meet in Shreveport, Wednesday of the first week in May, and we expect a great Leagne revival May the Lord give it! P. O. LOWREY.

LOUISIANA STATE EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: We have received word from some of the pastors, and the ontlook is at least one hnndred delegates at the coming Conference, April 20 to 23.

The Program Committee are doing their best to get the finest speakers in the neighboring States. Crowley is willing to pay for three good speakers.

Will give a social reception on the opening night. Let everybody get here in time to get acqnainted with everyone else.

I wish that all of the Leagnes, or pastors, wonld write me, sending the names and the nnmber from their places. The invitation is not only to the chnrches having Leagnes, bnt is also to the chnrches without Leagnes, that desire to form Leagnes, or come in contact with the great Leagne movement.

We have organized a choir of fifty voices, and will do everything to make the Leagne a snccess.

Let all that are interested come, and those that are not interested come, that they may be interested.

NOTICE.

DEAR BRETHREN: At onr last Conference session we approved the following: "We recommend the continnance of the qnarterly payment plan, and suggest that the first Snnday in March be kept as Veteran Day."

Onr first payment is dne April 1, and onr treasnrer writes that very few charges have yet reported a collection for Conference claimants. Will not onr pastors give this attention at once, and forward the money collected to Bro. W. M. Thornton, at Lake, Miss.?

The Board will send ont blanks for a report from claimants in May. Some pastors have written already asking for these blanks. We appreciate their thonghtfnlness, and request that where there exists with any claimant an nnnsnal condition, that the pastor of snch a claimant notify us at once. We ask this especially in case of death.

We beg yon, brethren, to take this collection alone; do not conple it with any other. To exhort yon to a greater interest in this matter we feel wonld reflect on the kindly feeling yon have for the senior members of our family. Yonrs cordially,

GEO. H. THOMPSON,
Sec. Joint Board of Finance.

Fonr preachers' wives were consnlted about the plan and arrangement of the rooms, doors, etc., and all approve. Rooms are not small, and ceiling high. Finish, interior and exterior, all that conld be wished. As onr congregation is poor, any help sent wonld be appreciated. Make checks or money orders payable to Rev. H. D. Howell.

Died at Dr. Schnmpert's sanitarinm, nnder a snrgical operation, on March 18, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Riley. The little baby corpse was as beantiful as we can imagine its angel spirit to be, and heaven will be mnch more attractive because of such treasures laid up there. May God bless the bereaved!

CHRISTIAN WOMANHOOD.

BY REV. W. C. BLACK, D. D.

The above-named work has had a sale of nearly six thousand. From the many scores of highly commendatory notices that have appeared in the church papers, we present the following:

"We hope it will be read by every woman in the church."—Florida Advocate.

"It is the best thesaurus of facts concerning womanhood with which we are acquainted. The author has evidently given painstaking thought and care to the preparation of this volume. After showing the degraded condition of woman under the highest pagan civilizations, he demonstrates that it was Christianity that began to raise her to higher levels, and that since the Reformation the good work has been going forward. We wish thousands of women to read this excellent volume."—Dr. C. F. Deems.

The price is $1, and we will send it postpaid on receipt of that sum. But to that select class who subscribe for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we make the following special offer: Pay your subscription one full year in advance, and send us sixty cents additional, and we will send you the book postpaid.

HOW STONE IN THE BLADDER

Was Removed Without a Surgical Operation.

This Case Was One of so Much Interest Because of its Severity That it Was Known for Miles Around.

Below Will be Found an Interesting History of the Case, Written by Mr Bailey Himself.

A sense of profound gratitude and joy prompts me to write this letter. I had suffered for ten years with kidney and bladder trouble. Last August I was taken with terrible pain in my kidneys which extended to the bladder. The urine that I passed, after standing a while, became thick and ropy, or muddy; left quantities of sediment in vessel, and gave me great agony to void it. Upon advice of my physician I finally consented to go to the Hospital at Raleigh. When I got there the chief surgeon examined me, and said it would be necessary to remove the stone from the bladder by a surgical operation. This he admitted was dangerous, owing to my age and feeble condition. I decided if I must die, I would go home and die with my family. After I returned from the Hospital in a despondent and almost hopeless state of mind, I took your certificate and pamphlet, sent with the sample bottle of Swamp-Root, and went to a kind and wise friend and we read the circulars, and discussed my symptoms and the chances of my recovery, should I submit to an operation. We decided to try your medicine, and if no relief after a thorough trial, to risk the knife. After taking the sample bottle I bought six large bottles of your Swamp-Root and used it according to directions. And about Feb. 6th, to my great delight, the stone seemed to crumble; I began to pass small particles of gravel stone, and on that night I passed the one enclosed, about the size of a large pea. I continued to pass these particles and to improve until to-day, under God's Providence through your Swamp-Root treatment, my life has been spared. Had I chosen the knife treatment I fear I would have been in my grave, or at the best, lingering in the Hospital. I regard your Swamp-Root as the most wonderful medicine for bladder and kidney troubles in the universe, and wish I could tell all who suffer as I did, the relief and happiness it has brought me. I expect to continue its use occasionally to keep my kidneys and bladder all right, and shall tell all I see in the condition I was, how easy they can find relief by using Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. What I have written can be substantiated by prominent people of this place. I will answer letters of inquiry if stamps are enclosed for reply.

JAS. R. BAILEY,
Feb. 8th, 1899. AUBURN, N. C.

Swamp-Root brings sunshine and gladness in every home it enters. It is the new discovery of Dr. Kilmer, the great kidney and bladder specialist. It is not recommended for everything, but if you have kidney or bladder trouble, it will be found just the medicine you need.

REFLECTION.

BY F. BURGE ORISWOLD.

Departed already! gone hence with the sun;
What record have I of deeds done or undone?
The night is at hand; ere I lie down to sleep,
One page in this book of remembrance I keep.

I can but recall the Divine Fatherhood,
With numberless blessings of comfort and good;
The love never failing, the sweet gift of grace,
The glory that shines from the heavenly place.

The patience enduring, the pity, the care,
The help to my faith in the answers to prayer;
The warnings from evil, the prompting to right,
The soothing my sorrows, the gloom change to light.

Ah! what have I not in this hour to record,
Of the wondrous, beneficent gifts from my Lord!
And how does my spirit bow down in its shame,
That I have not honored more truly His name!

The day has departed, the night is at hand,
So far am I nearer the heavenly land;
God grant me His aid, that to-morrow may be Fulfilled with returns for His mercies to me!
—Intelligencer.

THE BEST REFERENCE.

A story is related of a young man, many years ago, who went into a store in New York seeking a position as a clerk. Standing in the counting-room, he was informed that he was not wanted.

"But," said he, "I have the best of references," one of which was from a most highly-respected person. He began turning over his valise to find the letter of recommendation, when a book rolled out on the floor.

"What book is that?" sharply asked the merchant.

"It is the Bible," was the answer returned.

"And what are you going to do with that book in New York?"

The unabashed young man looked calmly into the face of the merchant and said:

"I promised my mother I would read it every day, and I shall always do so."

When the wealthy merchant heard these words, he told him that he had a place for him. He held his place, and won his way to a partnership in the business, by fidelity to the promise made to his mother to read the Bible. Be true to the Word of God.—Selected.

GENTLE DEALING WITH AN ANGRY ONE.

Gentle words disarm hostile criticism, or, as the Proverbs express it: "A soft answer turneth away wrath." What is said by the one who is spoken to sharply, or in ill-nature, has more to do with bringing a pleasant or a bitter ending to the interview than what is said by the other at the start. It takes two to make a quarrel, or to keep one up. "A grievous word stirreth up anger" in an angry heart. And if one refuses to do the stirring in another's heart, the anger must subside. "For lack of wood the fire goeth out;" and "as coals are to hot embers and wood to fire, so is a contentious man to inflame strife." It is of less importance that a man is angry and speaks spitefully to you, than that you speak gently in reply and calm him down by your calmness. If one tries to anger you, see to it that he fails. If he is in anger himself, let him not have your help in making a quarrel.—Sunday-School Times.

DON'T.

Don't judge a man by his clothes. God made one and the tailor the other.

Don't judge a man by his family relations; for Cain belonged to a good family.

Don't judge a man by his speech, for a parrot talks, but the tongue is but an instrument of sound.

Don't judge a man by his failure in life, for many a man fails because he is too honest to succeed.

Don't judge a man by the house he lives in, for the lizard and the rat often inhabit the grandest structures.

When a man dies they who survive him ask what property he has left behind. The angel who bends over the dying man asks what good deeds he has sent before him.—Children's Visitor.

THE BEST HOME.

The home feeling means comfort, security, rest. To be at home is to be at ease and in peace amid familiar surroundings, without constraint or distraction. No sweeter word than home has been found for heaven. The ideal home is a miniature heaven. The celestial heaven is a sublimated home. But both these words have close connection with still another which lends them yet greater charm. Heaven is the home of the will of God, the place where his good pleasure reigns and perfect fulfillment greets every desire. To be at home in that will makes life heavenly here or there. At home in the will of God—satisfied with it, resting in it, counting it all comfort and blessing, feeling wrapped around by it as by the arms of Infinite Love—what better thing can come to us than such a home feeling as this? Meditation will do much to bring it. Lord, open our eyes to see its beauty, and strengthen our wills to grasp its power!—Zion's Herald.

CHEERFULNESS.

Cheerfulness can become a habit, and habits sometimes help us over hard places. A cheerful heart seeth cheerful things.

A lady and gentleman were in a lumber yard situated by a dirty, foul-smelling river.

The lady said: "How good the pine boards smell!"

"Pine boards!" exclaimed the gentleman. "Just smell the foul river!"

"No, thank you," the lady replied, "I prefer to smell the pine boards."

And she was right. If she, or we, can carry this principle through our entire living, we shall have the cheerful heart, the cheerful voice and the cheerful face.

There is in some houses an unconscious atmosphere of domestic and social ozone which brightens everybody. Wealth can not give it, nor can poverty take it away. —Miss Mulock.

NAPOLEON LOST THE BATTLE OF LEIPSIC because of a fit of indigestion. One dose of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL would have given him instant relief, and the fate of the kingdoms of Europe been decided differently. It is really marvelous how quickly a colicky pain will vanish when a teaspoonful of Mul-en-ol in a wineglass of hot water is taken. Try it; you will never suffer from colic.

HOME POLITENESS.

The boy who is polite to father and mother is likely to be polite to everybody else. A boy lacking politeness to his parents may have the semblance of courtesy in society, but is never truly polite in spirit, and is in danger, as he becomes familiar, of betraying his real want of courtesy.

We are all in danger of living too much for the outside world, for the impression we make in society, coveting the good opinion of others, and caring too little for the opinion of those who are in a sense a part of ourselves.

We say to every boy and girl, cultivate the habit of courtesy and propriety at home, and you will be sure in other places to act in a becoming and attractive manner.—Selected.

MADE HER HOME PLEASANT.

There lingers also a very fragrant recollection in my mind of a landlady whose parlor was made home-like for the young men who considered themselves fortunate in securing a room beneath her roof. "I make it a point," she said, "to have a bright light on the centre table as soon as darkness appears, and I notice the young men are quick to stroll into the sitting-room or parlor, and seat themselves so comfortably that many an evening finds them reading quietly until bed-time, and those evenings, I feel sure, are spent in a perfectly safe and, I hope, cheerful place."—Lutheran Observer.

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT,

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living

IF YOU PLEASE.

When the Duke of Wellington was sick the last thing he took was a cup of tea. On his servant's handing it to him on a saucer, and asking him if he would have it, the Duke replied, "Yes, if you please." These were his last words. How much kindness and courtesy is expressed by them! He who had commanded great armies in Europe, and had long been used to the throne of authority, did not despise or overlook the small courtesies of life.

BACK SEATS.

Boys, when you go to church take a seat with your parents and sisters. A back seat may be as comfortable as any, but whisperers, gigglers, light-headed girls and soft-brained boys always seek that quarter. Don't be afraid of the front seats. Besides, it is so much more home-like to see all the family seated together. Our religion is a family religion, and for all the members of the family alike.—Southern Advocate.

"The old oaken bucket, moss-covered bucket that swings in the well," laden with cool, refreshing, thirst-quenching drink, is not more grateful to parched throats than a few drops of delicious MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM to relieve a cold which has settled in the throat and chest. It is a sure cure.

Hygiene.

SIMPLE CURES FOR INSOMNIA.

Insomnia is not a disease itself, but the effect of an unhealthy condition of body or mind. When the cause is removed the insomnia may be expected to disappear. Every physician has had stubborn cases of it, which would not yield to any treatment and for which a change of air or of scene became necessary. But such cases as these should not occur, and do occur only when the sufferer has neglected precautions that should have been taken when the trouble first began to appear.

The day should be going by in which busy, active, strong men are suddenly taken ill while at business and carried home in a cab to die of heart failure, apoplexy or paralysis. Things like these would not happen if men took care of themselves. Of course, death knocks at every man's gate sooner or later. But when a man apparently strong is stricken down suddenly with a violent attack of some malady and is dead almost without warning, it shows that the man has neglected himself. And so insomnia results from causes which can be removed if attended to in season.

The most common cause of insomnia is found in the digestive organs. Either unsuitable food, causing insomnia as a feature of indigestion, or insufficient food, causing the patient to be kept awake by hunger.

There are a few things which can be universally recommended as diet for sleeplessness, since what will agree with one man will disagree with another. But two things that may almost always be recommended are lettuce and celery. The lettuce should be taken in the form of salad, in which plenty of olive oil should be used, something like three parts of oil to one of vinegar. The lettuce is good for the stomach and especially good for the intestinal tract, on which it exerts a soothing effect. The celery is especially good for the nerves, for which it is tranquilizing and calming.

Never go to bed hungry is an important rule. Some people are hungry at bedtime and never know it. They attribute the feeling to their nerves, to fatigue, to anything except its real cause. Then they lie awake and wonder what causes their insomnia. Others become hungry three or four hours after going to bed and arise in the morning with a bad headache.

Nine cases of insomnia in ten would be cured by a midnight lunch. We need to take a lesson from the animals, all of which sleep after a hearty meal. We may take a lesson, too, from mechanics and other workingmen around the city. When they have an hour at noon for lunch, they make haste to eat their meals and then take a nap for the remainder of the hour. We may take a lesson from the babies. They always nurse before sleeping.

What sort of meals should be eaten at night is a question which must be determined in each case for itself. It often occurs that the reverse of a victim's usual habits will cause relief. A person who is strong and hearty and eats many meals will often sleep most soundly after a light supper late in the evening.

So simple a thing as a glass of water at night may cause a person to sleep. Many people drink too little water, not enough to supply the demands of the system for fluid. Everyone needs a certain amount of it, and the best time to drink it is at night. The habit which some children have of begging for a glass of water at night, sometimes after they are in bed, is perfectly natural, and it is wrong to scold them for it. It is a perfectly natural demand of the system, and should be respected.

A plate of ice cream, eaten slowly before bedtime, will induce sleep in some victims of insomnia.

Bathing is sometimes the key to a case of insomnia. A cold plunge will relieve some cases when the shock is not attended by any disagreeable effect. A warm bath is better for others. No general rules can be laid down as to the kind of baths to be used, as it depends wholly on the idiosyncrasies of the individual. But for the average person a tepid bath is usually best.—William Stevens, M. D., in New York Journal.

Cured Without Disfigurement by Anointing With Oils.

DUTTON, ONT., CAN., Oct. 31, 1898.
DR. D. M. BYE, Indianapolis, Ind.

DEAR DOCTOR—I can not say enough about your Oils. I have had a cancer on my nose for four years and tried three different doctors and at last they advised me to have it cut out. A friend told me about your Balmy Oils and I sent for them the 28th of April, 1898, and I started using them on May 1st, 1898, and on June the 14th, the cancer was all out, and on July the 1st, my nose was healed over again, but it was very tender, but now it is filled in and as tough as any part of my face. For your Blood Purifier, I may say, I never took better medicine, for I have not been in better health for twelve years. Now, dear Doctor, you may word this as you wish, but I can not say enough, nor be thankful enough. If anyone wants to find my more about the Oils, they may write to me. We are all well and happy now. Hoping you are the same, and wishing you all success, and God bless you, I remain,

Your ever loving friend,
MRS. ROBERT KERR.

FUNCHES—Dr. GEORGE JOHN DANIEL FUNCHES was born near Orangeburg, S. C., Nov. 17, 1814, and died six miles east of Crystal Springs, March 1, 1899, of pneumonia. He moved to Mississippi with his parents in 1820. He was converted and joined the Methodist Church at Lum's Camp Ground, in Warren county, when he was fourteen years old. He attended medical lectures at Memphis and New Orleans. He began the practice of medicine in Hinds county in 1843. In 1844 he moved to Westville, Simpson county, Miss., where he practiced his profession till 1857, when a very severe spell of sickness so impaired his health that he had to give up his practice. He was a very successful physician, and did a great deal of charity practice. In 1891 he moved to Copiah county, near Crystal Springs, where he spent the remainder of his life.

Dr. Funches was twice married. In 1846 he was married to Miss Amanda Banks. To them were born six children, two of whom are still living, one of whom, Rev. T. S. Funchee, is now a preacher in Texas; the other, M. A. Funches, a prosperous farmer living near Jackson, Miss. His first wife died in Hazlehurst, Miss., in 1864. On Oct. 15, 1869, he was married to Miss Lavina A. Bishop, of near Westville, Miss. To them ten children were born, eight of whom are still living.

In 1861 he volunteered as a soldier in the Confederate Army. He raised Company "B" of the Sixteenth Mississippi Regiment, of which he was elected captain. He was a Master Mason, and was master of his lodge for forty years. He was steward and Sunday-school superintendent until his eyesight failed him. He was treasurer of Simpson county for eight years.

Dr Funches was faithful in every position in which he was placed. There was not a blot upon his character. He loved his Savior and his church. I have heard nothing but praise of him from those who fought under him in the Civil War and those who fought with him in the army of the Lord. It was a benediction to anyone to associate with him. He was so kind and loving in his family and to his friends. He lived a happy Christian life full of good works. His life was a success; his death a victory. He leaves a loving wife and ten children to mourn his death. All his children, except the two youngest, are members of the church, and we trust they will all meet him in heaven. W. M. WILLIAMS, P. KING—Mrs. JULIA FRASIER KING died Feb. 6, 1899, in Rogers, Ark., aged fifty-seven years.

Mrs. King, with her family, moved to this place four years ago from her home in Madison parish, La., where the news of her death was received with deep sorrow by her many friends there. The death of this elect lady was a great shock to her family and friends. She was in perfect health when stricken with pneumonia, and after an illness of nine days was summoned to join the redeemed, where there is no more suffering, or sorrow, or care, and she lives in the sunlight of God's promises forevermore. Her son, Dr. A. C. King, of Algiers, La., and her devoted daughter, Mrs. J. D. Herring, of Floyd, La., together with the younger sons, were present, and ministered to her with tenderest devotion. We know they realize there is no death—what seems so is translation—and their beloved mother waits for them on the other shore.

Our acquaintance with this beloved friend was brief, but there are lives which only touch each other in this world, and then separate, going their different ways; but there will be some gaps in heaven for these beginnings of friendship to be wrought out in sunniest beauty.

May the balm of consolation from God's promises be poured upon her devoted husband and eight dutiful children, who survive her; and sustaining her consistent Christian life, may they each one rejoin the sweet wife and mother in heaven!

Mrs. King was for — years a consistent member of the M. E. Church, South. Her body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Rogers, Ark.

BRACEY—Mrs. MARY BRACEY (nee Richardson), of Jeanerette, La., daughter of D. W. M. Richardson, of Opelousas, La., died peacefully Jan. 14 1899. She was bore in Alabama in 1863, graduated at Whitworth College in 1882, and was married in 1886 to Mr. Hugh L. Bracey, who, with four children, survive her.

The writer became acquainted with the deceased only a few days before her death. The manifest pleasure with which his first pastoral visit was received, and the services enjoyed, together with the resigned expression on the face of the patient sufferer, indicated the implicit assurance and perfect repose of a soul helplessly, but peacefully resigning itself to the will of the God who gave it, and to whose affectionate bosom it was returning. The ready comprehension and manifest appreciation of a few select sentences and answers to appropriate inquiries clearly evidenced a familiarity with the subject of faith and plan of salvation, at which he was not surprised after learning that she had been a Christian and a church member from childhood. Subsequent visits and the testimony of life-time associates fully sustained these first impressions. Indeed, it would be difficult to exaggerate the eulogies pronounced by the neighbors of this lovely character.

May the peace of God rest on the bereaved!

RONT. J. HARP.

FAIRMAN—Mrs. MATTIE G. FAIRMAN (nee Grant), daughter of Dr. Geo. W. and E. W. Grant, and wife of B. A. Fairman, died at Old Crystal Springs, Miss., Jan. 25, 1899. She was born near Bartonton, Copiah county, Miss., Aug. 31, 1819. She was converted and joined the Baptist Church at Pine Bluff in 1864; was married to B. A. Fairman, Feb. 27, 1868; withdrew from the Baptist Church and joined the Methodist Church in 1891. She was the mother of nine children, eight of whom are now living.

Sister Fairman has been almost an invalid ever since I have known her. She was a woman of good attainments; was ambitious for her children to be educated and refined. She was very much devoted to her family, and was jealous of their every interest. She was energetic almost to a fault, doing beyond her strength. She said to her son, Grant, just before she died, that she was at peace with all mankind and with God, and was going to heaven, and for all to meet her. May our kind Father care for the motherless children, and bring them all together in heaven!

Gallman, Miss.

JONES—JAMES THOMAS OBED JONES, son of Madison O. and Mary E. Jones, was born at Sartlesville, Miss., Dec. 12, 1874, and died at Monticello, Miss., Feb. 21, 1899

From infancy up he was an exceptional son, obedient, gentle, and loving. All who knew him admired his high Christian demeanor. In 1886 he joined the M. E. Church, South, and has consistently lived a conscientious Christian life up to his death. No young man was more highly respected or beloved than was Jimmie Jones. His education was attained in the high schools, and being a bright and progressive scholar, he soon rose to first place in his class, both as student and a Christian youth. In 1896 he attended a commercial college in Montgomery, Ala., and graduated with honors. Immediately afterwards he procured employment; first at McComb City, and afterwards at Monticello, Miss., and was soon recognized as a young man of profound worth and deep Christian thought, and was ever esteemed as a leader of morals.

Farewell, farewell, Jimmie, until we cross the river and rest upon the shining shore, nevermore to part.

Wesson, Miss.

TYNER—WILLIAM CRAWFORD TYNER was born in Claiborne parish, La., Dec. 25, 1862. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Tyner, of Colquitt, La. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in childhood, and has remained with it since. In the Fall of 1889, owing to ill health—being afflicted with lung trouble—he removed to San Antonio, Texas, and a few months later to Marfa, Texas. At this time his friends hardly hoped for him to last more than a few months, yet he has lingered, often in great suffering, until March 3, 1899, at 2 25 A. M., when he passed away. He was always patient in suffering, and although, owing mainly to ill health, he took no active part in the work of the Master, yet was always ready to encourage it.

Just before passing away he gave evidences of being at peace with God. He was buried at four o'clock Friday afternoon, March 3, 1899, in the Citizens' Cemetery, Marfa, Texas, Rev. E. F. Goodson, pastor M. E. Church, South, officiating, being assisted by Rev. J. T. McKeelok, of the Christian Church. His three brothers and a large circle of friends attended the funeral. E. F. GOODSON.

Alpine, Texas.

WELBORN—Mrs. MARY E. WELBORN (nee Beal) was born Feb. 27, 1864. She died Feb. 26, 1899, at the family home in Lawrence county, Miss. She became the wife of Mr. Robt. Welborn, and was the mother of five children, four of whom are living. She was a member of our church in Monticello, and was buried there. She was a good Christian, and faithful in every relation in life. The loved ones can meet her in the home of the good in heaven. We commend them to the grace of God. C. MCDONALD.

BEWARE OF OINTMENTS FOR CATARRH THAT CONTAIN MERCURY,

Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and frictions points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great length; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

John St. Paul has been appointed judge of the Civil District Court in place of Judge Monroe.

The Port Arthur Ship Canal has been formally opened. It is sixteen feet deep, but will be increased to twenty-five.

Attorney General Griggs has decided against the landing of another cable in Cuba, the Postal Telegraph Company having asked that right.

England and France have divided a large slice of African territory, and there are now left only four Independent States on the Continent.

The vacancy on the Supreme bench of Louisiana, caused by the death of Judge H. C. Miller, has been filled by the appointment of Judge F. A. Monroe.

In the death of Captain John Poitevent, who died on Monday at Abita Springs, in St. Tammany parish, the Southwest has lost one of the most conspicuous figures engaged in the development of its resources.

Ex-Governor John M. Stone has been elected to the presidency of the A. and M. College of Mississippi, in place of Gen. S. D. Lee, who has accepted the position of commissioner of the new National Park at Vicksburg.

After three days' constant fighting and exertion, the American forces have advanced eight miles north of Manila, and are now within about ten miles of the insurgent's capital at Malolos. Our troops have been compelled to fight every foot of the way, and at all strategic points have encountered a resistance which has greatly enhanced the reputation of the Filipinos for bravery and military skill.

Fire destroyed the Armour Curled Hair and Felt Works in Chicago, causing a property loss of nearly $400,000, injured eleven employees, one fatally, and endangered the lives of 400 others who rushed to escape through the blinding smoke.

The law closing Tennessee barbers' shops on Sunday has been declared constitutional by the Supreme Court of that State. The point of class legislation had been raised, but the court ruled that the Legislature was the sole arbiter of the policy or expediency of the law.

It is good news to all the Gulf and South Atlantic coast to learn that the Department of War has set aside $300,000 of the revenue derived from the Cuban tonnage tax for the maintenance of an effective system of disinfection at the Cuban ports, to be administered by the Marine Hospital Service.

Unwillingly Congress just before its adjournment gave President McKinley authority to appoint two admirals of the navy instead of limiting the grade to one, as it undoubtedly intended. The discovery has just been brought to the attention of officials of the Navy Department, and has aroused considerable gossip, especially among the friends of Rear Admiral Sampson and Rear Admiral Schley.

The condition of affairs existing in Samoan Islands is far from satisfactory, and the United States has a decided interest in the final settlement of affairs there. The control of the islands is regulated by a treaty or agreement arranged between the United States, Germany and Great Britain, and this tripartite agreement has led to constant disagreement and friction in the management of government affairs in Samoa.

The Filipinos are fighting hard. Their stubbornness interferes with the plans of General Otis, who is unable to cut the rebel lines in two. Sunday was spent in sharp and desperate engagements. The towns of Malinta, Malabon, and Polo were captured. Natives are retiring toward Malolos, and concentrating there. The American army is close behind them and a decisive battle may be fought within a very short time now. Nearly twoscore Americans have been killed and over two hundred wounded.

Should the Legislature of New York take favorable action upon a bill recently introduced by Assemblyman Samuel Scott Slater, incorporating the Industrial and Commercial Exhibition Company of New York, and should the plans of many of the leading business men of New York materialize, New York, in the Spring of 1900, will have an exposition which will cost $30,000,000 and will cover one-third more floor space than that of the World's Fair in Chicago. The object of this exposition will be to attract to New York the buyers and merchants of this country by having the products of the world's factories and mills under one roof.

It is the general belief that Secretary Alger's visit to Cuba will result in General Brooke's retirement and the appointment of General Wood as governor-general. The most significant feature of Secretary Alger's visit is the attitude taken towards the Cuban Assembly. The administration at Washington has evidently made up its mind to utterly ignore this body and decline to recognize it in any shape or form. The Assembly decided to postpone discussion of the proposal to disband the army and to dissolve until the arrival of Secretary Alger. It was proposed that the commission should wait upon the secretary and put before him the position of the body.

At the Capitol.

I am in my seventy-third year, and for fifty years I have been a great sufferer from indigestion, constipation and biliousness. I have tried all the remedies advertised for these diseases, and got no permanent relief. About one year ago, the disease assuming a more severe and dangerous form, I became very weak, and lost flesh rapidly. I commenced using Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir. I gained twelve pounds in three months. My strength and health, my appetite and my digestion were perfectly restored, and now I feel as young and vigorous as I ever did in my life.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections; also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints. Having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, and desiring to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who wish it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail, by addressing, with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 820 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

JOB EARNED HIS TITLE BY GREAT SUFFERING. Had he flourished in these days, his recourse for consolation would not have been the company of three nagging friends, but a bottle of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL, which has a wonderful power to dissipate the inflammation, cool the feverishness, and completely cure boils and carbuncles.

THE COMFORTER.

BY ALICE O. HOWARD.

The sorrow that nobody mentions,
The sorrow no one may share,
Is the sorrow the dear Lord giveth
His sweetest, tenderest care.

He places his hand on the well-spring,
The quivering lips refrain,
And the eyes smile forth in defiance,
His love enfolding the pain.

He knows where the hurt is the deepest,
The tears of night and of day,
And whispering softly, "I love you,"
Brushes the dewdrops away.

The sorrow that nobody mentions,
The sorrow no one may share,
Is the sorrow the dear Lord giveth
His sweetest, tenderest care.

SOME THINGS.

The things we need in order to advance the cause of Christ may be many, but there are some things we need very much, and need them now.

The first thing we need is a general revival of spiritual power which will make the church forceful in winning souls—her great, divinely-appointed work; and unless we have this, all things else we may have will do us no good, so far as doing the work of the Master is concerned. Worldliness in the church threatens its life, and the only remedy for this lies not in discipline alone, but in the work of grace which will get these people converted, or else cause them to go out from us because they are not of us, and in either event increase the saving force of the church. When any body loses its expulsive force it must sooner or later succumb to the effects of the poisonous matter retained, and in this respect the church is no exception. The restoration of the body to health will follow such expulsion of dead matter, and the church is just now sadly in need of such expulsive force. The gastric process of discipline will not effectually do the work, and the functional remedy of a spiritual revival alone will meet the demands of the case. The heart-beat of the church must be made strong in order to send the rich blood of spiritual life through the entire body, and this can only be brought about by the pentecostal process of the Holy Ghost and power from above. In order to this, would not be well this year to make our District Conferences and the Annual Conferences gatherings at which to seek the power of God rather than the lesser things we generally look after? A waning missionary contribution marks a waning faith, and the only way to increase the former is to have an increase in the latter. Let us turn aside for a time from the question, "Are your collections full?" and ask, "Are you enjoying the full baptism of the Holy Spirit, and have you had conversion of souls?" for every church with a genuine revival will come up full along the whole line. Certainly we need, above all things, a genuine revival, from Bishops to the humblest member of the church; and he who questions this fact is sure to be one who needs it most, be he layman, circuit preacher, station preacher, or Bishop, for we are all alike but servants of Jesus Christ, and all equally dependent upon divine grace and power, for unto all he says, "Without me, ye can do nothing."

We need the influence of higher education in pulpit and pew, and the same necessity of a revival does not lessen the fact that under the influence of the Holy Ghost, the instrument will be efficient in ratio to the spiritual force to be consecrated and used by the divine power. Consecration of self must be, but the effectiveness of the consecrated individual must depend upon what is in the individual to consecrate. God can make an honest, consecrated Amos a power, but he can never make him so careful an agent as he can the more cultivated Isaiah, and the noble-hearted Peter can never be and do what is in and can be done by a consecrated Paul.

What is true of the ministry is true of the laity, for the power of reception and transmission must ever depend upon the preparation and capacity of the instrument. A cultivated ministry filled with the Holy Ghost will be efficient in ratio to the cultivated laity, so filled, unto whom they minister, and hence the establishment, endowment and maintaining of our schools is an imperative necessity for the Methodism of the future. Our sons and daughters should be provided for in district high schools, Conference colleges and connectional university by having them so furnished and endowed as to enable the church to compete with the State along this line, which gives at best but half education in mind and morals, and leaves the higher nature unprovided for. God forbid that the time should ever come when the ministry of the church shall be confined to college graduates; but the furnishing of men called of God should be one of the standing provisions of the church, so that her ministry shall come from the Sea of Galilee or the feet of Gamaliel, as God sees fit to call them to do his work. Every Methodist who loves God and his church should rally to the effort being made this year to raise a million and a half for this purpose. Let the rich give largely of their much, and the poor some of their little, and thus all of us may honor God with our substance, and put in motion waves of influence which will not cease until they reach the shore of eternity, where our "laid-up treasure" will glorify God, and receive us "into everlasting habitations." Let us remember that he who belittles learning belittles him unto whom "all things are known," just as he who belittles the poor belittles him "who, though he was rich, became poor, that ye, through his poverty, might be rich," and who in this world "had not where to lay his head."

We need a more careful training of our children in the doctrines, discipline and work of the church by catechumenal process, for which there is no adequate provision in the Sunday-school or the Epworth League. In one the Word, save in the lesson helps, and the catechism are well-nigh neglected entirely, while in the other the course is too far advanced for the little people, and we can not restore the Smaller Catechism any too soon for the good of the future church, for unless our children are instructed in this, our young people, growing up in ignorance of our peculiar faith and discipline, can not be made interested in our League work in the literary department, which is now the most difficult to work, because of a want of an earlier cultivated taste for this line of thought. The Catholics and Presbyterians are wise in the early doctrinal training they give their children, and unless we are to be content with an uninstructed and, therefore, an ignorant membership, liable to be "carried about by every wind of doctrine," we need to provide for the early instruction of our children in these things, and it is to be hoped that our Sunday-school editor will look to this matter.

I have briefly sketched three things it seems to me we, as a church, need, and do so with the hope of arousing action rather than discussion, and with only love and loyalty to our dear old church.

PRESIDING ELDERING IN THE SNOW.

"First it blew, then it snew; then it friz, and then it thew"—and then there was mud; such mud. And such a time as the "beloveds" had on their "first round," this one has never experienced before. Well, it was fully set forth as to mud in Bro. Mellen's letter in the ADVOCATE, of Feb. 23. "Gilderoy's" article, in the same number, was full of kindly sympathy for the presiding elders. He had been along there, and knew from experience their toils and turmoils. If Bro. Mellen will imagine himself two or three degrees nearer the north pole, and his prairie mud frozen hard, and then covered with ice, sleet and snow, he may form some idea of what his co-beloveds have had to encounter in North Mississippi.

Here is a sample trip: I left home by rail, and was at Coldwater in good time for Bro. Jacobs' quarterly meeting at Arkabutla, ten miles away. No conveyance. Jacobs had provided, and a buggy was in waiting for me the evening before. But the letter written to notify me was found in Jacobs' coat pocket on this same Saturday morning. He was sorry, and so was I. However, a good horse and buggy from the livery stable got me through the mud-holes and tough places. There were many of them, very muddy and very tough, and I was in time for service. But it had been growing colder, and I was too much chilled, benumbed and be muddled to go at once into the pulpit; so I went into the parsonage, thawed up a little, got off some of the mud, and thinking Jacobs could do his own preaching this morning, I presently went into the church to find him "in medias res," preaching a good sermon to a faithful few. We held Quarterly Conference after dinner; every church represented. Saturday night a blizzard from the north brought rain, freezing as it fell. Sunday morning a sheen of ice covered streets and sidewalks, and walking was perilous. A moderate congregation heard a sermon from the "beloved," in quantity sufficient for a Summer day.

Monday morning the icy, frozen mud had received a covering of sleet and snow. "Better not try it," suggested Bro. McGaha. "But I must make Coldwater, and will, if my horse can keep his feet, and my out fit holds together." The sleet pelted and bounced upon my horse's back, and rattled upon the top of my buggy, as we rumbled along over the hard, frozen, and icy road. My rig held together, my horse kept his feet, the sleet held up, and in due time I was comfortably housed in the Coldwater "manse" with Dr. Cameron and his hospitable family.

Tuesday morning found me on the train, going north, to hold quarterly meeting at Nesbit. "The ground was all covered with snow," but the bright face of the genial pastor, Charlie Moss, was like sunshine. No service, no stewards, save one (Dr. McKinnie, resident in the town). In the comfortable home of the Doctor and his excellent wife the presiding elder, preacher in charge, and our one steward, reinforced by several visitors, held Quarterly Conference about two hours long, went over all the ground, and planned for the year.

Next Saturday morning the ground was still covered with ice and snow. Snow was sifting softly from the bleak clouds above, and the mercury was dropping towards zero. Two quarterly meetings ahead of me—Pleasant Grove and Longtown; the nearer one ten miles distant. No, I shall not go. Bros. Jaco and Newsom will have to "wait a time with patience."

Next morning (Sunday) the mercury was so far below zero (6° or 8°) as to suggest a collapse of the bulb. I spent the day with "the folks at home." It was a quiet, restful, reading day, extended by the light of a lamp to a late hour in the night.

But time and the reader's patience, as well as space in the ADVOCATE, would fail me to tell of other rough experiences in the saddle, borne along safely by my plucky and faithful horse, "Jeff Davis," over frozen and glazed roads, through slush and mud; of the warm hospitality of the people, and of the preachers, all at their posts, working and preaching as they were able—a noble band of toilers in the Master's vineyard. "Going forth weeping now, they shall, doubtless, come again with rejoicing, bringing their sheaves with them."

It was a record-breaker, that first round, for the severity of the weather and the difficulties attendant upon the work of the preachers. But out of all the Lord has brought us by his grace, supplying health and strength for our labors. And now that warmer days have come, with springing flowers and singing birds, we are entering upon the second round with brightening hopes and a stronger faith for better results for the time to come.

REV. JOHN WHITE DAVIS.

My nephew, Rev. John White Davis, was born in Lincoln county, Tenn., Jan. 20, 1859, and died in great peace March 5, 1899, at the parsonage on Indian Bayou charge, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference. He was converted and joined the Methodist Church under the ministry of his brother, Robert, in Caldwell parish, in the year 1870. He was educated principally by his mother, who was a school teacher for many years. He also attended school at Centenary College. He was licensed to preach April 17, 1880, under the ministry of Rev. D. M. Rush, D. D.; admitted on trial in the Louisiana Conference in January, 1882; received into full connection January, 1884, and was ordained deacon by Bishop Kavanaugh at the same time. His first work was Sugar Town circuit. In 1887 he was transferred to the Texas Conference, and served the Dodge, Deanville, Cameron and McDade circuits. He was ordained elder by Bishop Duncan at Huntsville, Texas, November, 1888; was transferred back to the Louisiana Conference in 1891, and sent to the Black River circuit; then served the Gilbert work two years, Bienville one, Harrisonburg two, and closed his career after serving the Indian Bayou charge for a little more than one year.

On Sept. 14, 1885, he was united in wedlock to Miss Gypsie E. Holyland by the writer. They had born to them five children. One went to heaven ten years ago. The four living are: Hazel, 12; Duncan Kavanaugh, 9; Lucille, 7, and John Frederick, 3 years of age. The two eldest are members of the church.

He is not a stranger in the better land. Many of the family relations have gone before, and, doubtless, he is enjoying their companionship now. His people were very kind to the family, taking charge of his corpse, and at their own expense giving it a nice burial near the church at Indian Bayou. His widow is a well-educated, refined Christian woman, solely dependent on her own self to clothe, feed and educate the three children left with her. I would ask the brethren, in her behalf, to help her get employment as a teacher in some good school, and thus, with the pittance she will receive from the Conference, be enabled to give them a good Christian education.

His uncle, B. F. WHITE.

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

MR. EDITOR: A recent visit to Centenary College, for the purpose of placing my son under the wise and religious tutorage of Dr. I. W. Cooper and his corps of consecrated teachers, revealed some very hopeful and gratifying things. The magnificent improvements on the property have added very much to the appearance and comfort of the school. An introduction to the several professors was very much appreciated, and, I dare say, a more thoroughly competent body of men would be hard to find.

Should I attempt to speak of the sixteen young preachers who are there preparing to bless the church and the world, and should I speak of half my hopes and joys as I looked into their manly, happy faces, time would fail me, or I would consume all your space.

There I found the sons of a number of our hard-working, self-sacrificing preachers—Randle, Heffner, Tucker, Banks—and more than one hundred fine-looking, promising young men who are to go out into this and other States with the benediction of such a school as Centenary upon them. No man can estimate the value of such opportunities; no man can compute the good these boys may do.

Centenary College is, no doubt, doing the best work of any school in the land for the preachers and young men of limited means. I was glad to find some young men whose expenses are met by some Methodist laymen who have sense as well as money. An investment in a worthy young man pays a larger dividend than an investment in corner lots and sugar farms.

My visit has increased my interest and hope in Centenary a hundredfold, and I heartily recommend it to my friends in North Louisiana, hoping to assist them in getting their sons into such an institution.

The following is taken from a letter just received from my son: "We are having a good meeting in the church; considerable interest. But the best meeting that I was ever in was at the college Y. M. C. A. Hall, Saturday night. We had fourteen conversions. It did me good; it was good to be there."

The moral tone of the school has always been the best. The time is at hand when it will not be behind in anything.

A word to the preachers, and I have done. My brethren, we can, if we will, put Centenary College in the front rank of the educational work in the Church, South. Let us, therefore, remember that our responsibility is commensurate with our opportunity. "For whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance; but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that he hath."

Talk it up, pray it up, put it before our people; they are ready to respond. "Have faith in God," have faith in our own institution; they are the best for us. Success is written on our banners. Join the procession and march on to greater achievements. Yours in Christ,

HARRY W. MAY.

Amite City, La., March 24, 1899.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The outlook in every way has not been better for a good and prosperous year.

Columbus station, under the energy and wise leadership of Bowen, is moving in every way to success.

Johnson and Columbus circuit are a happy fit. The people love him, and he is doing a good work.

Crawford, with Duncan as pastor, is in fine condition. Parsonage newly painted, plan for a new church at Artesia, and all departments of church work in good condition.

Lewis proves to be the right man in the right place at Brooksville. Notwithstanding the charge has suffered greatly on account of the death and removal of six of the strongest men of the charge, the people are in good hope of a great year.

Thames is in high favor at Macon. A new parsonage is the thing that is to be secured soon; then Macon will be one of the very best charges in the Conference. Though Thames had been a presiding elder for sixteen years, he is as much at home in the pastorate as if he had not been anywhere else.

The people of Starkville hear the strong and deeply spiritual sermons of that most brilliant and energetic preacher, R. A. Meek, with great interest and profit.

Under the ministry of S. A. Brown the Starkville circuit moves forward. Some conversions and additions to the church already crown his work.

Shuqualak, with Tumlim for the third year, is steadily moving up. Good houses of worship and an improved parsonage, with increase in financial matters, are some of the evidences of his success.

West Point is in a revival all the time. McIntosh knows how to bring the lost to Christ and keep the church at work.

Spraggins, for the third year, is keeping everything in fine trim on the Tibbee charge.

Barnes has had mud, mud, but the people love him. The outlook is good.

Tucker is in great favor with the people of the Cedar Bluff charge.

Massey is doing the best he can for Sturges charge.

Bros. Hall and Barentine, as supplies, are doing well.

I have filled all the appointments of the district save one, where I was prevented on account of small-pox. Our motto this year is at least 1,000 souls and all the assessments in full, with one dollar per member for the Twentieth Century Fund.

R. A. BURROUGHS.

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

The Century Magazine, for April, contains an article of extraordinary interest and importance entitled, "The Atlantic Fleet in the Spanish War," by Rear-Admiral Sampson. Major-General Green gives a full account of the actual capture of Manila, and John T. McCutcheon describes the surrender of Manila as viewed from Admiral Dewey's flagship. Prof. Peckham's article on "Absolute Zero" gives an account of recent inventions for the production of liquid air. Mr. Ford's biographical serial of Benjamin Franklin treats of "Franklin as Printer and Publisher."

The April Cosmopolitan Magazine opens with a beautifully illustrated article entitled, "Napoleon at Moscow Portrayed by Verestchagin." A new novel by Count Tolstoy, illustrated by Pasternak, appears in this number. "The Building of an Empire," a series of articles by the editor, J. B. Walker, reaches its third installment. F. W. Morgan treats of "Recent Developments in Industrial Organization." "The University and Democracy," by President Harper, of the University of Chicago, is the title of a splendid article in which he shows the relation between the university and democracy, and also the relation between the university and life. Besides a number of other interesting articles, there are several poems and short stories.

"Easter in the Church," picturing some churches most artistically decorated for Easter, appropriately opens the April Ladies' Home Journal. Three articles of peculiar interest are entitled: "How to Be Pretty, Though Plain;" "About Men," emphasizing the evils of flirting, and "What It Means to Be a Housewife," showing the demands and requirements of the vocation. There is the usual amount of fiction.

According to the late statistics the churches of the United States are increasing in membership more rapidly than population. The membership in all the churches for 1898 was 27,741,523. This is an increase during the year of 862,300, or over 3 per cent. The membership of the Roman Catholic Church is put down at 8,395,178. But this includes the Catholic population. The Methodist Church, communicants of only 5,808,094, with a gain of 162,196; the Baptist Church comes next, with 4,364,427, with a gain of 131,465.—Wesleyan Advocate.

SELF-DENIAL.

We have two things to do, to live and die:
To win another and a longer life
Out of this earthly change and weary strife;
To catch the hours that one by one go by,
And write the cross upon them as they fly.
So shall they lay their burden gently down,
Sinking, perchance hard by, beneath the throne,
Withdrawn anew into eternity.
'Tis hard to live by youth's fast-bubbling springs,
And treat our loves joys, hopes as flowery things,
That for awhile may climb the boughs, and twine
Among the prickey leaves of discipline,
Yet would'st thou rise in Christ's self-mastering school,
The very heart itself must beat by rule.

"THE NATURE AND FUNCTIONS OF CONSCIENCE."

BY REV. WM HAZELMORE VAN VALKENBURGH

"And herein do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offense toward God, and toward men."—Paul, in Acts xxiv, 16.

I. In discussing this subject of conscience, we shall endeavor to keep before our minds especially the scriptural and higher conception of conscience and its office. With the relation that psychology has assigned to conscience in its connection with the mind, or in its supremacy over matter, as related to the will, we have nothing to do. Paul's endeavor here, in the passage quoted, is, that he may place before his hearers, in its proper light, a picture of the conscience in its normal condition of righteousness, in its right relations both to God and man.

(2) That God intends that man should acknowledge allegiance to a Divine Being, and that from this acknowledgement should flow a corresponding responsibility to his fellowman, seems evident. Paul exercises himself (endeavors) to have a good conscience. "Men and brethren," says he, "I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day." (Acts xxiii, 1) Paul's was an intelligent preparation. He won his acceptance into divine favor by (or through) his strenuous efforts at meeting the requirements of the divine law. "For not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified." (Rom. ii, 13) Paul exalts the office of conscience in that he lives up to the dictates of an enlightened one.

II. We, therefore, draw this conclusion: That obedience to a good conscience brings to its possessor peace, joy, and a large sense of freedom. Even so, yet this sense of freedom is equivalent to an assurance of qualifications sufficient to meet life's responsibilities, and accordingly energizes and stimulates for the conflict. Thus Paul exercises himself (endeavors). Properly-directed endeavors, then, cost time, and a reasonable outlay of strength-investigation; but such endeavors pay dividends on the bank of heaven—interest-bearing notes that guarantee the perpetuity of Christian character. "Yet many go wrong who follow conscience."

III. This leads us to examine into "the nature and functions of conscience." (a) Properly instructed and developed, and in its normal condition, conscience is unerring. That conscience is always an unerring guide need only to be so stated, and is thus refuted. Instances of demoralized consciences abound both in heathen countries and in our own land. The heathen votaries bowing to a god of wood or stone, or celebrating a festival in honor of characters of lewdness or of licentiousness only goes to prove that conscience is not an infallible guide.

(2) Conscience in the New Testament has separate meanings. (a) First: Conscience is used as "an inward moral impression of one's actions and principles." But the ability to estimate the moral worth of acts, and of principle, does not entirely answer the ends of the case in this instance, for Paul exercises himself—endeavors to maintain that dignity of Christian character which will enable him to have a clear conscience; that shall guarantee to him that he is in harmony with the purposes of the divine will, and in sympathy with the life of his fellow-man. (b) Again: Conscience is used as "the inward moral and spiritual frame." And yet Paul hardly has reference just here to a frame in which he remains so much as he does to a condition which, by exertion, he achieves. (c) The other definition we give here is that conscience is "the inward faculty of moral judgment." We prefer, however, to revise this one, and to say that "conscience is the inward faculty of spiritual and moral judgment." And by spiritual judgment we simply mean a spiritual discernment. (d) And thus, then, combining the first and last definition in the order given, we have as conscience, and within its scope of action, the ability to determine one's condition before God, as well as its own relation to, and capacity for, governing the actions, the conduct of man.

(3) A certain writer has felicitously contrasted the attributes of the mind, the judgment, the memory, and the reason, to a court of hearing; then, in an emergency, when temptation arises, and the functions of the mind are brought into play, the judgment, memory and reason each happily performing their offices, the conscience represents the sheriff, and not the judge—its office being to bring the derelict to justice, and not to judge of his condition. The Greek word here (suneidasin), meaning void of offense, conveys the idea of a stumbling-stone or rock of offense. And Paul is careful that the way between himself and God be not blocked, and also that he and his fellow-man are at peace one with the other. He is careful that he, at least, is not himself the cause of offense. A mind in accord—yea, more, a mind in unison—with the divine one is Paul's constant endeavor. (a) "But," says one, "you say many go wrong who follow conscience." "Yes, some do; yet not all." Conscience is our best guide, and yet not an infallible one. Conscience, when it speaks, must be obeyed at the cost of liberty, and yet, to be a faithful coadjutor in working out man's salvation, it must reign in a well-instructed, a carefully-developed mind. "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge" (says the Lord, Amos iv, 6). And by a well-instructed and carefully-developed mind I simply mean this: that it is a sensitive one; sensitive to the leadings of the "Holy Spirit," and instructed in the things of divine revelation. The direction of Paul's exercise was intelligent preparation for the conflict of life, supported upon his part by a constant effort to know the mind of God.

(4) Conscience, then, assumes the attitude of monitor rather than that of teacher. Its function is positive in that its demands are explicit; obedience to its laws must be absolute, and yet negative, in that it simply holds its own, stands guard over one's moral and spiritual life, and is not heard unless its laws are violated, or unless its edicts are ignored. Like a consistent sentinel, it stands guard over the precinct assigned it. In the sublime grandeur that attaches to the functions of its office, it demands obedience. (a) It is more strictly a prompter, and not a guide. The earnest promptings of this deeper nature are heard more plainly when one's most alone, and yet are heard just as positively when one is in the busy marts of trade.

IV. Thus, how careful one should always be that the smallest whisperings of conscience might awaken the proper response within one's breast; that the finest treble strings of the soul should vibrate as readily to the divine touch, and that they should convey as sweet strains of heavenly love to one's self, and in as full harmony with the divine plan and mind as the louder and coarser symphonies of the bass. Surely, if there is a divine plan, which, as law, is controlling the universe, and is ruling in and regulating the constellations of the heavenly world, there is also such a divine plan upon which, as psychological law, the most delicate organisms of the human soul have been constructed, and in which realm the harmonies of the divine law form diapason strains in honor of the Creator's name.

A SUNDAY WITH THE MOUND BUILDERS.

Last Sunday morning was cool and exhilarating, clear and bright and inspiring—an ideal Sabbath of quiet and calmness and golden sunshine after weeks of blow and bluster and cloud and rain. God seemed to be especially near, and to fill the broad disk of our hopes with the transcendent glory of his present and future reality. It is easy to feel devotional and reverent and buoyant when the Shekinah rests in a glow of fervid and conscious fire upon the humble heart turned upon thoughts of God.

Under these hallowed influences I started out to my appointment, eight miles away, but found I could only get within three miles of the church, on account of high water. The bridge spanning the bayou was afloat and parted asunder in the midst, so I had to give up my cherished desire of preaching Christ to the people on that lovely day. I took dinner with one of my members, and went out in the beautiful afternoon to visit and study the prehistoric mounds near by, of which there were five in number. These are all situated in close proximity, so that you might stand upon any one of them and converse in medium tone of voice with a person on either one of the others. They form a kind of town, though they seem to observe no regular order. One towered high above all the rest like the imperial Cheops among the pyramids. It covers, I suppose, a half or three-quarters of an acre of land, and after centuries of storm and blast and constant corrosions of the seasons, it rises 30 or 35 feet above the common level. It is built in the exact form of a pyramid, with a broad and substantial base, and gradually narrowing with beautiful and artistic symmetry to the top. No large trees have ever grown upon it, but it has a miniature forest of its own. One of these mounds right near the house of the man who owns the place has been plowed and worked down for many years. A part of it lies in the garden, and is as rich as cream as all of them are. This gentleman told me about two skeletons he had plowed up on this mound. These were whole skeletons, and all the bones were in their place. Besides these, which were very large and gigantic, he had unearthed innumerable parts of skeletons of different heights and sizes, such as skulls and arms and legs and jawbones and teeth, etc. And besides the wrecks of human bodies, he had unearthed shells and rocks of different shapes and colors and artificial design, such as were never seen in nature. Then he exhibited several little curios he had exhumed, one of which was a little dish wrought into the shape of a wild duck. There was the neck with the natural curve and grace of a duck swimming in the water. Then there was the broad bill and proud head almost perfect. This figure of a duck was made, as was revealed by close examination, of the mussel shell reduced to very fine particles, then mixed with clay, and burned by some process which rendered it invulnerable to the attacks of time. There was a bowl also of peculiar interest which he had plowed up. It was beautiful in shape and finish, about 8 or 10 inches across the top, and about 5 or 6 inches deep. It was painted in red and white stripes alternating, and the stripes widening as they approach the top or broader surface, and vice versa as they reach the bottom. Inside the bowl was painted red to within an inch of the top. Its composition was the same as the other article, the fine shell shining and glistening like isinglass or pearl dust. Another culinary vessel was found, a small pot, shape and legs all just like the pot we use. In the vicinity of these mounds a large green tree was uptorned by a storm, and under the tap root was found another article almost the shape and size of a saucer. Walking over the mound, we picked up numbers of pieces of skulls, occipital and parietal plates remarkably preserved. We picked up bones of the arm and upper and lower leg; finger bones—lots of them. The middle bone of some of the fingers were almost as long as my entire finger. Some of them were large and thick, and looked like they might have come from the hand of a giant. Others were small and tapering, like the exquisite finger of Gotham's immortal society belles. We found the upper and lower jawbones, and one piece of the superior maxillary, with four sound, white, pretty teeth in it—three of the molars and one eye tooth; so, whoever the mound builders were, they cut their eye teeth before they died. The enamel on these teeth was white as pearl, and without a crack or a particle of discolor. Whatever they had, or did not have, they didn't have toothache or dentist's bills to pay.

I could not describe my feelings as I stood in the midst of this ghostly desolation of human beings. Every bone and finger seemed to tell its own story; every tongueless, hairless skull spoke from out the dark, unknown past. Who were the mound builders? From whence did they come? What was their condition, mental and moral? are questions that can not be answered yet. Like the moth, they seemed to burst into life under the glow of the sunbeam, and expire with the lulling zephyr; no past, no future. I thought of the prophet who stood in the midst of a similar scene—"the valley full of bones." "Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain, that they may live!"

"Behold this ruin!
'Twas a skull once of eternal spirit full.
This narrow cell was life's retreat;
This space was thought's mysterious seat.
Nor love, nor joy, nor hope, nor fear,
Has left one trace of record here."

What a strange, uneventful life was that!—their minds not occupied with the thoughts of a coming kingdom or a better day. They did not see the light coming up the steps of time, nor the old world growing brighter. They did not see its day dawn sublime, nor did high hopes make the heart beat lighter. How much better are thousands of people of this time, with all their added advantages! All life is strung upon the idea of a kingdom to come. It rules the world from Alpha to Omega, and takes in all from zenith to nadir. Let us learn that God delights not in the legs of a man.

POLYGAMY.

I saw an article in the ADVOCATE recently concerning polygamy as practiced by Mormons. I want to say something on the same subject. The facts for this article are gathered from a letter written by Prof. M. E. Jones, Salt Lake City, Utah, and published in the New York Independent.

We can not understand the position of polygamy in Utah without a statement of the way marriages are performed. Almost anyone can perform the marriage ceremony, and these ceremonies take place in Mormon temples, where no Gentile is ever allowed to enter. They are secret and oath-bound, and the records of such marriages are secret, and, therefore, never given to the law. When officers of the law have demanded these records in court, the temple custodians have invariably perjured themselves under oath, saying the records were not kept, or could not be found. (See trials for polygamy in '85 and '86) Ninety-nine out of every hundred polygamists, when brought to trial, commit perjury without hesitancy, and are advised to do so by the church leaders. (Address of "Apostle" J. H. Smith, at Beaver, Utah, in '86) They have gone so far as to compel polygamous wives to swear they did not know who were the fathers of their own offspring. (See trial of Parry, in November, '86.) Perjurers, instead of being discredited, were rewarded by higher offices in the church, and occupy them to-day, as well as continuing to live in polygamy.

Senator George Q. Cannon, in the Forty-third Congress, swore thus: "I deny that I live in violation of the laws of the United States. I deny that I have four wives." At another time, in the same contest, he swore thus: "I admit that I have plural wives who have lived with me a number of years." So it would seem that Roberts is not the first man with plural wives to be elected to Congress. Perjury has been the rule in Mormon history, and has been justified by the Mormon Church.

Social vice is rampant, and chastity is the exception, not the rule. (Prof. Jones, in New York Independent.) There is no law in the State against adultery and polygamy which is enforced. These against incest and fornication are not enforced except against Gentiles. Nearly all the officers are Mormons or Mormon sympathizers. No law, however stringent, can be enforced. The correctness of this statement may be seen from the fact that the prosecuting attorney of each county has the exclusive right to originate all cases, and he, being a Mormon, would effectually block all prosecutions. Why are the laws against polygamy not enforced? The above answers that question forever, and we need not be deceived by a lying Mormon footpad with reference to the present practice of polygamy in Utah.

The relation of polygamy to Mormonism is necessary, vital to its integrity, fundamental to the coherence and consistency of Mormon faith. I here present some facts which evidence the indispensability of polygamy to the Mormon creed.

1. On May 2, '85, the Mormon people assembled in a mass convention at Salt Lake City to prepare a "Declaration of Grievances and Protest" against the prosecution of polygamists by the Federal courts. This "Declaration" was presented to Cleveland by Jno. T. Caine, Utah's representative in Congress, asking the kindly offices of the Executive in behalf of polygamy, because it was a "vital religious doctrine." The declaration stated that "one of the doctrines of our church is plural marriage. This is a vital part of our religion." This "protest" became a State paper, thus committing the Mormon Church to polygamy forever.

2 He who was not only Redeemer, but example also, was a polygamist. "One thing is certain: that there were several holy women who loved Jesus, and he loved them, and associated with them much. If all the acts of Jesus were written, we, no doubt, should learn that these women were his wives." ("The Seer.")

3 Polygamy is necessary to man's exaltation. He who refuses to enter this relation can not be deified.

4. Polygamy is indispensable to Mormonism in order to the extension of the divine domain. By providing spirits with bodies they become gods, when they can create worlds for their descendants. Thus planet is added to planet and system to system eternally, and the empire of God (Adam) extends itself in direct ratio of the multiplication of his increasing posterity. The more rapid this evolution of gods and worlds, the more rapid the expansion of his empire.

Enough has been said to show the necessity of polygamy to the integrity of the Mormon creed; to show also why polygamy was not abandoned when the Woodruff manifesto was issued; to explain why the Mormon Church has not disciplined one member for the practice of polygamy, and why Mormon "Bishops" have blessed plural wives when bringing their unlawful offspring to the altar, calling them "daughters of Zion," and is an explanation of why children are constantly born to plural wives since Statehood came. It is their religion.

NATCHEZ DISTRICT PREACHERS' MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

The Preachers' Missionary Institute of the Natchez district convened in the Methodist Church at Centerville, Miss., Wednesday morning, March 16, in response to the call of our faithful and wide-awake presiding elder, Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, who was present and acted as chairman. The following brethren were in attendance, namely: Revs. R. D. Norsworthy, H. D. Howell, J. T. Abney, C. C. Griffin, R. A. Breland, J. E. Gray, M. M. Black, and M. H. Moore.

The opening sermon was preached by Bro. R. D. Norsworthy, who gave us a very stirring, instructive, and thoughtful discourse, based on Mark xvi, 15. We wish every congregation in the district could have heard it.

On Wednesday night Bro. H. D. Howell preached a strong and persuasive sermon to a well-filled house, using as a text I. Tim. i, 15.

The following topics were discussed during the session of the Institute, several of them at considerable length: (1) "How Shall We, as Preachers, Become More Thoroughly Imbued with the Spirit of Missions?" (2) "How Shall We Imbue Our People with the Missionary Spirit?" (3) "What Are Efficient and Well-Ordered Plans for Raising Our Missionary Assessments?" (4) "The Providential Call of the Twentieth Century to the Church of the Nineteenth for Enlarged Liberality and Effort in Mission Work." (5) "The Work of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society." (6) "Our Duty to the Colored Race in the South."

No little interest was aroused by the discussions, and much light was shed upon matters of vital importance as regards the success of our missionary plans and the discharge of our missionary obligations. Unless we are mistaken, the missionary zeal of each brother present was greatly stimulated, and valuable hints were gained that are sure to bear fruit in the near future.

The attendance on the part of the Centerville people was surprisingly small. However, there was no lack as regards entertainment. The Institute adjourned on Thursday, at one P. M. Unfortunately, several of the pastors could not be with us, and so missed a great means of inspiration.

The Christian Life.

THE HABIT OF DEVOTION.

In the hour of justification and conversion the human soul comes into the originally contemplated filial relation with the divine Father. Reconciliation is complete. The habit of devotion is in its incipiency. A new life dawns. To broaden and perfect this life the habit of devotion is indispensable. Devotion develops strength and joy. Such energy and bliss are powerful factors in the enlargement and refinement of the soul. We would emphasize the necessity for fostering and solidifying this freshly-acquired habit. It must be fed, stimulated, and enriched. Left to itself, it will droop and die like a flower bereft of sunshine and rain. It will perish like a forsaken nursling. The first acts of worship must be repeated. The means of grace must be utilized continually. Then the timid, tentative approaches of the soul to God will become fixed traits of character, and what might have proved superficial and evanescent will become deep and lasting ingredients of the spiritual life. But if this habit should be once thoroughly incorporated into the soul, the happy possessor thereof would have one of the mightiest moral safeguards and one of the richest fountains of peace and joy. Such a habit is unspeakably blessed—strength and rapture incomparable.—Texas Christian Advocate.

LOVE'S MISSION.

Love is always building up. It puts some line of beauty on every life it touches. It gives new hope to discouraged ones, new strength to those who are weak, new joys to those who are sorrowing, thus enabling them to go on in life's ways when, without the cheer, they must have sunk down in their disheartenment. It helps the despairing to rise and start again. It makes life seem more worth while to everyone into whose eyes it looks. Its words are benedictions. Its every breath is full of inspiration. It does good and never evil all its days. It is like God, whose name is love. It carries in its influence a perpetual revealing of God. It goes through the world like an angel of joy and peace, singing into human hearts the song of heaven, scattering everywhere good seeds which shall yield a harvest of righteousness.—Westminister Teacher.

Religion is a thing for the whole year. There may be a Summer type of it, but it must in one form or another be characteristic of the whole of life. The Christian is never off duty. Opportunities to serve the Lord may everywhere be found. Seashore and mountain may be recognized as a sanctuary, and every secluded nook where tired humanity rests for a season become an oratory where praise, albeit silently, perpetually ascends to the great Creator, who hath "made Summer" as well as Winter, and who never ceases to expect and crave the homage of those who love him.—New York Observer.

What we all want is inward rest—rest of heart and brain; the calm, strong, self-contained, self-denying character which needs no stimulants, for it has no fits of depression; which needs no narcotics, for it has no fits of excitement; which needs no ascetic restraint, for it is strong enough to use God's gifts without abusing them: the character, in a word, which is truly temperate, not in drink and food merely, but in all desires, thoughts and actions.—Kingsley.

There is so much to be set right in the world, there are so many to be led and helped and comforted, that we must continually come in contact with such in our daily life. Let us only take care that we do not miss our turn of service, and pass by those to whom we might have been sent on an errand straight from God.

Hath any wronged thee? Be bravely revenged! Slight it, and the work is begun; forgive it, and the work is finished.—Quarles.

REV J. D. NEWSOM.

Rev. J. D. Newsom's interesting letter in this week's issue takes me back forty years to the time I first heard him preach. Being a young teacher, and among entire strangers, he sent me a word of counsel by a mutual friend, which proved very beneficial to me; and when I left the community, all seemed to be my warm friends. What a brave, industrious "soldier of the cross" he is! Would that every young preacher would ponder well his words! He's the only man I ever saw, the expression of whose countenance constantly made me think of Moses—he looked so meek. In 1880 I heard him again at Whitworth College, the same expression of face and zeal for Christ characterizing him then. God grant him many friends in his new home, and may they not only "hold up his hands" in his noble work, but also relieve his feet from too much walking! How ecstatic the enjoyment of such a man will be in the "New Jerusalem," where he can "see Him face to face" whom He has served so faithfully, and "will know as he is known!"

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. Sam Q. Bass, Corinth, Miss., March 27, 1899: "I am ready to respond to any call the pastor may give me. I'll go to any point on the globe to help a faithful pastor. I see letters in the ADVOCATE from some of the preachers that make me feel like I want to start to help them to-day. May the Lord bless and help them in their work! The church at this place is moving on and upward. Bro. Lance, the pastor, is a noble man, a fine preacher, and greatly beloved by everyone. The Corinth district, under the wise leadership of Bro. Ramsey, is getting on nicely. Bro. Ramsey fills the bill as a presiding elder. There is nothing like harmony between presiding elder, pastor and local preacher."

REPORT FROM THE COLUMBIA CHARGE, ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT.

This will inform you that if my name is George D. Anders, I am in Columbia, La.; if not, I have found a town on the Ouachita river. If my mind serves me right, I am from the Baton Rouge district. The good people of this charge gave us a cordial reception, and we are domiciled in a good parsonage, and am thankful to say that it is well furnished. We are fortunate, or unfortunate—I can't say which—in having five kinds of Methodists in this charge. They are as follows: Northern Methodist, Southern Methodist, Free Methodist, Protestant Methodist, and Methodists that protest.

This state of things places me in the condition like the Southern man during the late war. When the Union soldiers were present he was a Union man, and when the Southern soldiers were present he was a Southern man. It happened one day that the Blue and Gray were both there at the same time. They jointly said to him, "What are you to-day?" He said, "I am nothing, and mighty little of that." When the Free Methodists ask me if I believe in entire sanctification, I say, "Yes;" and when they ask me if I believe in the second blessing, I say "Yes," provided you don't get the second blessing first.

The work is moving on nicely. We have made seventy visits. There have been two accessions to the church and one bright conversion. We have organized three Sunday-schools. Dr. J. A. Parker was on hand the first quarterly meeting, and made a good impression on the people. We enjoyed his visit so much. G. D. ANDERS.

SATARTIA, MISS.

We have been hindered no little by the cold, snow, and mud; not as much, however, as some of the "beloveds." It was very interesting to read the experiences of the cold and mud bound "beloveds." The press is a wonderful medium. If it were not for the papers, we would not be half so wise. By means of the press we learn all about our new officers, who they are, what kind of offices they fill, etc. It's a good thing to know men and their whereabouts.

Our first Quarterly Conference has come and gone. Our "beloved" was on hand. He did not come, however, in that fast style that tells of the rapid progress of the nineteenth century, as many of the beloveds want to do, but he came by the good old-time way—on horseback, with the old-time saddle-bags. The old-time style did not diminish his worth; neither did it lower him in the eyes and hearts of our people.

We had a very interesting Quarterly Conference, indeed. The beloved seemed to be fully at himself; preached with that same ease and presided with that same ability that is characteristic of Dr. E. H. Monnger, presiding elder of the Vicksburg district. We all love our presiding elder, and think he is the right man in the right place.

Most all of our stewards were on hand, and made a liberal assessment for the preacher in charge. Noble band they are. Our presiding elder told us that, as yet, we were in the lead, in point of finances, in the district (Vicksburg station not excepted). This made us take on quite a swell. However, there will be plenty of time for the swell to get off. Our stewards were very much stimulated by their first report, and, no doubt, they will put forth extra efforts to keep up their reputation.

Our people are hopeful. The prospects are good for a fine year's work. I have never served a more loyal people anywhere. They seem to be willing to stand by their pastor in "every good word and work." We have been with this people for more than two years, and they continue to show very great appreciation for us. May we ever be found ready to minister to their needs as they are to ours!

God bless you, Mr. Editor! Let the good work go on for the ADVOCATE.

C. C. EVANS, P. C.

March 27, 1899.

LAKE PROVIDENCE, LA.

We are getting along very well on the Lake Providence circuit in many ways. We arrived here Saturday, the last day of December, 1898, about five o'clock in the morning. The night had been stormy, and snow was on the ground. It was a very disagreeable night, but when we arrived at the parsonage we found our much esteemed brother, Prof. Dudley, expecting us. He soon had a fire, and we were comfortably housed. We found that the good people of our church had made preparation for our comfort, and after we had eaten breakfast, Sister Dudley turned over the premises to us. We found quite a supply of provisions—some cooked, some not cooked, but all very acceptable to this preacher in charge. We have had good congregations all the year; have filled every appointment except one Sunday night, when the mercury was four degrees below zero. There is very considerable improvement in some lines, especially in the spirituality of the church. We have forty to sixty at our prayer meetings on Wednesday night, and there is great interest manifested in the church for a revival of religion, which we hope to see soon.

On Wednesday, the twenty-second, wagon after wagon, and porter after porter, came to the parsonage, bringing something for the pastor's "store-room;" one-half barrel of flour, hams, breakfast bacon, sugar, coffee, rice, grits, canned goods, etc., until thirty, or more, different kinds of useful and necessary things were piled on the gallery, or in the store-room, so that I think that, although our family numbers six, and all pretty good eaters, we will have enough to run us in this line for weeks and weeks; but this is not all. They have paid money enough to keep us from going in debt; so that, all together, we feel that we are doing well.

The roads have been impassable in the country, and I have not been in the Pecan Grove neighborhood yet. We are in a bad condition down there. No house to hold service in, and membership scattered, and roads so very bad that if we had a good church, we could not have service. My predecessor, Bro. F. S. Parker, secured lumber and subscription for a church. The lumber is on hand, but the money has not been collected. We sold the old church two or three years ago. One hundred dollars was paid, and notes given for the remainder; but, although the notes have been due for a year, or two, they have not been paid, and only this morning have we been able to find where the notes were. As soon as possible we (myself and committee) will see what can be done about collecting the notes and the subscription. We have some hope of building in the near future.

The river is just getting out of its banks. We don't know what will be the condition of things a little later on. In 1882 I was pastor here, and we were nearly washed away by the overflow, the levee breaking just in front of our house. I hope we will not have that experience repeated this year. H. O. WHITE.

The time of seed-sowing passes quickly. Ere it be gone, let me consider closely, "Have I sown the seed of all I purpose to have?" For as is the seed-sowing, so must be the Summer glory and the Autumn fruition.—Sarah Smiley.

When a man is struck down by a poisoned arrow tipped with the venom of the deadliest of serpents, he knows that his time has come. Death is only a question of moments; but not one man in a thousand realizes that when a little extra bile gets into his blood his whole system is being poisoned just as truly as if a venom-tipped arrow was sticking in his vitals.

Rattlesnake poison is a good deal quicker than bile-poison but the latter will do just as deadly work if it keeps on accumulating in the system. Probably two-thirds of the cases that end in consumption begin with "liver complaint" and indigestion. These troubles would never get as far as consumption if Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery was used before the bile-poisoning got fairly under way. This remarkable "Discovery" invigorates the torpid liver and gives it power to filter the poisons out of the system rapidly and thoroughly.

It strengthens the digestive fluids and enables them to make rich red nourishing blood; it builds up healthy muscle, steady nerve force and enduring strength.

The experience of Mr. Val Burkard, living at 65 Mohr Ave., Buffalo, N. Y., is given in his own words: "Five weeks ago I followed your advice and took two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and also two bottles of the 'Pleasant Pellets.' I consider myself entirely cured, as there have been no eruptions since I finished the last bottle. I think it is the greatest remedy on the globe for blood and digestive disorders. My appetite increased wonderfully and I have also gained flesh. I would like everybody to know the true value of Dr. Pierce's medicines as I am confident by persistent use they cure all ailments for which they are recommended."

—THE—
"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION
of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.
New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangment for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

KEEPING WARM.

During the severe blizzard, some weeks since, keeping warm was, for the time being, the chief object of attention and effort. The icy blasts from the north sent the price of fuel surging upward, brought woolens, overcoats and arctics into indispensable requisition, and made a cozy corner by the fire doubly delightful. Never before, perhaps, in this section were people so concerned about keeping warm.

But while all classes endeavor to protect themselves at such a season from the fierce cold that benumbs and imperils the physical man, how few are concerned about protecting the soul from the chilling blasts of temptation and the freezing effects of sin! Keeping the body warm is of small moment as compared with maintaining the temperature of the soul at the point of robust health.

It is amazing how vast the number of professing Christians who seem to be afraid of becoming over-heated spiritually. Alas! the chill of death is on them. Fervent love, burning zeal, warmth of heart they know not, neither desire, and like a man freezing in the snow, they wish to be left undisturbed.

Astonishingly like the effect of cold upon the body is the effect of sin upon the spiritual nature. First, it benumbs, and then it converts into a corpse. The unrepentant sinner is almost as dead to spiritual things as a corpse is to material things. Only the power of divine grace can impart the breath and warmth of spiritual life which begins in regeneration.

Unless there be diligent use of the means ordained to maintain spiritual warmth, the temperature is sure to decline, and danger and loss are sure to be increased. One of the means employed to keep the body warm in Winter is fire. How indescribably cheering and comforting is the glow of a good fire when the Frost King is abroad and the earth is wrapped in an icy mantle! Not less comforting is the warmth that comes from the spiritual fire kindled in the sanctuary where God's children meet together in faith. He who willingly neglects to attend the house of God is certain to become chilled in spirit.

Just as we protect the body from cold and from sudden changes by the use of suitable clothing, likewise we must guard the soul from being chilled by having on constantly the divinely-woven robe of righteousness. However much we may use the forms of religion, our hearts will not be kept warm, until we are willing to become the Lord's, and put on the beauteous garments of holiness and truth. He who keeps on this robe will have a glow of peace and joy, no matter how dark the clouds above him, or how fiercely the winds of trial beat upon him.

In keeping the body warm, another essential is food. How wonderfully an ample meal fortifies one against the cold, and enables men to bid defiance in large measure to the elements!

Thick clothing and roaring fires of themselves, however, are not enough. We must have fuel for the body also, else in a little while the lamp of life will go out. Similarly the soul must be fed upon manna from heaven, or it will shortly succumb to spiritual numbness. To keep warm, spiritually, without nourishing the soul by constant prayer and the study of God's Holy Word, is as impossible as preserving heat and strength in the physical man without food.

Another means of keeping warm is exercise. Though the ground be covered with snow, the average boy has little use for fire or wraps so long as he can throw snow-balls or skate upon the ice. The briskier the exercise, the warmer he gets. Here is a lesson for the Christian. A little vigorous exercise in the Master's service would do more towards warming the heart and reviving the experience of many a chilly Christian than anything else that could be prescribed. If, instead of merely wishing to be saints, we would begin to do the work of saints, our feelings would be more saintly. The man who toils energetically for God and for humanity finds it easy to maintain the warmth and brightness that characterize the life that is "hid with Christ in God."

It is announced through the press that Dr. Hoss has declined the presidency of the University of Georgia.

A THANK-OFFERING BY TAXATION.

A correspondent has something to say with reference to the "Twentieth Century Educational Movement." After speaking of the large number of poor people in our church, he says: "Everyone of these must be taxed one dollar for said fund; and you are doing all you can through the columns of your paper to impose said tax." Our brother is, of course, joking. There is no tax levied on anybody, rich or poor, for the "Twentieth Century Educational Fund." The General Conference, the college of Bishops, the Annual Conferences, the General Board of Education and the Conference Boards have appealed to the church to raise a thank-offering of $1,500 000. As we have about a million and a half of members, the sum proposed to be raised amounts, on an average, to a dollar per capita. But nobody expects everybody to give just a dollar—neither more nor less. There are some among us who ought to give thousands to this cause, and others who ought to give hundreds, while from others a fraction of a dollar, like the widow's mite, would be highly pleasing to the Lord of the treasury. Moreover, the giving is to be purely voluntary—a thank-offering to Almighty God for his manifold blessings to us as a church. The idea of taxation is not in the movement at all.

What a spectacle that would be—a great church raising a thank-offering by taxation! This would be something new under the sun. Any movement of this sort we would condemn most unsparingly. Such a thank-offering would not be acceptable to God, for "he loveth a cheerful giver." Each pastor is expected to try to get contributions, as far as practicable, from his entire membership; but there is a slight difference between soliciting a contribution and levying a tax.

NEW ORLEANS SUNDAY-SCHOOL UNION.

The Methodist Sunday-school Union, of this city, celebrated its fifty-third anniversary at Carondelet Street Church last Sunday afternoon. As usual, there was a large attendance. The president, A. F. Godat, presided. Presiding Elder Keener made the opening prayer. The annual address was delivered by Rev. E. N. Evans. It was interesting, thoughtful, and appropriate. The secretary, Col. David Zable, read an elaborate report, giving full statistics from the several schools. The banner for the best all-around average was awarded to Felicity Street Sunday-school, the presentation being made by Dr. W. H LaPrade. Parker Memorial has the largest enrolment. The largest attendance is in Louisiana Avenue, the average for the year being 141, exclusive of teachers. The largest attendance in proportion to enrollment is in Gretna, the average being 78 per cent. The largest contribution to foreign missions is by Carondelet—$99.20. Douglass Mission raised the largest sum for Sunday-school purposes—$210. In the number of accessions to the church from the Sunday-school, Rayne Memorial takes precedence, the number being fourteen. There were a few juvenile recitations. The service of song was appropriate and well-rendered.

A QUERY.

A brother wishes us to state how the "Twentieth Century Fund" will be applied—that part of it that is left after Vanderbilt gets its pro rata. He wishes especially to know whether this fund will make tuition free in our colleges. Of course, being an editor, we are supposed to know everything that is knowable. But there are some things that lie beyond even an editor's ken, and one of these is the very thing here inquired about—the details of the use that will be made in future years of a fund yet to be raised. It would be well, however, for those who are dreaming of free tuition to bring the mathematician's art into requisition long enough to ascertain how large an endowment fund would be needed in order to give free tuition to all the pupils in our colleges. If Southern Methodism is to achieve anything so colossal as that during the present century, she needs to increase her speed about a thousandfold, and keep it up to the last second. It is our opinion that universal free tuition in our colleges is not in the thought of "the powers that be," though provision for aiding the poor to obtain an education will doubtless be aimed at.

A GOOD BEGINNING.

Samuel Cupples, of St. Louis, has given $25,000 to Central College. This is so far the largest contribution to the Twentieth Century Education Fund among Southern Methodists. George T. Hoagland, of St. Joseph, Mo., has given $1,000 to our Cuban Mission work. Two Koreans, Gen. Yun and Hon. T. H. Yun, have given $1,000 each to the Industrial School at Songdo, Corea. Let us hope that these are but the drops that precede a copious shower of thank-offerings to God for his infinite mercies.

"THE ILLUSTRATED AMERICAN METHODIST MAGAZINE."

When we gave our notice of the first issue of "The Illustrated American Methodist Magazine," our columns were so much crowded that we could not say all we wanted to say. The editor-in-chief, Dr. James W. Lee, is a prominent minister in the Southern Methodist Church. Echoes from his pulpit in Atlanta and in St Louis have been heard throughout our bounds. In the field of authorship he has a national, and even more than a national, reputation through his learned book, "The Making of a Man." He is also widely known as a lecturer in the North as well as in the South. His name on the editorial page is a guarantee of literary excellence. Thousands of people only need to see this magazine in order to become subscribers. A sample copy can be had for ten cents by writing to The Methodist Magazine Publishing Co., St. Louis Mo.

NEW BOOKS.

THE SCHOOL OF LIFE—DIVINE PROVIDENCE IN THE LIGHT OF MODERN SCIENCE. THE LAW OF DEVELOPMENT APPLIED TO CHRISTIAN THINKING AND CHRISTIAN LIVING. By Theodore F. Seward. 12 mo. 267 pages. Cloth. Price, $1. Paper. 50 cents. New York: James Pott & Co., publishers. Fourth avenue and 22nd street.

It is generally supposed that scientific evolution and Christianity have nothing in common; that between the two there are irreconcilable differences; but the conflict, as Mr. Seward shows in this book, is only seeming, and not real. The author makes it clear that the doctrine of evolution does not involve the rejection of the Bible or the denial of supernatural agency, but, on the contrary, fosters an intelligent belief in the divine immanence. While at one time to be an apostle of evolution meant to be an atheist outright, that day has well-nigh passed, and the hour has arrived when science proclaims in unmistakable tones that the God of the Bible is the Creator of matter and the Source of nature's forces and laws.

Says the author in the preface: "In proving the universality of law, science confirms the doctrine of the omnipresence of God. . . . The doctrine of an immanent God, or what is now known as Christian evolution, affords all the ground that is needed for 'a cheerful belief.' It shows this world's history to be not the melancholy record of a dismal failure, but the normal development of an orderly plan. It is a key to all problems, whether material or spiritual. It embodies the entire philosophy of education, and indicates the lines upon which the education process should be carried out."

The subject of Divine Providence is made luminous and deeply comforting with light from both science and Scripture. As the title would indicate, the author views this world, with its varied experiences and countless vicissitudes, as a school in which man, made in the image of God, is being trained for a higher sphere, science uniting with revelation in teaching that uncertainty, suffering, death, catastrophe and nature—all are our school-masters.

Though philosophical in matter and method, dealing, as it does, with the deepest problems of human life, the volume before us contains forceful and inspiring thought simply expressed, and will be read with pleasure even by those who know little of science. The writer is evidently a devout Christian as well as an able scientist, and in writing this book has done the cause of truth a great service. Without endorsing all the author's conclusions, and while still believing that the evolution theory is far from having been proven, we unhesitatingly pronounce it the most suggestive and helpful book of its kind we have ever read. It deserves to rank along with the productions of the lamented Prof. Henry Drummond, and ought to have an extended circulation.

Among the interesting topics discussed in the concluding chapters, we note the following: "The cruelty of nature's laws;" "Poverty of the masses;" "Are we pilgrims or tramps?" "God's sovereignty and man's free agency;" "Spiritual law in the natural world;" "The Lord Jesus Christ as an evolutionist."

HEREDITY AND MORALS. By James Foster Scott, M. D. E. B. Treat & Co. publishers, New York. 430 pages. Price, $2.

This book contains valuable information concerning a subject with which everyone should be acquainted. The author considers the subject of heredity and morals from a physiological as well as from an ethical and moral standpoint. The work is exceedingly moral in tone. It should be read by everyone who desires to be enlightened on a subject which has so much to do with the happiness and prosperity of humanity. Wholesome truths, which can not fail to interest parents, teachers, physicians, in fact, every thoughtful individual, are presented in a straightforward manner. The author makes a strong plea for social purity, and urges a better understanding of the means by which the health and morals of the race may be improved.

LETTER FROM BISHOP CANDLER.

Rev. J. W. Lee, D. D, St. Louis, Mo—

MY DEAR DOCTOR: I have just received the initial number of "The American Illustrated Methodist Magazine." It is a joy to the eye, the mind, and the heart. If American Methodists do not give you 100,000 subscribers in a year, I shall be surprised, and feel that I have overrated their intelligence and their piety. It ought to find a place at once in every family circle in the land. How so handsome a publication can be issued at the price of one dollar a year I do not understand.

You are rendering a great service to the church and the country by supplying such a periodical—a periodical absolutely solitary in the field it occupies. May God bless you in the work!

Yours very truly,
WARREN A. CANDLER.
Oxford, Ga.

A man who might carve statues and paint pictures, spending his life in making mock flowers out of wax or paper, is wise compared with the man who might have God for company and yet shuts God out and lives an empty life.—Phillips Brooks.

In every part and corner of our life, to lose one's self is to be gainer, to forget one's self is to be happy.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

SOME LIGHT ON OUR DECREASE.

The official statement that we have a decrease of 8,300 in our membership is astonnding beyond expression, especially in view of the fact that we have for ten years reached an average increase of 37,000. I went at once to the statistical tables of our own Conference, and I find that four pastoral charges are blank. The brethren were slow, and the statistical secretary did not wait for them. These four charges reported the year before an aggregate membership of 1,104. Instead of a decrease of 380 in the Mississippi Conference, there should have been reported an increase of 724; and the figures for the whole church are thus changed from a decrease of 8,300 to a lesser one of 7,198.

There is a fact that somewhat changes this statement: a blank in the tables of 1897, which, if filled, would swell the total for that year 886. This makes the real increase in the Mississippi Conference 38. It is possible that something like this may be found in other Conferences.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

DISTRICT PREACHERS' MEETING.

MR. EDITOR: The District Preachers' Meeting for the Arcadia district, Louisiana Conference, convened at Arcadia, La., on March 21, 1899. The opening sermon was preached at 11 o'clock A. M. by Rev. Robt. W. Vaughn, of Downsville, La. At 2 o'clock P. M. religious services were conducted by Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, of Summerfield, La., after which the meeting was called to order by Rev. B. T. Crews P. E., who addressed the congregation on the object and purposes of the meeting, after which J. M. Davies was elected secretary, and the programme for discussion was taken up in its regular order.

About two-thirds of the preachers of the district were present on the first day; also Bros. J. L. Wright and T. B. White, superannuates; also Rev. H. R. Singleton, of the St. Louis Conference. Deep interest was manifested by the members of the meeting in discussion of the various means of grace needed for a true gospel ministry.

On the second evening of the session Rev. C. P. Smith, of Minden, La., a recent transfer to our Conference, preached a soul-awakening sermon on missions, after which the pastor of Arcadia took up his full missionary collection.

On the second day of the meeting our beloved brother, J. L. Wright, was compelled to leave us on account of his afflictions. He wrote a letter to his brethren expressing his love for them and the great work in which they were engaged, and his regret at having to leave, which was full of faith in God and breathing a benediction upon the members of the meeting, after the reading of which Bro. Crews called on Rev. T. B. White to lead the congregation in prayer for the blessing of God upon Bro. Wright and family, and Bro. Henderson was appointed a committee to voice the love and sympathy of the meeting to Bro. Wright.

The session continued for three days, with preaching twice a day, and the preachers left feeling that their association together fitted and prepared them for the coming revival season. The pastor of Arcadia continued the meeting, being assisted by Dr. Cooper, of Centenary, and Rev. C. P. Smith, of Minden.

MINISTERS' ASSOCIATION

OF NORTHERN END OF GREENVILLE DISTRICT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The latter portion of February, pursuant to a call of a few of the preachers, a meeting was held at Tunica, Miss., for the purpose of organizing an association of the pastors of the northern end of the district. The organization was effected by electing Rev. J. J. Brooks president, and Bro. Campbell, pastor of Austin charge, secretary and treasurer, and this writer vice-president. A program was arranged, and the first regular meeting appointed to be held in Friar's Point, Monday and Tuesday, March 27 and 28. All the pastors, local preachers, Sunday-school superintendents, and one other layman from each charge, constitute the membership—the meetings to be held once each month.

The first meeting has just closed its labors. All the pastors and one lay man were in attendance. The program consisted of a synopsis by each pastor of the sermon preached on Sunday, an essay by Bro. J. J. Brooks on "The New Birth," a sermon by Rev. J. T. Murrah, an essay by this writer on "What Is Necessary to Make a Successful Pastor," and a sermon by Bro. Graves, of Tunica. The essays were followed by general discussion of the subjects, and there were several profitable devotional services, led by brethren appointed on program. The essay by Bro. Brooks, and sermons by Bros. Murrah and Graves, were all excellent in matter, manner, and spirit, and were attended by a deep spiritual effect on all who heard. The essay by this writer will probably appear in the ADVOCATE, as he was requested by a resolution to submit it to the editor, with request for its publication.

All our meetings were attended by a number of the people of the town, and there is good reason to conclude that it was a blessing to our church and the community.

The reason for limiting the union to the northern portion of the district is its great length, and the cost of travel, and the difficulty of securing entertainment for so many in smaller places. We wish to hold the meetings in all the pastoral charges, trusting they may be benefited by them. We trust that our brethren in the southern end of the district will form a similar organization, if they have not already done so.

The next meeting will be held in Belen, May 7. Q. A. OATS.

RESOLUTIONS OF THANKS.

Resolutions of thanks signed by the members of the second Quarterly Conference of the Ocean Springs and Scranton charge, at Ocean Springs, Miss., March 23, 1899:

Whereas, Bishop Jno. C. Keener has deeded to the M. E. Church, South, at Ocean Springs a neat parsonage, with lot ample for yard and garden, also a beautiful lot adjoining for a church; And, whereas, Said property is most desirably located both for parsonage and church; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we do indeed appreciate this most valuable gift, and recognize in it a blessing to Methodism in this place.

Resolved, That we authorize the Board of Trustees to take immediate steps toward moving our church-building to said lot, and, as soon as practicable, take possession of parsonage.

Resolved, That we hereby extend to Bishop Keener our sincere thanks, praying that God may abundantly bless him in these latter years of his life, and finally administer unto him an "abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ."

WHAT'S THE MATTER?

Bro. W. M. Thornton, treasurer of the Joint Board of Finance, Mississippi Conference, writes me that only one pastoral charge in the Forest district has remitted anything on the assessment for Conference claimants (Shiloh, Rev. P. D. Hardin, P. C.; assessed $40, paid $41 50), and only three other pastoral charges in the whole Conference (names not given me) have made any remittance on the same account! There are 15 superannuates, 28 widows and a number of orphans dependent on this fund for the comforts (and some are dependent for the necessities) of life. Please, brethren, collect and remit to Bro. Thornton, at Lake, without delay. T. L. MELLEN,

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, Our church has just been relieved of a heavy and burdensome debt; And, whereas, Our Missionary Secretaries have as good as notified us that it will be necessary for them to borrow money from the banks to carry on our missionary work, which undoubtedly means another missionary debt; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we most earnestly protest against going to the banks, and urge our secretaries to appeal to the church in this our time of need.

Resolved, That we make a special effort to have all our missionary money in the hands of our treasurer by May 1.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to our Missionary Secretaries, the Nashville and NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATES for publication.

A REPLY.

MR. EDITOR: I notice that Bro. Crews, in the P. S. to his letter in this week's ADVOCATE—alluding to me—states that I am a member of the "Louisiana Conference, M. E Church." This is a mistake. The "Louisiana Conference" includes the colored work of the M. E. Church in Louisiana, while the Gulf Mission Conference—to which I belong—is composed exclusively of white preachers and members—mostly Southern people, too.

As his remark as to complaint made by my presiding elder affects the reputation of a brother, I feel sure that Bro. V. D. Skipper, pastor of Louisiana Avenue Church—who was my presiding elder at the time—will take pleasure in publishing in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE what my offense was, that the general public may know whether or not I was accused of violating any Commandment of the Decalogue.

CHRISTIAN WOMANHOOD.

BY REV. W. C. BLACK, D. D.

The above-named work has had a sale of nearly six thousand. From the many scores of highly commendatory notices that have appeared in the church papers, we present the following:

"We hope it will be read by every woman in the church."—Florida Advocate.

"It is the best thesaurus of facts concerning womanhood with which we are acquainted. The author has evidently given painstaking thought and care to the preparation of this volume. After showing the degraded condition of woman under the highest pagan civilizations, he demonstrates that it was Christianity that began to raise her to higher levels, and that since the Reformation the good work has been going forward. We wish thousands of women to read this excellent volume."—Dr. C. F. Deems.

The price is $1, and we will send it postpaid on receipt of that sum. But to that select class who subscribe for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we make the following special offer: Pay your subscription one full year in advance, and send us sixty cents additional, and we will send you the book postpaid.

The New Method of Blood Purifying.

What the New Discovery in Medical Science Has Accomplished.

The Prompt Way to Cure Yourself When Symptoms Show That Your Blood Is Out of Order.

THE EMINENT SPECIALISTS FREE OFFER TO ALL READERS OF THE "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE."

For a great many years it has been the custom for sick people to say: "My blood is out of order. It needs purifying. I feel all used up. My skin needs clearing. My brain feels tired."

They are right, but do they act right?

They generally go and get a laxative (bowel-cleaner) to purify their blood.

Does their blood run through their bowels?

Science has to-day furnished proofs that all the purifying that your blood needs, in fact, all that can be done, must be done by your kidneys.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys strain or filter out the impurities in the blood—that is their work.

Purifying your blood is not a question of taking a laxative or physic.

Does your blood run through your bowels?

What the bowel-cleaner does is to throw out the poisons confined in your bowels ready for absorption into your blood, but the poisons which are already in your blood, causing your present sickness it leaves there.

There is no other way of purifying your blood except by means of your kidneys.

That is why bowel-cleaners fail to do their work—they fail to help the kidneys.

When you are sick then, no matter what you think the name of your disease is, the first thing you should do is to afford aid to your kidneys by using Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great Kidney Remedy.

In taking Swamp-Root you afford natural help to nature, for Swamp-Root is the most perfect healer and gentle aid to the kidneys that is known to medical science.

Dr. Kilmer, the eminent physician and specialist, has attained a far-famed reputation through the discovery and marvelous success of Swamp-Root in purifying the blood, and thereby curing chronic and dangerous diseases, caused by sick kidneys, of which some of the symptoms are given below.

Pain or dull ache in the back or head, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervousness, dizziness, irregular heart, sleeplessness, sallow complexion, pimples, blotches, skin troubles, dropsy, irritability, loss of ambition, obliged to pass water often during the day, and to get up many times at night, and all forms of kidney, bladder and uric acid troubles.

Swamp-Root is sold by all dealers, in fifty-cent or one-dollar bottles. Make a note of the name, SWAMP-ROOT, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and remember it is prepared only by Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

The great discovery, Swamp-Root, has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief, and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of the "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent absolutely free by mail, post-paid. Also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and containing some of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women who owe their good health, in fact, their very lives, to the wonderful curative properties of Swamp-Root. Be sure and mention NEW ORLEANS "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" when sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

OR, AN ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE

BY ALFORD NEVIN, D D.

PRICE, $1.50.

This is indeed a most valuable work, written especially for Sabbath-school and Bible class teachers, scholars, and all who feel the need, as it is believed many do, of a convenient and comprehensive volume to which they can at any time turn for information to aid them in understanding and defending the Word of God. It has been prepared to serve in this direction as a manual, to which recourse can be had with confidence and comfort, for explanations which might be found elsewhere, but only after research involving great expenditure of time and means. The author is a man of learning and talent, and has written an eloquent volume. All who read the book will be delighted with it. Read what is said of it by the religious press of the country.

"The work is one of universal merit and contains a vast amount of valuable information."—American Christian Review.

"It is a universal compendium in which may be found explanations of many things and much information."—The Church Union, New York City.

This most excellent book we will send, postpaid, for $1 to any subscriber who will pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz., to April, 1900. To non-subscribers we will send it at the publisher's price—$1.50. Address

OUR $1 OFFER.

Much has been said about reducing the subscription price of the ADVOCATE. The only way in which a reduction can be brought about is by an increase in the number of subscribers. In order to facilitate this result, we make the following offer: Until further notice we will take new subscriptions at the rate of $1 for eight months. When seven thousand five hundred new names have been sent in at this rate with the cash, we will extend the time four months longer, thus reducing the price to $1 per annum. When the extension is made, old subscribers will get the benefit as well as new ones, provided they first pay up all arrearages. Of course, no commissions can be given under this offer. Address

STILL ONE.

BY MARGARET MAY.

Last night, sweetheart, in vision clear,
Your hand held close in mine,
We walked and talked together, dear,
Still one, your soul and mine.

If in the years you had forgot
To love me, and to care
For joy or sorrow in my lot
Which here you used to share.

I think you would not thus be sent
My suff'ring hours to cheer,
And bring to me such calm content,
And dry the falling tear.

Thank God for angel ministries!
Though noiseless, and unseen,
To teach us they, and we, are his,
With just a veil between.

—New York Observer.

PERSEVERANCE IS KING.

"There is a mark, and here is a ball," said a shrewd employer to thirty applicants who had answered his advertisement for a boy; "let me see which one of you, in seven chances, can hit it oftenest." All missed the mark. "Come back to-morrow," said he, "and see if you can do better."

The next day brought but one little fellow, who said he was ready for the test; and, when he tried, he hit the center every time.

"How is this?" asked the man, in surprise. "Why," said the boy, "I wanted the place very much, to help my mother, so I practiced all night in the shed." It is needless to say that he was engaged, for he was a boy made of the right stuff, and he brought it out for use and promotion.

Daniel Webster had no remarkable traits of character in his boyhood. He was sent to Exeter Academy, in New Hampshire, and stayed there only a short time. A neighbor, finding him crying on his way home, and asking the reason, Daniel said he despaired of ever making a scholar. He said the boys made fun of him for always being at the foot of the class, and that he had decided to give up and go home. The friend said he ought to go back, and see what hard study would do. He went back, applied himself to his studies with determination to win, and it was not long before he silenced those who had ridiculed him by reaching the head of the class, and remaining there.

"I have talked with great men," Lincoln told his fellow-clerk and friend, Greene, "and I do not see how they differ from others."

He made up his mind to put himself before the public, and talked of his plans to his friends. In order to keep in practice in speaking he walked seven or eight miles to debating clubs. "Practicing polemics," was what he called the exercise.

He seemed for the first time to have begun to study subjects. Grammar was his first choice. He sought Mentor Graham, the schoolmaster, and asked his advice.

"If you are going before the public," Mr. Graham told him, "you ought to do it."

But where could he get a grammar? There was but one in the neighborhood, Mr. Graham said, and that was six miles away.

Without waiting for further information, says McClure's Magazine, the young man walked immediately to the place, borrowed this rare copy of Kirkham's Grammar, and before night was deep in its mysteries. From that time, for weeks, he gave every moment of his leisure to mastering the contents of the book. Frequently he asked his friend Greene to "hold the book" while he recited, and, when puzzled by a point, he would consult Mr. Graham.

Lincoln's eagerness to learn was such that the whole neighborhood became interested. The Greenes lent him books, the schoolmaster kept him in mind and helped him as he could, and even the village cooper let him come into his shop and keep up a fire of shavings sufficiently bright to read by at night. It was not long before the grammar was mastered.

"Well," Lincoln said to Greene, "if that's what they call science, I think I'll go at another."

He had made another discovery—that he could conquer subjects by sticking to them.

Had Franklin Pierce not been one of the most persevering of men, he would never have been elected President of the United States. When he made his debut at the bar, he broke down completely. Although deeply mortified, he was not discouraged, as many would have been. He said he would try the experiment nine hundred and ninety-nine times more, and then, if he failed, he would repeat it for the thousandth time. Nothing is denied to such perseverance.

No matter what other qualities a successful man may lack, persistency—a dogged determination to succeed at all hazards—is always present. He may lack education, culture, polish; he may have many weaknesses or peculiarities; but, in the successful man, persistence is never absent. No matter how hostile his surroundings, no matter who or what opposes him, or what discouragements overtake him, he always persists. He is not afraid of hard work. Opposition does not discourage, or drudgery disgust him. He may lose his money, his friends, even his health; but, no matter what comes or goes, he always persists. He could as easily stop breathing as stop plodding. It is a part of his nature.

It is not so much brilliancy of intellect, a liberal education, fertility of resource or congeniality of surroundings, as persistency of effort, constancy of purpose, and unconquerable resolution to get on in the world that make a man successful.

Furthermore, persistence gives confidence, credit. It is the poor man's capital. Everybody believes in the man who persists. He may meet with great reverses, may even fail in business, but every one believes that he will ultimately triumph, because they know there is no such thing as keeping him down. The great question which the world asks a man is not, Has he capital? or, Has he friends? but, Has he persistence? Does he keep at it? Does he stick to his aim with a determination which knows no retreat? Even a man with small ability will often succeed if he has this dogged persistence, where a genius without it would fail. Persistence wedded to character is the key to success in life. Money, influence, position are as nothing compared with brains, principle, energy, and perseverance.—Success.

NAPOLEON LOST THE BATTLE OF LEIPSIC because of a fit of indigestion. One dose of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL would have given him instant relief, and the fate of the kingdoms of Europe been decided differently. It is really marvelous how quickly a colicky pain will vanish when a teaspoonful of Mul-en-ol in a wineglass of hot water is taken. Try it; you will never suffer from colic.

THE ART OF PLEASING.

"Give a boy address and accomplishments, and you give him the mastery of palaces and fortunes wherever he goes. He has not the trouble of earning or owning them; they solicit him to enter and possess."—Emerson.

"With hat in hand, one gets on in the world."—German Proverb.

"There is no policy like politeness," says Magoon; "since a good manner often succeeds where the best tongue has failed." The art of pleasing is the art of rising in the world.

A fine illustration of the business value of good manners is found in the Bon Marche, an enormous establishment in Paris where thousands of clerks are employed, and where almost everything is kept for sale. The two distinguishing characteristics of the house are one low price to all and extreme courtesy. Mere politeness is not enough; the employees must try in every possible way to please and to make customers feel at home. Something more must be done than is done in other stores, so that every visitor will remember the Bon Marche with pleasure. By this course, the business has been developed until it is said to be the largest of the kind in the world. No other advertising is so efficacious. A. T. Stewart imitated this store in his.

Good manners often prove a fortune to a young man. Mr. Butler, a merchant in Providence, R. I., had once closed his store, and was on his way home when he met a little girl who wanted a spool of thread. He went back, opened the store, and got the thread. This little incident was talked of all about the city, and brought him hundreds of customers. He became very wealthy, largely because of his courtesy.—Success.

DR D. M. BYE, Indianapolis, Ind.

MY DEAR DR. BYE—Your little short letter received with thanks, and we appreciate your kindness more than words can tell, for you have truly been a friend indeed, as well as one in need. I am almost sorry our correspondence is about at an end. Besides being a pleasant one, it has been so entirely satisfactory, not only to myself, but to my whole family. Did I ever tell you how cancer got rooted in our family? It happened in this way. My great grandmother had children so fast her health failed. She selected a fine young slave for a wet nurse for her three last children. The slave died in middle age with cancer of the breast. The three children she nursed died in old age with cancers. Strange to say, my grandfather's two children who resembled him strongest (my mother and sister) have had cancers. The sister is dead. My mother is cured by your treatment. Please, Doctor, let me implore you, not to let this grand discovery of yours die. When you are gone, leave it as a legacy in Jesus' name, to this suffering, pitiful, miserable world.

Yours with a heart full of thanks,

Persons afflicted with Cancer or Tumor may address DR. D. M. BYE, Lock Box 25, Indianapolis, Ind., and he will send them books and papers free, giving prices of treatment, and hundreds of letters from the afflicted in every part of the United States and Canada who have been cured; also half-tone cuts from photographs showing facts that can not be questioned.

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT,
Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living

BE PATIENT WITH THE OLD.

There is nothing more beautiful in this world than to observe the tenderness of some girls toward thier aged relatives. Dear grandmother can not thread her needles so easily as she used to do, and is sensitive on the subject, and does not like to be too obviously helped, to have attention called to her failing eyesight, which she so much regrets, and does not like to admit. There are two ways of meeting the difficulty. Mattie, a kind-hearted girl without much tact, will exclaim: "O gran! what perfect nonsense for you to fuss over that needle! You know you can not find the hole where the thread should go in; your eyes are too old. Give me the thing; I'll thread your needles!" The intention is most excellent, but the old lady is hurt, and stifles a sigh. She had young eyes once, and she has the same independent spirit still. Edith, in the same circumstances, manages in another fashion. She simply threads a dozen needles, and leaves them already for grandmamma in her needle-book, saying pleasantly: "It saves so much time, dear, in these busy days, to have one's needles all ready and waiting."—Harper's Round Table.

TRIBUTE TO LINCOLN'S HOMELINESS.

It is said that Lincoln was always ready to join in a laugh at his own expense. He used to tell the following story with great glee:

"In the days when I used to be on the circuit," said he; "I was accosted on the cars by a stranger who said:

"'Excuse me, sir, but I have an article in my possession which belongs to you.'

"'How is that?' I asked, considerably astonished.

"The stranger took a jack-knife from his pocket. 'This knife,' said he, 'was placed in my hands some years ago, with the injunction that I was to keep it until I found a man uglier than myself. I have carried it from that time to this. Allow me to say, sir, that I think you are fairly entitled to the property.'"

JAMES—WILLIAM JAMES, son of William James and Annie E. Fullilove, was born May 23, 1895, and died Feb. 25, 1899, at his father's home in Bossier parish, La.

William was a surpassingly beautiful child, which made him attractive even to strangers, but lovelier far than beauty of form and feature was the gentle disposition which won the fondest admiration of all who knew him.

His affection for his mother, little sister and brother was intense, but his devotion to his father was phenomenal. Toys nor play-fellows, however alluring, could ever entice him from the pleasure of his dear father's very companionship, and the last articulate word on his pale lips was "Papa."

On the Sabbath preceding his death he sat in the congregation at church, silent and attentive, by his mother's side, and who can tell how much of the heavenly message from the preacher found lodgment in the soul of this little one who was "of the kingdom of God!" —for on the way from church he talked much of his beloved grandfather who is in heaven, and with great earnestness wanted to know all his mother could tell him of the home in the skies. He was taken violently sick that night, and after six days of patient suffering, the next Sabbath light shone on the little form still and cold, as near angelic in its marbled beauty as mortal eyes ever beheld. Too precious little "earthly house" was laid in the tomb on Sabbath eve; the tomb, robbed of its gloom since Jesus illumined it with the light of immortality, and the little spirit of our darling was revelling in the perfect understanding of the mystery of redemption. "Eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, nor hath it entered into the heart of man, the riches which God hath prepared for them that love him."

"Little William died at 4 P. M.," were the words which flashed over the wires, bearing anguish to many hearts in earthly homes. On Mt. Zion the news rang out on the electric telegraphy of heaven, "Another new-born angel with the Father's name in his forehead," and with glad shout the "little one" joined the "hundred forty and four thousand who follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth." "In his mouth is no guile, and he is without fault before the throne of God."

We loved the winsome child, with his intelligent prattle, almost to idolatry, but God doeth well, and we bow in humble submission to his will. The fond parents can not yet see the mercy in their sore bereavement, but they rest in God's promises and kiss the rod. They realize that their darling is God's child in a higher sense than theirs, and somewhere beyond the shining stars they confidently hope to greet their boy again. Meanwhile they know "it is well with the child," for Jesus said of such, "Their angels do always behold the face of the Father." The timid child-spirit felt no lonaliness as it passed through the valley of shadows, for Jesus met it on the borderland of darkness with the assurance, "It is I; be not afraid." The religion which sustains the Christian through bereavement, and enables the breaking heart to exclaim, "Thy will be done!" is a sure anchor for the soul.

May God comfort the lonely father and mother who have so submissively resigned their first-born, and may "the little missionary" draw all the hearts so entwined around his being to a happy reunion in heaven!

"AM-MAMA"

ARMSTRONG—At his home near Snqualena Church, Lauderdale county, Miss., HENRY ARMSTRONG (brother of the late Rev. F. Y. Armstrong) passed from earth in the triumphant faith of a Christian at one o'clock Wednesday, Feb. 15, 1899. He was born Feb. 2, 1824. He was married to Miss Mary Matilda Waits, Dec. 24, 1844, before attaining his majority. After her death he married the widow, Mary Ann Allen, March 4, 1867. Again left a widower, he married, Dec. 24, 1880, Mrs. M. A. Pace, who survives him, and mourns the departure of a true and faithful husband.

Soon after his first marriage Bro. Armstrong, professing conversion, joined the Methodist Church, to which he ever remained attached, his love for the church and her doctrines and her government increasing with his growth in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. He was an efficient steward. He never lost interest in the Sunday-school. He was a thorough Methodist, with a well-defined religious experience. He did not sour with age. He grew gentler, sweeter, mellower. He was ripe for eternity; he was ready to go.

With little or no educational advantages, he made good use of his native talents, and, being a man of prayer, he was a safe counselor. He was brave, and yet prudent. He had the courage of his convictions. He despised meanness. He was a manly man.

As straight as an arrow, with a step swift and springy, simple in his dress, he always suggested the typical pioneer. Sincere and truthful, he could look with his keen, searching glance into the eye of any mortal. Strictly honest, he owed no man anything save love. Industrious and never wasteful, he made and he saved, notwithstanding he was always generous, responded to the calls of the church, and to every cry of need. Houses and fences and lands were kept in order. He thrived while others whined. He thanked God and rejoiced while others murmured. Unblemished in his integrity, he held the respect and confidence of all right-minded people.

In his going the community has lost an upright citizen, who was on the right side of every moral question; the church, a most useful member, watchful of her every interest, and his family a devoted husband, father, and grandfather. But we know where he is gone, and we hope to meet him again in our Father's house. T. L. MELLEN.

TILLMAN—Just six years ago, last November, and one of God's little ones was sent to bless the hearts and home of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Tillman. As time passed "WILLIE BENNATT" grew in precociousness beyond her years, often almost startling those around her with questions and answers. At school the progress she made was remarkable—in a few months learning to read well, and then the Bible became her chief pleasure, to read and talk of it. From babyhood she was religious; truly a little Christian. Quiet, shadowed, loving, she was loved in return by all who knew her, and the bud gave promise of blossoming into the sweetest, brightest girlhood. But Christ said, 'Suffer little children to come unto me," and after an illness of a few weeks, ending Feb. 19, 1899, despite all that devoted attention and nursing could do, she was taken lovingly, tenderly, into Jesus' arms, and in heaven now awaits the coming of the dear ones left behind.

Willie Bennett, "gone to rest,"
Softly let the words be spoken,
For the hearts that loved her best
Are aching now, and almost broken.

Weep not, dear ones, tho' you loved her,
Loved her more than words can tell;
Remember in your agony,
"God doeth all things well."

The little one you loved so well
Will be the first to shout
A heavenly welcome, when on earth
Your lamp of life burns out.

COUSIN ANNIE.

GURLEY—On the night of March 2, 1899, in the city of Natchez, there was removed from earth to heaven the spirit of Mrs. SARAH GURLEY.

Sister Gurley was nearing her eighty-eighth birthday, and as far back as I am able to learn anything of her, was an earnest and pronounced Christian, and a constant attendant of the Methodist Church. Her familiar form on a front seat, and sympathetic interest in the preacher, will be remembered by all who have attended the Jefferson Street Church, of this city, of which she has been a faithful member for a number of years.

She was untiring and enthusiastic in her efforts to convert souls to Christ, and her familiarity with the Scriptures was most remarkable. She claimed to have the presence of the Holy Spirit with her at all times, and her faith in God's protecting care was very great. Who can tell how much of good she may have done?

Mrs. Gurley came to Natchez many years ago from Sharon, Miss., and I do not know much about her early life. She leaves a daughter, Mrs. Lillard, of Concordia parish, La., and several granddaughters. She was buried from the Jefferson Street Church on the evening of March 3 by Revs. R. D. Norsworthy and H. D. Howell, and the following words of one of the hymns sung on that occasion may be justly applied to her:

'Servant of God, well done;
Rest from thy loved employ;
The battle fought, the victory won;
Enter thy Master's joy."

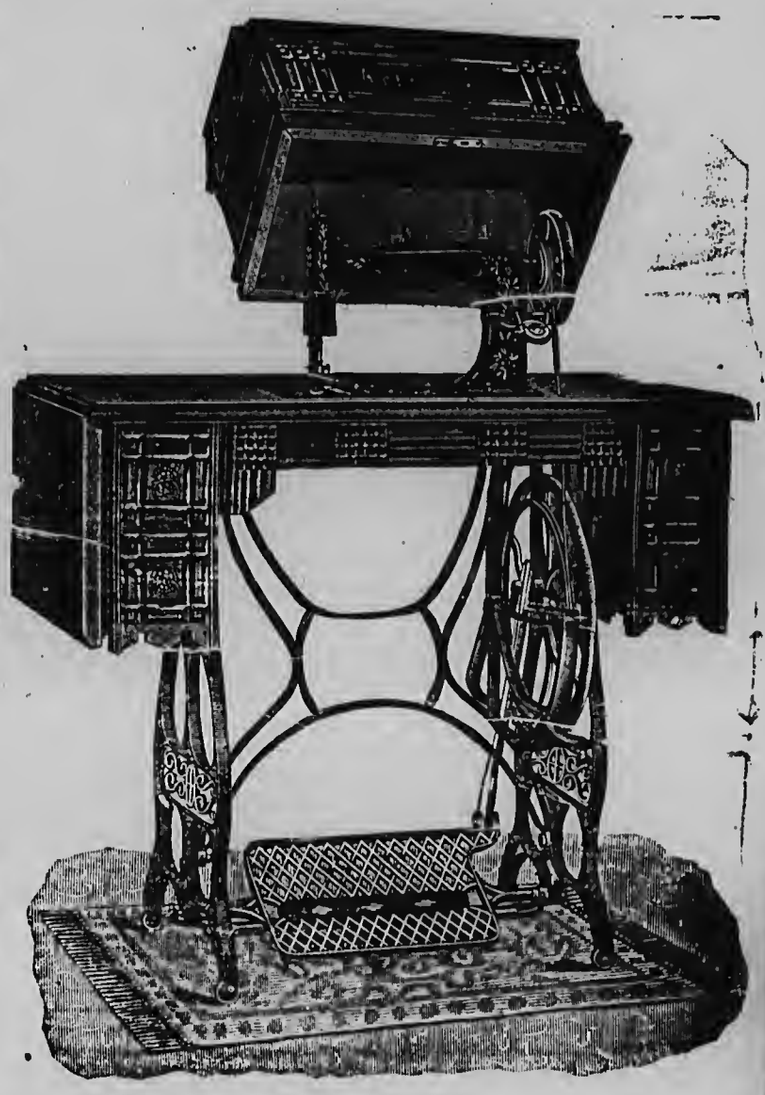
Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hammer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great length; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

C. P. Huntington has brought the Sierra de Mercedi Mountain of iron, near Durango, Mexico, for $800,000.

The New England Cotton Mills have resumed work with an advance in wages, bringing them up to the old standard.

Repeated efforts to locate the insurgent army in front of Malolos have been unsuccessful and our forces are, therefore, still resting in the former Filipino capital.

The overland telegraph line connecting Havana with Santiago has been completed, and Gen. Brooke is now in telegraph communication with all parts of Cuba.

Trouble is expected in Macedonia between the Turks and the Bulgarians, encouraged by Russian influence. The Turks have 100,000 men under arms to repress the anticipated rebellion.

The remains of the American soldiers and sailors who died in Cuba, brought back by the steamer "Crook," will be buried in the National Cemetery at Arlington, April 6, with military honors.

The Philippine Commission, all of the members of which are now in Manila, will issue a proclamation to the natives calling for their subjection to the United States, and saying nothing of independence.

The Cubans, who are under the control of the United States, have been informed by President McKinley that they may buy ships in Europe or the cheapest markets and bring them into Cuban ports, and sail them under the Cuban flag, without paying any duty.

The contract for the construction of the Algiers dry dock has not yet been signed, although the award was made to the Maryland Steel Company several months ago. The delay in signing the contract is explained as being due to some changes in the designs for the dock which the Navy Department has decided to make.

To-day, as under the Spanish regime, bribery and fraud direct the Cuban courts. This is the firm conviction of the military administration. Governor General Brooke is taking the matter up, and intends to clean out the corruption, to revise the judicial procedure, to change the court personnel and to abolish the barbarous practice of incommunicado, by which a judge may imprison for life a person ignorant of the accusation against him and of the names of his accusers.

YOU KNOW that tired feeling is exceedingly disagreeable. What is far better, you may know, by a fair trial, that Hood's Sarsaparilla entirely cures it.

Hood's Pills cure nausea, sick headache, biliousness, indigestion. Price 25 cents.

Now that Malolos, the Filipino capital, has been captured, the question arises as to what will be the next move. The fact that no considerable portion of the Filipino army has been destroyed [illegible] effect of the victory. Aguinaldo has not only moved the seat of his government further northward, but has also withdrawn his army to a new position. Though defeated and driven from a number of strong positions, the rebel chief has as yet sustained no heavy disaster.

Following close upon the heels of the settlement by France and England of disputes over African territory, comes the announcement that England and Russia have arrived at an agreement defining the respective spheres of influence of the two countries in China. Although no details have been made public as to the character of the settlement arrived at, it is safe to assume that Great Britain is to be given a free hand in the richest portions of the Chinese Empire in return for a recognition of Russia's position in Manchuria and on the Liao Tung peninsula, on which Port Arthur is situated.

The delegates of the Cuban Assembly, Messrs. Villalon and Havia, have called informally at the State Department and had a long conversation with Secretary Hay. The affairs in Cuba were freely discussed, and the delegates presented the resolution of the Cuban Assembly. Secretary Hay assured the delegates that the United States Government would not increase the amount to pay the Cuban army above the $3,000,000 already sent to Cuba. He said this morning this could not be further considered. He also informed them that the President would not consent to any scheme for raising money to pay the Cuban troops. Later the Secretary mentioned the call to President McKinley, and the President informed him that there would be no other or further answer than had already been given by the Secretary.

I am in my seventy-third year, and for fifty years I have been a great sufferer from indigestion, constipation and biliousness. I have tried all the remedies advertised for these diseases, and got no permanent relief. About one year ago, the disease assuming a more severe and dangerous form, I became very weak, and lost flesh rapidly. I commenced using Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir. SOCRATES died from a cup of poison administered by the hand of a friend. How many in this land have died by poisonous remedies given by friendly hands to combat diseases? It is quite a comfort to know that when giving DICKS' CHILLIFUGE there is not a drop of poison in a bottle full of this beneficent remedy.

JUST OBEY.

Do as you are told to do
By those wiser far than you;
Do not say,
"What the use of this may be
I am sure I can not see"—
Just obey!

Do not sulk and do not sigh,
Though it seem in vain to try;
Work away!
All the ends you can not see;
Do your duty faithfully—
Just obey!

When at length you come to know
Why 'twas ordered thus and so,
You will say,
"Glad am I that, when to me
All was dark as dark could be,
I could trust and cheerfully
Just obey!"

THE SENATE ON THE WAR CLAIM.

By request we publish the following from the Journal of the United States Senate, Jan. 9, 1899:

Mr. Teller, from the Committee on Claims, submitted the following report:

[To accompany Senate resolution No. 456.]

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred a letter from the Bishops of the M. E. Church, South, dated Aug. 26, 1898, relating to the claim of the Book Agents of that church, which was authorized to be paid by an act approved March 11, 1898, entitled "An act for relief of the Book Agents of the M. E. Church, South," submit the following report thereon:

The letter is as follows:

[Here follows the Bishops' letter, which is too well known to need publication here.]

The bill referred to provides for the payment of $288,000 in satisfaction of the claim, and after it became a law this committee was authorized to inquire and report the circumstances connected with its passage.

The resolution authorizing this inquiry is as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Claims be directed to inquire and report to whom the money was paid under the claim of the Methodist Book Concern, South, and also as to all circumstances connected with the passage of the bill providing for the payment of said claim, and with the subsequent payment of the money under said act of Congress.

The investigation was made, a number of witnesses were examined, and the committee submitted their report to the Senate on the eighth day of July, 1898.

In the conclusion of this report it is stated:

In conclusion, the committee deem it proper to state that no censure should rest upon the M. E. Church, South, for the acts of its Book Agents. The church has been injured by the misconduct of its Agents, but for such misconduct it is held entirely blameless.

The committee has not thought proper to suggest to the Senate any action concerning this matter, it appearing to the committee that the governing authorities of the church must be allowed to take such measures as it may think proper after it has been fully acquainted with the facts concerning the passage of the bill and the final disposition of the money appropriated by it.

This letter of the Bishops makes it appropriate and proper that there should be an expression of opinion on the part of the Senate in reaponse to the conditional proposition to tender to the government the money paid to the Book Agents under the terms of the said act approved March 11, 1898.

No new facts have come to the knowledge of the committee since their report was laid before the Senate, and in harmony therewith the following resolution is submitted, and the committee recommend that it be adopted:

That the report of the committee made July 8, 1898, be approved, and that no censure should rest upon the M. E. Church, South, for the misstatements and concealments of the Book Agents in connection with the passage of the bill for the payment of the claim referred to in the letter of the Bishops now under consideration; that the injury resulting therefrom affected only the beneficiaries of the fund and not the United States, and the Senate should take no further action in the matter.

THE HEART'S CONFLICT.

Those Christians who have carefully studied the deepest exercises of the human heart, and have closely noted the subtle temptations which have operated therein, have observed that the greatest conflict between the good and evil forces in the believer's heart does not arise over minor duties and the incidental requirements which are laid upon him, but rather the major duties and the vital requirements. This, I think, will stand as a general proposition. Quite probably there are a few exceptions to it, but, as a whole, it will abide the strongest criticism. It is perfectly safe to say that the natural heart, the carnal element in believers, is ready, in the great majority of cases, to oppose one's prompt submission to the discharge of those duties which most need to be done by the person himself. As to the easy duties and the superficial requirements, the believer finds but little to object to. Indeed, he will gladly undertake them, and congratulate himself on his being faithful to God. But let him be called to the performance of some command which requires the sacrifice of deep-seated prejudices, which demands the crucifixion of haughty pride, which puts to naught his own notions of right and propriety—then he finds himself rebelling against the command. It may be a most explicit command of God, fundamental in principle and vital to the believer's well-being, yet the probability is that he will seek to persuade himself into believing that the command is of minor consequence, which may be disregarded without serious injury to his soul. It is just here that the emphasis and critical point of the heart's conflict often come. The carnal elements of the believer battle fiercely against that which he most needs to do in order to his immediate growth in spiritual power, his rapid reception of the most valuable wisdom, and his wider attainment of the likeness of Christ.

We may be very certain that the enemy of our souls will induce us, if possible, to stand out against the doing of anything which is vital to our highest welfare. What we are most strongly tempted to not do is the very thing, most likely, that we ought to do. What we most need for our spiritual development and Christian efficiency Satan will keep us from having, if he possibly can. To accomplish this he often works through our prejudices, our natural preferences, and our apathy. Hence we need to fight the devil at the very points where we seem to ourselves to be the strongest, and yet are the weakest. The victory may be ours at every point if we depend on God and fight hard.

C. H. WETHERBE.

Correspondence.

TO THE PREACHERS OF MISSISSIPPI.

The admirable program for Twentieth Century Education Day, suggested by the Executive Committee of the Board of Education of the North Mississippi Conference, and prepared by the General Board of Education, has been mailed to every pastor in Mississippi. With careful preparation and diligent effort on the part of the preachers, the first Sunday in May will prove to be a red letter day in the history of Mississippi Methodism. Begin now to prepare for that day.

At the second Quarterly Conference, April 8, Carrollton, Miss., reported a contribution from 104 persons, amounting to $203 35. Every church can do that much, and many a great deal more. Let no one hesitate because of the magnitude of the work. No one can tell what can be done till proper effort has been made. This incident is suggestive: The committee having charge of the work at Carrollton did not confine their efforts to making appeals to those who were in the habit of giving, or to those accustomed to attend church, but sent a personal letter to every member near and far. By this method responses have been received from 104 persons. A young man living fifty miles away, who had not removed his membership, who was not a contributor, wrote: "I received the letter inclosing envelope for contribution, and send one dollar for the cause, which I am glad to do. I know I am behind with my church dues, and if you will inform me of the amount, I will settle that. I know I have not been faithful, and thought maybe my name had been dropped from the roll. But whether it has, or not, I shall be glad to do anything in behalf of the cause to which I once pledged myself."

So the Twentieth Century Movement has brought quarterage into the treasury of the Board of Stewards.

J. R. BINGHAM.

April 10, 1899.

N. B.—The presiding elders will receive several hundred copies of the program. They will please use these to supply their local preachers serving circuits, whose names and addresses I do not have. J. R. B.

AFTER THE FIRST ROUND.

MR. EDITOR: I have just completed my "first round," and am resting a few days at the old home, where my wife's mother has spent sixty years of her life, and is now nearly approaching the ninetieth year of her age.

I have held all my quarterly meetings, notwithstanding the weather and the roads, and that, too, without breaking a double-tree or a single-tree, or even losing my overshoes in the mud. The last Fall and Winter were unusually wet and cold, the weather becoming notably severe just before the middle of February. I did not go to church on that cold Sunday. In a hospitable home I read at both morning and evening prayers the 147th Psalm, and rejoiced that I was not compelled to try to "stand before His cold." It was a day to study fire-making, and enjoy its results. Fire-making is a useful art, and many persons waste much of their fuel, and unnecessarily burn the brick in the backs of their fireplaces, by making their fires "hind-part before."

Our Preachers' Missionary Institute at Centerville was quite interesting and, I hope, beneficial. A few were providentially kept away. We strove to intensify the spirit of missions in ourselves, that we might infuse it into others. The preachers at home are the stewards of the missionaries abroad.

The books furnished by the Secretary of Education for collecting the great Twentieth Century Educational Fund have been distributed to the preachers, and the elements are brewing for a great collection. There is room in the books for the name and contribution of every member and friend of the church.

I called to see Bishop Galloway a few days ago, and found him full of his work in connection with this collection—as, indeed, every man ought to be full of his work. He is one man who seems to me to be in danger of working too much. I asked him to rest a week, holding my District Conference.

In all these things we are striving to keep in view the important work of saving souls. Our preachers are all at their places, using the divinely appointed means of grace, yet I fear that many of our people have gotten into such habits of looking for evangelists, and other extraneous agencies for revival power, that they have forgotten how to appreciate the regular pastoral service. They do not expect nor work for a revival without an evangelist, and they are not disappointed. Herein probably lies one of the several explanations of our late loss in numbers, but I will not now enter upon the discussion of that question, although adequate explanations seem to me not very far to seek. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

FROM PRESIDING ELDER HOLLOMAN.

In 1884, while pastor at Yazoo City, this writer began an appointment at 4 P. M. at Lake City, then a community of two or three families, now a village of six white families, with others in adjoining neighborhood. Here also is located the parsonage, where I found the loyal pastor grieving over small congregations, but planning for larger things. The waters were threatening the lowlands, which had its effect upon church attendance. In this parsonage home were evident the lessons learned by the thoughtful wife in another parsonage home.

My next appointment was to Vaughan's, our newest charge, with Golden at the helm, or, rather, at the throttle, making a fine beginning; walking, riding, moving things up.

Our quarterly meeting was held at Vaughan's, was well attended, and while the reports on all questions were good, that of finance was greatly beyond all expectation. For a young charge these are "the liberal who devise liberal things." One year ago the people of this progressive community offered us a new church, provided the Board of Church Extension would appropriate $150 for seating. I doubt if the church has ever made a better investment. Neatly finished within and without, with a capacity of 250 people, it is a thing of beauty. Some will remember Vaughan's Station as the terminus of the stage line to Yazoo City before the building of the railroad to the latter place. As evidence that the discontinuing of this line has not hurt the town, the business and residences have more than doubled. The traveling public may yet find comfortable accommodations. I noticed one large sign thus, "Delmonico's Dining Parlor and Cafe," though the building is closed for the Summer. Vaughan's is awake on all enterprises, and we look for corresponding activity in church affairs.

Next we visit Camden, where, more than twenty years ago, when our Bro. Bradley, just from over the seas, was in charge, the writer assisted in a week's meeting. Some remembered; others had forgotten. Time has wrought some changes. Here we met a novel experience. The wide-awake pastor, with an eye to business, had advertised our coming by regular poster, and its effect was evident in good attendance upon Quarterly Conference and all services.

What now about wisdom of the children of this world?

With an extra appointment at Fannin, made necessary by the weather of some weeks ago, we finish the round. At this place our coming was greeted by an exceptional gathering, and that, too, on Wednesday.

With a sigh of relief we plan for the second. T. B. HOLLOMAN.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The season for the various district meetings is upon us. Missionary Institutes, Epworth Leagues, Sunday-school and District Conferences will be the order for several months. The time for each should be fixed and published as soon as practicable, and with an eye to as little conflict as possible. For the interest of the works to which some of us are assigned, it is important that we attend all of these convocations that we can. But whether present or absent, we shall rejoice to know that all are occasions of great spiritual profit.

I have had the privilege, during the past few weeks, of attending the Epworth League Conference at Starkville; the Preachers' and Missionary Meeting and Epworth League Conference at Main Street Church, Water Valley; the Preachers' Meeting and Epworth League Conference at Okolona, and the Preachers' Institute at Sallis—all of which were occasions of great spiritual power and influence. The preaching, singing, talking and praying in all have been for revival power. Our preachers have never been more unanimous in sentiment and spirit for a general and thorough revival of genuine religion than they are at the present, and our faith is that we shall realize it this year.

We regret to hear of the continued affliction of Bro. B. F. Phillips, who has been unable for several weeks to preach or perform pastoral services. He has the sympathy and prayers of the entire Conference brotherhood. May he soon be restored to health and to his loved employ!

We are glad to note the great improvement of Bro. Oakley's health. He is now able to be about his district work, and his many friends hope that his health will be fully and permanently restored.

Our people in Verona have disposed of their old church, and are building a new one.

Bro. T. W. Lewis and his people in Corinth are moving to enlarge and improve their church-building.

Bro. Gladney reports his work at Eupora "in fine shape."

Children's Day programs have been ordered to the pastors as per instruction of the Sunday-school Board. If any fail to receive their package by the fifteenth instant, or do not receive enough, they will please to notify me. Remember, our motto this year is a Children's Day observance in every congregation.

PASTORAL AND THEOLOGICAL INSTITUTE OF DURANT DISTRICT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

According to programme and date previously published in these columns, this Institute met in regular annual session April 5, 1899, at Sallis, Miss., with Rev. J. S. Oakley, P. E., in the chair. After religious services this scribe was elected secretary. Roll-call of the preachers in the district: it was found that more than half were absent, some on account of afflictions in their families, wherenpon the following resolution was unanimously adopted and ordered published:

Resolved, That we deeply regret the absence of so many of our brother pastors of the district from this meeting, and we assure those in affliction of our warmest sympathy.

Rev. T. G. Freeman, of West station, and family were present, mingling with their old parishioners and enjoying the meeting. Rev. H. P. Gibbs, of Main Street, Water Valley, represented our Orphan Home, on account of the enforced absence of the manager. These brethren contributed much to the interest and richness of the occasion. Assigned subjects were ably presented by those present, and general discussion was warmly participated in by laymen and preachers. Certainly no meeting of our church is more mutually helpful to pastors than these "Preachers' Meetings" springing up voluntarily in many parts of the connection. Could the absentees have partaken with us of the spiritual renewing of the last afternoon, surely they and the entire district would have been the richer. It was like the best wine saved for the last, and was indeed exhilarating to the soul. The burden of every prayer was for a "Holy Ghost revival in every charge and in every heart." So mote it be. Now, as never before, does our church need to agonize for the Spirit's power. May future historians have to record the remainder of this decade "the awful pentecostal age!"

Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock, was devoted to "The Twentieth Century Educational Fund." Able and inspiring addresses were delivered by Rev. W. T. J. Sullivan, D. D., of Koscinsko, and Rev. W. B. Murrah, D. D., president of Millsaps College. These will bear fruit in the district. "May their tribe increase!"

Dr. Sullivan's missionary sermon on Thursday, at 11 A. M., was both exegetic and prophetic on the great subject of the coming kingdom.

Our beloved presiding elder, with characteristic dignity, elegance and sociality, was the presiding genius. He maintains his inimitable spirit of good cheer, notwithstanding his recent confinement, from which he so slowly recovered.

Rev. A. T. Buck's presentation of "The Pastor and the Evangelist" provoked much decided, positive statement condemning the habits and methods of the modern evangelist, whose chief glory is the pelf that is in the work for him. The sentiment was unanimous in favor of pastors employing brother pastors in revival meetings. In fact, it was agreed that the novel methods of these men largely account for the indifferent spiritual state of the church in recent months. God has to humiliate many people, Methodist pastors among others, before they will learn to depend on him. The Holy Spirit can make revivalists of us all.

Sallis was at her best in hospitality, which means that we "fared sumptuously every day." The usual vote of thanks expressed the happiness the visitors realized in receiving such tender ministrations.

Koscinsko gets the next session, and it is intimated that the programme will consume three or four days. W. L. ANDERSON.

AN APPEAL.

To the Laymen of the Mississippi Conference—

BRETHREN: The Wesley Chapel Church, of this city, under the pastorate of Rev. H. D. Howell, through Dr. J. C. Ballard, has erected a beautiful and convenient home for the pastor. Though Dr. Ballard has succeeded beyond our most sanguine expectations (for which the Methodism of Natchez owes him a lasting debt of gratitude), we still need two hundred dollars.

I write this appeal to you, whom God hath blessed. I need not explain or urge the necessity for this call. Brethren, help now. Send money to Dr. J. C. Ballard, Natchez, Miss., and he will send each one, who sends, a photo of the new home of our Wesley Chapel pastor.

Brethren, this is the centenary of Methodism in Natchez and Mississippi. Help us celebrate the event by giving us from one to five dollars.

HELPING THE WEAK.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

If there be some weaker one,
Give me strength to help him on;
If a blinder soul there be,
Let me guide him nearer thee.
Make my mortal dreams come true
With the work I fain would do.
Clothe with life the weak intent,
Let me be the thing I meant.
Let me find in thy employ
Peace that dearer is than joy:
Out of self to love be led,
And to heaven acclimated,
Until all things sweet and good
Seem my nature's habitude

"SUCCESS VS. FAILURE."

I guess we have about disposed of the question of preachers succeeding and failing. Let us now ask, Succeed and fail in what? And, of course, the answer would be, In financial interest. This is the question we started with, and it has come to be (without anyone intending it) the standard of excellence, even in the ministry of the gospel. The men of great spiritual power, the "sons of thunder," are crowded to the wall, and men skilled in managing societies and bringing up collections are brought to the front. In our annual convocations leading questions are plied to the successful and the unsuccessful—how one succeeded, and why the other did not succeed. Plans and methods of making collections a success are compared, and exhortations made to take the collection for each interest separately, and let each stand on its own merits, and to begin early in the year and work diligently throughout the year, and so on; and no difference, if a preacher reports hundreds of conversions, if his collections are not in full, he is depreciated. No plans and methods compared about the best way to reach the lost and win them to Christ; no exhortation to begin to pray and expect conversions early, and continue to point to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world throughout the year. And the preacher begins to soliloquize, What did the Lord call me to do? Preach the gospel. What did the church license me to do? Preach the gospel. What did the Conference ordain me to do? Preach the gospel. For what was my education, preparation and expectation in life? To preach the gospel. And what does the church now demand of me? To take care of the societies and take collections. The societies are all right; wish they were better managed than they are. The collections are all right; wish we could collect ten times as much for each interest as we do. They have a very important place in the plan of salvation, but the preacher is not the man to manage them. We forget that he is the only man in earth or heaven who has this commission, and the Lord has ordained, by the foolishness of preaching, the world shall be saved. The plans we try to impose on our church and preachers would be laughed to scorn in any enterprise of the world. Suppose one man of large mercantile business were to undertake to sell the goods, keep the books, be porter and cash boy, and all the rest, even to the drumming for his house, because these were necessary to the success of his business—of course, he would inevitably fail. Suppose the owner of a great steamship should undertake to be captain, engineer, fireman, pilot, cabin boy, and all the rest, who would start on a voyage aboard his vessel? Yet this is just what the church requires of its pastors, and the only reason for so doing is, that they are necessary to the success of the gospel. So the merchant might reason in reference to his business; so the steamboat man might contend in reference to his vessel; but the moment one man left his place to attend another, he would endanger the whole interest, and the more important his place, the greater would be the wreck should he leave it. So it is with the church; and the preacher, by common consent, has the most important place. He is specially charged with preaching Christ crucified to a lost and ruined world. By his special work souls are to be born of the Spirit, live in the Spirit, and at last have eternal life in the spirit world; and the moment the preacher turns aside to attend to any other part of the work, however important, his work must stop. The apostles corrected this error in the early church. They said, "It is not meet for us to leave the ministry of the Word and serve tables." So, by the help of the Holy Spirit, they selected a number of laymen, who were to have charge of the financial interest, while they gave themselves continuously to the Word of God and prayer. We have abundant evidence that the apostles' plan was the correct one.

Spirituality has well-nigh gone from our church, except in a very few instances. It is an exception now if we find family worship. When a home without prayer was once the exception, nearly all our members used to lead in prayer. Now it is only a few who will attempt it. Our preachers were once all evangels of truth and mercy, men of power; now it is the specialist.

Now, the great question with us is, how to reach the masses, and what to do with worldliness in the church; and as a man does not stand on his preaching ability, preaching is not the great thing needful, is of small importance, and, of course, there is a demand for short sermons, as they are not expected to accomplish much. We have overwhelming evidence that the old-time power in the preached Word is gone—in the few converts we report. For several years we have been falling off in the increase of members, until last year we only reported 19,000 for the whole church. At this rate it would take a preacher and 150 members and $15,000 six months to make one convert, and can we think to live at this poor, dying rate? But the worst is, that some fear, for the year just closing, we will have to acknowledge a decrease. Surely we have lost favor with God and with men.

Let's give the financial interest—surely a very important interest—to consecrated laymen, who would be glad to find a place to use their God-given talents to serve the church and advance the cause of Christ, and our finances will be better managed than they now are, and the preacher's hands will be untied, and they can go, as "sons of thunder," to call sinners to repentance, and bind up the broken-hearted, and Zion's wheels will be unchained, and the power of God will come back to us as in days of yore. Then, I believe it is as true of churches as of individuals: that if we "seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, all these things will be added unto us." If the whole church—preachers and laymen—were more spiritual, depended more on the Spirit, we would not only have more spirituality, but the finances, too, would be more successful. True, in many material ways our church is better equipped than ever before in all its history. We have more church and school property than ever before, more and better schools, better church-houses, more and better parsonages, better publishing interests, and so on. More elements are being organized to usefulness, the women and the young people are recognized as never before, and we have a better-educated ministry, which is no mean advance, and nearly every agency of work and means of grace—at least, on the human side—seems to be in much better condition than ever before; yet it is a sad commentary on our machinery that year by year we are losing in spirituality. May it not be true that we are depending on material things and human skill too much? Let us give the preacher and his work all the emphasis of importance it is in our power, and emphasize spirituality, submit ourselves to be used by the Spirit of God, and work in demonstration of the Spirit and of power, and the Lord will again use us to call the wanderers home, as in the years gone by. The splendid lines of Dr. Watts would be a good prayer for us now:

Come, Holy Spirit, heavenly Dove,
With all thy quickening power;
Kindle a flame of sacred love
In these cold hearts of ours.

In vain we tune our formal songs,
In vain we strive to rise;
Hosannas languish on our tongues,
And our devotion dies.

And so on. J. H. SMITH.

A RED LIGHT.

It is a fact known to every believer in the propagation of the gospel who has ordinary intelligence that we, as a church, need a deeper and a more general interest in the cause of Christian education. It is the duty of every Christian to aid in a forward movement in this holy work to the extent of his ability. We, as a church, believe in an educated ministry, and we are devoutly thankful to God that we have an educated ministry, with a few exceptions. Many of our worthy leaders and people are wisely striving for higher and better educational advantages for the coming generations. I pray God to crown their efforts with great success. Whoever heard of a Methodist preacher's opposition to Christian education?

But there is danger of becoming so zealous in the accomplishment of some ends as to lose sight of the conditions upon which the thing itself is accomplished. There is danger of putting the emphasis of our needs under the wrong heading. Therefore, by the indulgent permission of the editor, I wish to hang out a red light—a danger signal. We are all passengers on the same ship, bound for the same point of destination, but we need steam power.

Deeper spirituality is the main question upon which all real success depends. A genuine widespread revival of pure religion throughout the church is our first and greatest need. This will result in and open the way for the greatest possible measure of success in all secondary and temporal matters. A large number of our most godly church people of to-day did not enjoy the advantages of early collegiate training. Of course, this is regarded as their misfortune. In many cases it is a misfortune. Ignorance is not a virtue. Nor is education alone any part of the condition of salvation. Many of our less educated members are among those from whom we are to collect one million and a half dollars for educational purposes. How this money is to be collected from the prejudiced and worldly minded church members who have no spiritual life I can not tell. The whole truth is, where there is no revival the money goes into the treasury of the Lord slowly.

Our first and last chance is a revival. This fact is too prominent not to be seen and felt by our preachers and people everywhere. When the church of God (and I mean especially the Methodist branch of it) quits her idols and goes down upon bended knees in humble confession, repentance, and prayer to Almighty God, and continues to pray in the "upper room" until the lost power returns, we will have a revival. We have too much of the wrong kind of pride. We need the spiritual life which made our fathers and mothers and grandparents shout the praises of God under bush arbors and camp-meeting tents fifty and a hundred years ago. Then the wheels of the church will be unclogged and put back into her original channel and providential mission, and move forward on her happy march in the evangelization of the world.

Our church machinery is all right. But machinery, however grand, without the necessary steam power to move it, is worthless. We need, as a church, a fresh "baptism with the Holy Ghost and with fire." Then move our machinery out on the main line of the great commission, and, having as our headlight spiritual fire, laying aside all worldly pride, jealousies, and criticisms, putting our hands to the plow, and in the name of Christ turn the world upside down. Thus, recommissioned and flying at full speed, the spiritually sleeping nations would soon hear the sounding trumpets of Christ's flaming ministers as they were never heard before, and backsliders would feel the mighty power of Zion's rolling wheels.

I love and honor all of the true ministers of God of every name and order. I have no harsh criticisms for any of them; but if I had to show who is responsible for our decrease in membership of late years, and our lack of spiritual power, I would put it all, with a loving heart and hand, into one sentence, and print it in golden letters, and throw it upon the shoulders of God's ministers, "Like people like priests." (Hosea iv, 9.) This whole chapter is to the point, provided it be applied in its deep spiritual meaning. I do not mean that our ministers are not good men. I think they are the grandest class of men on earth to-day. I do not think anyone will occupy a higher seat in the kingdom of glory than an humble, faithful preacher. I love them from the least to the greatest. Yet I am placing the burden of the responsibility of our spiritual condition where I think it belongs. The ministers of God are the leaders of the people. They have more influence than all other men put together as a class in lifting the world to God. It is not enough for a pastor to content himself with the mistaken idea that his special mission is to feed the flock of God, instead of leading sinners to Christ. It requires the same power to herd the sheep as it does to lead lost ones into the fold. A man who can not preach in power, call penitents to the altar, and talk to mourners, has sufficient ground to doubt his call to the ministry altogether; or if he has ever been called, and finds himself in this condition, he has fallen from grace to an extent that disqualifies him to properly feed the church of God. Nothing feeds a church quicker than an altar full of praying penitents. Because a pastor sends off and employs a brother pastor, or an evangelist, does not signify that he can not hold a meeting himself, but it only means that he wants help in doing the work of God.

We have a Holy-Ghost, evangelistic pastor at Corinth—Bro. T. W. Lewis. He is doing a great work here. He has received above sixty members by letter (some on profession of faith) since Conference. I do not see any reason why he should not have two hundred additions during the year. He contemplates holding a revival soon. The ADVOCATE is better than ever. W. D. BASS.

A TRUE PARISHIONER.

On a former charge at one church they adopted the assessment plan, and one brother agreed to pay fifteen dollars for the support of the preacher in charge. His financial condition was such that the year passed away, and he did not pay a cent. The pastor left the work at the end of that year, and in April of the next year he received a check for fifteen dollars from that brother. This is what we call an honest parishioner.

ABERDEEN DISTRICT EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

The Aberdeen District League Conference held its annual session at Okolona, March 31-May 2, Rev. J. M. Wyatt presiding. Miss Sallie Kilpatrick, the district secretary, not being present the first day, Misses Corra McDonald and Lutie Stevens were elected secretaries pro tem. After the organization and appointment of committees, the printed program was followed with but few exceptions.

Rev. Eugene Johnson preached the opening sermon of the Conference. He impressed upon the Leaguers the necessity of preparation for and the privileges of active Christian service. Bro. Johnson was formerly a member of this Conference, and we were glad to have him with us again.

A cordial welcome was extended the Leaguers by Miss Corra McDonald, Prof. J. T. Conneli, and Mr. W. J. Stockett, to which Miss Maude Fearington, of Verona, responded. Following which, Rev. J. A. Lowe delivered a truly spiritual and soul stirring address on "The Importance of Putting the Young People to Work."

The special work of the State League for the Orphans' Home at Water Valley, and for Dr. and Mrs. Fearn in China, was taken up, and after some discussion resulted in the Leagues of this district pledging themselves to raise the amount of $100 toward that fund before the meeting of the State Conference in June.

Having but one League in the district organized for missionary work, we had the pleasure of having Miss Sallie Kilpatrick, of Corinth, with us, who read an excellent paper on "The Missionary Work of the Epworth League." Miss Sallie is president of the Senior League and superintendent of the Junior League at Corinth.

The Conference was treated to an excellent talk by Miss Jennie Dyer on the "Devotional Work of the League." Miss Dyer is, indeed, a nobly-gifted woman, and we were fortunate to have her with us. She also addressed the Sabbath-school Sabbath morning and the League Sabbath afternoon. The Conference was truly grateful to Miss Dyer for her deeply spiritual talks, and the sweet influence of a life "hid with Christ in God." She possesses rare intellectual and spiritual powers, and she is nobly using these talents for God. We hope to hear her again at the State League Conference.

Rev. W. W. Woollard clearly brought out the special work of the League in each of its three departments.

Saturday, at eleven, Rev. R. A. Burroughs, of Starkville, preached a most excellent sermon, showing the universality of the atonement, and the importance of a thorough preparation for the preaching of the gospel, and the responsibility resting upon the church to send the gospel to every nation.

Space forbids my entering further into the details of the Conference. Other interesting papers were read and talks were made by Misses Sallie Kilpatrick, of Verona; Maude King, Fannie White, Katie McDonald, Mary Scott, and Rev. J. W. Anderson and Mr. J. H. Woodard, of Starkville.

Thanks are due Bro. Jones and his committee and the good people of Okolona for entertaining us so cordially. The Conference is indebted to Miss Sallie Kilpatrick for her faithful and efficient work during the year, and for her untiring and unselfish labor in preparing for the Conference.

Rev. R. A. Meek and Miss Vio Thompson, members of the State League Executive Committee, each gave a talk in regard to the State League Conference, showing that active preparations are being made by way of making this fifth State Conference the greatest gathering of young Methodism in the State. The co-operation and assistance of the pastors and Leagues in the Aberdeen district was earnestly requested. Bishops Galloway and Hendrix, Dr. H. M. DuBose and Rev. Joe Ramsey were mentioned as being the prominent speakers secured for the occasion. The music is to be under the direction of Mr. W. A. Hemphill, of Texas, who desires a choir of 150 voices composed of the best musical talent that can be furnished by the Leagues of the State.

Rev. J. M. Wyatt preached an Easter sermon at eleven o'clock, Sunday, to a large and appreciative congregation.

The following visitors were present: Rev. G. D. French, Nashville; Rev. R. A. Meek, Starkville; Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, and Rev. R. A. Burroughs, Starkville.

It is hoped the Leaguers who attended this Conference were benefited spiritually by the fellowship of kindred minds and hearts. Let us keep constantly before us our motto, "All for Christ;" so that the Christ-life shall be magnified in our lives; then each of us may be able to say with Paul, "For to me to live is Christ." To the Members of the Woman's Home Mission Society, North Mississippi Conference:

'Tis said, "Death loves a shining mark," and surely this was exemplified when our beloved Conference secretary, Mrs. J. S. Featherston, was taken from us. Closely identified with the society as its corresponding secretary since 1893, her whole being has been devoted to its interests, and much of the prosperity attending it has been due to her unremitting labors. Bright and attractive in her person, clear and forcible in her arguments, her presence gave an added charm to every meeting. As our representative to the General Conventions, she has invariably reflected honor on our body. As she lived, so she passed away. One very dear to her writes: "The last days of her life were so beautiful that death has lost its horror to those of us who were with her. She was calm and composed all day while bidding loved ones farewell. Early on the morning of March 9 her pure spirit winged its way to the Master's throne."

Her place in our society is left vacant, but we who are spared must put forth greater effort, for the work must not suffer. While God has taken away one of our strongest pillars, we must lean the harder on him, and seek the wisdom that cometh from on high, to guide us aright. May this dispensation of his providence result in good to the society! As with tear-bedimmed eyes and sorrowing hearts we look up, may we be enabled to say: "He doeth all things well. Our Father doth not willingly afflict the children of men."

BE JOYFUL.

Rejoice! Be glad! Be cheerful of a meek countenance, of a smiling face! Be of good courage—never somber, sad or gloomy! Let the joy of the Lord be your strength. Bubble up and run over with joy; let it well up from a great heart of love like a reservoir of God from which you and everyone else can draw its exhaustible supplies. Make everybody happy, be full of exultant joy. Your business is to bless; your mission is to bind up the broken-hearted, to lift up the fallen, to inspire and encourage the despondent and faltering, to make everyone to be glad and to rejoice.—The King's Messenger.

Cleansing is the divinely prescribed preparation for service. The writer of the sublime Epistle to the Hebrews recognizes the fact that moral purification, however necessary and desirable, is not the end, the final aim of redemption. The blood of Christ cleanses the conscience from dead works to serve the living God. In coming to God we must believe that he is, and that he is the rewarder of them that diligently seek him. He is not indifferent, unfeeling, impassive. He feels, wills, acts. Infinite energy radiates from him. To a living God, through a living Savior, by a living faith, believers are to offer themselves a living sacrifice. Everything pertaining to God is full of life. His word is quick, that is, living; the way into which he brings redeemed ones is a living way; the sustenance he provides is living bread and living water, yea, fountains of waters of life; believers come to a living Stone. We serve the living God. His service is perfect freedom. The very highest conception of the life of the redeemed in glory is that God's servants shall do him service, they shall see his face, his name shall be in their foreheads.—The Indian Witness.

At a Methodist love-feast a good brother had indulged in a long, complaining strain of experiences about the trials and difficulties in the way to heaven. Another of a different spirit followed, who said: "I see our brother who has just sat down lives in Grumbling Street. I lived there myself for some time, and never enjoyed good health. The air is bad, the houses bad, the water bad; the birds never came and sang in the street, and I was gloomy and sad enough. But I flitted. I got into Thanksgiving Street, and ever since then I have had good health, and so have my family. The air is pure, the water good, the houses good; the sun shines in it all day; the birds are always singing, and I am as happy as I can be. Now I recommend our brother to 'flit.' There are plenty of houses to let in Thanksgiving Street."—Christian Intelligencer.

If all the promises in the Bible were written in a book, they would make a good-sized volume. They are exceeding great and precious. Every inch of the way from where we sit and stand to-day to the heavenly city is covered over and over with promises. But it is not the number and vastness alone that makes them so valuable, but their immutability. Heaven and earth may pass away, but not one jot or tittle of these precious promises can fail. Those who stand by faith on them are just as safe as though they were in heaven.—Southern Advocate.

A cheerful, hopeful religion is the need of the hour. We do not need the grace of God to enable us to find fault; but we do need it much to help us to exercise charity and to put us in a hopeful mood. Of doubt and disparagement there is enough; of faith, hope and charity there can not be too much.—Churchman.

To say that you can not forgive an injury is the same as to say that you can not do to others what God has done to you, or, more correctly still, that as you have not tasted of the Lord's goodness and grace, you are unqualified to exercise it towards others.—Churchman.

Do your duty to-day and let tomorrow take care of itself, for we may not live to see it.—Rev. John Heim.

The first wisdom is to retain the tongue.—Cato.

PARSONAGES.

MR. EDITOR: I have just read an article in the ADVOCATE from "Parsonage," and I was filled with joy as I followed the lines that portrayed so accurately the condition of some parsonages. I have had some experience along that line. I have moved into parsonages that made me blush with shame. I did not want anyone to pass by and see its shameful condition. It burdened my heart and stirred my energy to its highest point, until it could be put into a respectable condition. I do believe that it is as much our duty to keep God's property neat and tidy as it is our duty to execute the work of a minister on other lines. I feel and realize that it is a part of my religion to keep the parsonage in good condition, and as long as the good Lord gives me strength and health, I intend to see to it that the parsonage in which I live shall look decent and inviting.

If some of our brethren had to build two or three parsonages, they would try to take better care of those committed to their care. I trust that some may learn a lesson from the "Parsonage" article. This neglect is doing harm to the interest that lay members manifest in keeping the parsonage in a good state of improvement. "Cleanliness is next to godliness," and should be observed the world over. MINISTER.

Few, if any, persons who persistently sin against themselves, society and God, escape punishment on this side of eternity. A man's worst tormentor is his own guilty heart. "Be sure your sin will find you out" has been proven solemnly true by many an unregenerate sinner who perhaps has avoided public condemnation.—Selected.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. Jno. A. Miller, Patterson, La., April 3, 1899: "We closed a very interesting meeting here last Wednesday night. It continued eleven days. Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard was with me eight days, and preached real, pure gospel-searching sermons. He captured our people. Much good was done and seed sown that will bring fruit."

Rev. T. J. Noreworthy, Camden, Miss.: "We will send you at least a dozen new subscribers during the second quarter. Our first Quarterly Conference was held on April 1. Bro. Holloman was present, presided with dignity, and gave great satisfaction both in the chair and pulpit. Camden circuit will always hail his coming with delight. Financee well up, one-fourth of the presiding elder's salary being paid, and nearly as much of preacher in charge. We would be glad indeed, Mr. Editor, to welcome you to this, your old home. Can't you come?"

Rev. P. D. Hardin, Chapman, Miss., writes: "We are moving along very nicely on the Shiloh charge. Since the weather and roads have gotten better congregations are large and everything seems to be taking on new life. We have collected and forwarded [illegible] dollars and fifty cents for the conference claimants, which is one dollar and fifty cents more than our full assessment. Our first Quarterly Conference was held at John's, March 18 and 19. The attendance was good. Our new presiding elder, Rev. T. L. Neilen, was on hand, and preached two fine sermons. He captured all of us, and, as a token of our appreciation, we paid him one-fourth of his entire assessment. We also paid our assessment for district parsonage repairs. The stewards made ample provision for the pastor's support this year, with a good per cent. paid up to date. Everything indicates a successful year. The ADVOCATE gets better all the time. I am trying to increase its circulation among my people. They need it. They can't afford to do without it. Oh, that we may succeed in obtaining the requisite number of subscribers to reduce the price to one dollar per annum! May God bless you in your glorious work!"

WINNSBORO CIRCUIT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Our first Quarterly Conference convened March 25, but our "beloved," Bro. J. D. Harper, to the disappointment of all, was sick and unable to be with us. Our reports are not as encouraging as some I see in the ADVOCATE, but we all think we are doing tolerably well. We have four appointments now and will have another a little later. Have one Sunday-school working well and another in "Winter-quarters" that will come out soon. I hope to organize one or more Epworth Leagues during the year. We have also a local, not connectional, Woman's Home Mission Society doing good work. Their topics for their regular meetings are, usually, mission topics.

This (Franklin) parish "went dry" at a local option election last year; consequently all saloons were closed Dec. 31. We have had one "blind tiger" in Winnsboro since the prohibition law became effective, but he has been arrested, and tried, and is now serving out an eight months' sentence in the parish prison with five other bills of information reserved against him for the future. Public opinion is decidedly against liquor selling in this parish.

My predecessor, Rev. I. L. Bronson, and his estimable wife, both Pennsylvanians, are held in high esteem by these good people. Many are the expressions one hears concerning his good work, especially in repairing the church-buildings and purchasing and improving the neat, comfortable little parsonage. We are working, praying and hoping for advancement on all lines this year.

CARROLLTON, MISS.

We have had a great meeting at Carrollton, Miss. Our pastor, the Rev. H. T. Cunningham, began special services on Wednesday night, March 15, and preached every day till the following Monday, when the Rev. J. E. Thomas, of Greenville, came and preached twice each day till the following Friday. Bro. Thomas made a profound impression on our community, and many were the regrets that he was called home by sickness in his family. He was followed by the prayers of our people. On Saturday the Rev. B. B. Sullivan preached, and on Sunday the Rev. W. W. Whitfield, of the Baptist Church, gave us two discourses. Our pastor preached again on Monday, and on Tuesday the Rev. W. M. McIntosh, of West Point, came and preached twice daily till Friday night. The church was wonderfully revived. All the preachers remarked they had never seen such large congregations as assembled each day at eleven o'clock A. M. during the entire meeting. Besides the ministers mentioned above we had the assistance of Rev. Mr. Snell, Episcopal rector, who frequently led the congregation in prayer.

On Easter Sunday we had a great congregation and received into the church on profession of faith fifteen persons, all of whom had been taught in our Sunday-school. This is specially refreshing and encouraging to our Sunday-school workers.

Rejoicing in this spiritual awakening, I am gratified to be able to add this paragraph: According to previous purpose and prearranged plans we added thirty-one names to our "Twentieth Century Paid List," and $33.65 to the fund, which amount has been forwarded to Bro. Park, making a total of $195.25 from Carrollton. We are yet after those who have not yet paid, and will continue our work. I hope to receive after the first Sunday in May many similar, but better reports. Let every preacher in Mississippi bestir himself to make the best report possible. Begin now to make adequate preparation for Twentieth Century Education Day, the first Sunday in May. Geo. Heagland and Samuel Cupples, of Missouri, have recently given four thousand and twenty-five thousand dollars, respectively, to this fund. We hope to record similar gifts in Mississippi. In the meantime let us not fail to get small gifts from the many. J. R. BINGHAM.

Flowers are the poetry of the earth. Babies the sonnets of humanity. Banish the smiles, the dimples and the laughter of childhood and the world would become a barren wilderness, inhabited by savages.

Woman's ultimate mission, duty and joy on earth are comprised in the one word, "Motherhood." Multitudes of women fail of this mission because of weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism. They do not understand that disorders of this description unfit them for wifehood and motherhood, and as a consequence are careless and neglectful of their health in a womanly way. Others who realize the truth, shrink from the "examinations" and "local treatments" insisted upon by the average physician. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription does away with the necessity for these obnoxious examinations and local treatments. It acts directly and only on the delicate and important organs that are the vestibule of human life and makes them strong, healthy, vigorous, virile and elastic. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. It banishes the annoyances of the uncomfortable period preceding maternity and makes baby's arrival in the world easy and nearly painless. All the dangers of maternity vanish under its beneficent influence. Its use during the period of anticipation is a guarantee of the little stranger's health and an ample supply of natural nourishment. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits. All medicine stores sell it. Accept no substitute that may be represented as "just as good."

"For ten years I suffered untold misery," writes Mrs. Carline King, of New Boston, Scioto Co., Ohio. "I then took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and eleven months later presented my husband with a twelve-pound boy. My health is good."

Best Edition of the World's Best Book

—THE—

"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers. New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangment for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to April, 1900. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

THE SABBATH QUESTION.

The church of to-day has before it no problem of more vital importance than that of the preservation of the Christian Sabbath, with its hallowed influences and measureless benefits. When we consider the increasing inroads that are being made upon its sanctity and privileges by the selfish and godless of this generation, we confess to a feeling of alarm. Corporations and individuals, church members in great numbers, and sinners—all seem bent on converting it either into a day of toil or a day of amusement, and thus are undermining the very foundation-stone of public morality as well as of Christianity. That there is a vast amount of indifference among professing Christians as regards the proper observance of the Sabbath is so plain as to need no demonstration; but, alas! the evil does not stop here. An astonishingly large proportion of our church people not only fail to keep the Sabbath holy by observing it as a day of worship, but, on the contrary, desecrate it in a multitude of ways. Not until Christians everywhere become more strict in their views respecting the sacredness of the Sabbath, and more devout in observing it, can we expect to make substantial headway against the tide of worldliness and greed that threatens to sweep away the Sabbath, with all the high and lowly things it stands for.

As Dr. Alexander Southland, of Toronto, Canada, points out in his recent work, "The Kingdom of God and Problems of To-Day:" "A vast amount of work is now done on the Lord's day that was not done on that day thirty or forty years ago, and forms of Sabbath amusement and dissipation are common now that public opinion formerly tabooed. The operating of railways entails a vast amount of Sunday labor, the greater part of it entirely unnecessary. In like manner the carrying and the distribution of mails, the running of a certain class of factories, the publishing of Sunday newspapers, telephone and telegraphic communication, Sunday street-cars, Sunday excursions, open saloons, a hundred things besides, have all become common within a generation, involving the compulsory labor of tens of thousands for no better reason than that they may minister to the selfish greed of some and to the selfish pleasures of others."

In view of all these encroachments upon the quiet and rest of the Lord's day, many of them being entirely without excuse or justification, it is our deep conviction that it is high time to call a halt, for if we allow the Sabbath to become secularized, we lose the most sacred and efficient of all religious influences, and open, as it were, the very flood-gates of iniquity. Scarcely any other sin is followed by a more numerous or appalling train of evils than that of Sabbath-breaking. Indulgence therein speedily blunts the moral sensibilities and obliterates all religious impressions. If it be said that modern civilization demands a more lax observance of the Sabbath than was formerly the case, so much the worse for modern civilization. The premium it puts upon the profanation of God's holy day is in no small degree an element of danger and disintegration.

The physical and social being of man, as well as his spiritual welfare, demands the preservation in its integrity of the Christian Sabbath. It has been demonstrated time and again that men and animals can do more and better work by laboring six days and resting one day in seven than by laboring every day without cessation. Said Dr. W. F. Tillett, of Vanderbilt University, not long since: "In no way does the Christian religion show itself to be the real friend of the poor and laboring classes more than by insisting on the universal observance of the Sabbath as a day of rest and worship. An association of twenty physicians all voted 'yes' to the question as to whether or not men who labor six days in the week will be more healthy and live longer, other things being equal, than those who work seven, and that they will do a larger amount of work." Wage-earners who do Sunday labor soon find out that they must do seven day's work for six days' pay.

It is an ominous sign that the Sabbath is by a large class coming more and more to be looked upon, not as a "holy day," but as a "holiday"—a day meant principally for amusement and recreation. Instead of being devoted principally to religious uses, it is by not a few church members given over to pleasure-seeking and lounging. While city dwellers are usually supposed to be the greatest sinners in this regard, their rural neighbors are far from guiltless. The Sunday visiting and feasting which characterize many communities in the country are shameful and sinful because of the burdens imposed upon housewives, who are thus denied church privileges, and because of the frivolity and misuse of the Sabbath's precious hours occasioned by such a custom. The church member who patronizes a Sunday excursion, or boards a Sunday train, merely for convenience or profit, soon comes to regard Sunday as no more than any other day, and away goes his religion. The Sunday reading of a large number of professed disciples scarcely differs from that of non-professors and worldlings. Is it any wonder, then, that their piety is of the milk and water type!—that their convictions are all on the surface! "But," says the devotee of pleasure, "the Sabbath was made for man, and not men for the Sabbath." So be it. But what is man's chief good? If it be physical and intellectual enjoyment, then our would-be sage is right in clamoring for the Sabbath as a day of amusement and revelry. But if man be not a mere animal, but a spiritual being, endowed with godlike faculties, and ordained to inherit eternal life, then the chief design of the Sabbath is religious, and whatever does not harmonize with the spiritual object is a profanation. There is far less danger from Puritanism (now regarded as the synonym of excessive strictness in Sabbath observance) than from too great laxity with reference thereto.

It is often pleaded in extenuation of certain forms of Sabbath desecration, that the majority practice these things, and that one's abstaining therefrom would make little or no difference. One might as well argue that because others commit murder it is of no use for him to be law-abiding and life-respecting. Shall we follow a multitude to do evil, because, forsooth, we can not induce them to walk in right paths? Unquestionably there is great need that parents and religious teachers everywhere should put strong emphasis upon the necessity of a right observance of the Sabbath. The safety of the nation and of the church demands it. Unless there is determined and united effort in this direction, heaven only knows how far we shall drift from the moorings of righteousness and truth. The law of the Sabbath has not been abrogated, and he who violates it does so at the peril of his soul.

A LEGISLATIVE FIASCO.

By request of the Secretary of War the Attorney General has interpreted the "Anti-Canteen Act," recently passed by Congress. According to his interpretation, the law does not abolish the canteens; it only prohibits their being kept by soldiers. The army dram-shop is to go on with its deadly work as aforetime; but it will be operated by a fellow that does not wear the blue. And this is what we temperance folks have been jubilating over as a great temperance victory! Did the congressman who drew the bill "play sharp" on the temperance crowd, and catch them napping? So it seems. Who is responsible for this disgraceful fiasco? This question will, doubtless, be answered in due time.

A NEW BOOK.

SPIRITUAL SANCTIFICATION: AN ATTEMPTED SOLUTION OF THE HOLINESS PROBLEM. By the Rev. Jno. R. Brooks, D. D., of the Western North Carolina Conference. With an introduction by Jno. J. Tigert, D. D., LL.D., Book Editor M. E. Church, South. Publishing House of the M. E. Church, South: Barbee & Smith, Agents, Nashville, Tenn.

The above-named work lies upon our table by courtesy of the author, whom it is our privilege to count on our list of personal friends. The scope of the work is well presented in the following extract from the introductory chapter: "We have tried to harmonize as far as possible the apparently conflicting theories touching the nature of this great blessing and the time and condition of its development. We have tried to show that there is a broad scriptural and conservative platform on which Christians of all parties can consistently stand. To what extent we have succeeded in this object the public must determine. We frankly confess, however, that we are not sanguine about conciliating or convincing extremists on either side of this question. Indeed, we have scant hope of such result. It has not been our purpose to bewilder the reader with pages of speculation, but to keep as near as possible to the teaching of Scripture, to our own experience, and to the testimony of others on whom the Holy Spirit has poured his illumination. . . . We have read more or less thoroughly some fifty or more volumes devoted to this theme, trying to get the best thought on every phase of this many-sided subject. . . . We have tried not to follow blindly the teaching of anyone. On the contrary, we have endeavored to test the soundness of their teaching by the Word of God, reason and experience. We rejoice at the general attention that is being drawn to this and kindred truths. Christians of all schools of thought seem more inclined to magnify the work of the Holy Ghost in his baptismal and anointing power, which, as we think we have shown, is substantially the same as the Pauline, Johannean and Wesleyan doctrine of entire sanctification, or perfect love. It is our ambition in some small degree, at least, to increase the momentum of this movement."

This introductory promise is liberally fulfilled. The author's investigation has been painstaking and thorough. The spirit of the work is most admirable. All phases of the many-sided controversy are presented with the utmost fairness, and there is an utter absence of the intolerant spirit which characterizes a large part of the recent controversial literature on this subject. The work is worthy of careful study by all who are interested in this question. The paper, typography and binding are good. Although only a few weeks have elapsed since its publication, the first edition of one thousand copies is almost exhausted. We bespeak for it an extensive sale.

THIS EXPLAINS THE DIFFERENCE.

The American Illustrated Methodist Magazine is published monthly at St. Louis, Mo. It is edited by the Rev. James W. Lee, D. D., and the Rev. Naphtali Luccock, D. D. It has no connection with a bi-monthly publication bearing a similar name, and recently issued from New York. Our readers will bear in mind the distinction. The American Illustrated Methodist Magazine is full magazine size and is issued every month at $1 a year. Orders for it should be addressed to The Methodist Magazine Publishing Co., 223 N. Second St., St. Louis, Mo. As some of our readers do not understand that the St. Louis monthly publication is entirely distinct from the New York bi-monthly, we make this explanation.

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

The leading feature of the April number of St. Nicholas is a new serial by Emelia E. Barr. The serials of Mr. Henty, Miss Carolyn Wells, and Mr. Howe, are continued, and, as usual, the magazine abounds in pictures and verse, which add to the interest of this popular periodical for young folks.

In the Woman's Home Companion, for April, the second paper of the Southern Confederacy, by Edward Page Gaston, describes the inauguration of Jefferson Davis. Another subject of national interest is Mrs. Valentine's account of the "Women Who Grace Cabinet Member's Homes," illustrated from recent photographs.

We are in receipt of a very unique and interesting booklet entitled, "The Philippines and New Possessions," edited by W. J. Seawright, and published by The R. H. Woodward Co., Baltimore, Md. The book contains many photographs, and much valuable information in regard to Spain, Cuba, Porto Rico and Hawaii.

The Critic is a very interesting monthly review of literature, art, and life. The April number has an unusually attractive table of contents, which includes an article on "The Evolution of Henry James," by Cornelia Atwoot Pratt; a sketch of the little Jewess recently discovered by Zangwill, and a charming essay on M. Rod, by Th. Bentzon.

The Midland Monthly Magazine, for April, has a splendid article on "Newspaper Poets," illustrated with some good portraits. V. L. Drain describes "An Experiment in Communism," and John W. Emmerson continues his history of "Grant's Vicksburg Campaign." H. A. Crafts tells of "Some Peculiar Irrigating Methods in Colorado."

In the Open Court, for April, Prof. L. Levy-Bruhl, of the University of Paris, writes on Jean Jacques Rousseau, the founder of modern pedagogy. The Education of Parents by Their Children is the subject of an essay by Dr. Paul Carus. The Origin of Speech is treated by Prof. Th. Ribot. Current questions are discussed by the editor under the headings of Americanism and Expansion, and Americanism in the Roman Church.

In McClure's Magazine, for April, Cleveland Moffett gives an account of his journeys on the engines and in the postal cars of the Fast Mail, at a rate of upwards of ninety miles an hour. The article is splendidly illustrated by W. D. Stevens with drawings made from life. The reminiscences of Lincoln from Charles Sumner, Carl Schurz, and others, embodied in Miss Tarbell's account of Lincoln's attitude and relation to emancipation, give the paper much historical value as well as add greatly to its interest.

In Ainslee's Magazine, for April, appears a curious article on some Indian picture writing recently discovered, which tells the story of the Custer Massacre as it appeared to the Indians. The strange and intricate workings of the United States Secret Service have been studied and mastered by Mr. Arthur Henry, who contributes to the magazine the story of this great system. There are other articles of interest, notably a graphic study of Joseph H. Choate, our new Ambassador to England, by Theodore Dreiser, and a paper by Chauncey M. Depew upon "What the Twentieth Century Offers to the Young American."

The contents of Self-Culture, for April, include, among other instructive reading, thoughtful papers on subjects of national import. Of these the following will be found well worth perusal: "The Newer Citizenship," by Pres. Henry Davies, Ph.D.; "Municipal Misrule: Its Causes and Remedies," by Prof. F. Spencer Baldwin, and "Constitutional Government Imperilled," by Edwin Burritt Smith. Prof. Goldwin Smith contributes an informing article on "Ritualism in England," and Prof. J. G. Hibben, an interesting illustrated paper on "Princeton University." Among the descriptive articles in the number are two, on "The Hawaiian Islands" and "The Canadian Rockies."

Scribner's Magazine, for April, is an Easter number with a special colored cover, designed by Maxfield Parrish. A literary feature beginning in this number is the first serial story in an American magazine by Quiller Couch, with the poetic title, "The Ship of Stars." Colonel Roosevelt reaches the climax of his narrative of the Rough Riders in the description given in this number of the battle of San Juan Hill. Senator Hoar gives political reminiscences of the early days of the Free Soil party, continuing into the formation of the Republican party, down through the administrations of President Grant. William James, the eminent psychologist, writes an essay of direct practical application, entitled, "The Gospel of Relaxation." It is a special plea for a more intelligent use of energy.

Can not American Methodists partition out our Spanish possessions, so that each denomination can co-operate and not compete. Why not let Cuba come to the Southern Methodists, Porto Rico and the Philippines go to the North? Here is a test of our talking of fraternity—"federation." This one division of the field between Paul and Barnabas, not after "a sharp contention," but much "Blessed-be-the-tie" would roll a joy over the millions of Methodists in America. Let's part the land in love.—Richmond Advocate.

Suffer, if you must; do not quarrel with the dear Lord's appointments for you. Only try, if you are to suffer, to do it splendidly. That's the only way to take up a pleasure or a pain.—Phillips Brooks.

NOTES.

The distinguished journalist and author, Charles Dudley Warner, seriously ill in this city.

Rev. J. L. P. Shoppard and Rev. W. G. Evans, both of the Louisiana Conference, sent in their full assessment for foreign missions several weeks ago.

We learn from the Nashville Advocate that Bishop Fitzgerald is again in feeble health, so that he will have to desist from pulpit and platform work for a time.

On account of impaired health Rev. Barnette Wright has been compelled to give up the pastorate of Burgundy Street Church. He will spend the remainder of the year with his parents in Kentucky.

Rev. J. W. McGee, of the North Mississippi Conference, has been quite ill, but is now on the road to recovery, and hopes soon to be able to do full work. Even during his illness he has not forgotten to work for the ADVOCATE.

Bishop Galloway is now in New York attending a meeting of the trustees of the Slater Fund. En route he lectured at Knoxville, Tenn. He spent Sunday and Monday in Washington, the Baltimore Conference being in session there.

Dr. W. B. Lafferty, a talented young physician, son of Rev. J. B. Lafferty, D D., editor of the Richmond Advocate, was killed by a train on the C. and O. R. R. on the tenth. We deeply sympathize with our brother in his sore bereavement.

The Midland Methodist is authority for the statement that Vanderbilt University has received a donation of $100,000 from W. H. Vanderbilt. A good beginning for our "Twentieth Century Fund." This should be a stimulus to our people everywhere to contribute liberally to this cause.

Rev. W. L. Blackwell, of the Vancleave circuit, Mississippi Conference, writes: "I have had my second Quarterly Conference, the eighth and ninth. Bro. Sharp was with us, and preached two edifying sermons. The occasion was indeed a spiritual feast. The people were very much edified."

Rev. S. P. Jones lectured to a large audience, last Saturday night, in Washington Artillery Hall. He preached on Sunday morning in Carondelet and in the afternoon in Rayne Memorial. On both occasions he had a crowded house. His efforts were in his own unique and itable style. From here he went to Texas, where he has several engagements.

On reaching his office one morning recently, Dr. E. N. Evans, pastor of Carondelet Street Church, was surprised to see that some one during his absence had, without leave or license, taken possession of it and covered the floor with a brand new carpet. The Doctor took no offense at the trespass. He would be pleased to be willing for the first of April to be often oftener than once a year.

From a private letter from Rev. F. Watkins we quote as follows: "Last Sunday was a great day with us. The exercises began with a special missionary program in the Sunday-school. Then, at 11 o'clock, Dr. Andrews preached to a fine congregation, and at night Bishop Galloway preached an eloquent sermon to a crowd that packed the house and thronged the church and vestibule."

MR. EDITOR: Bro. J. A. Lee, of the Holly Springs circuit, Mississippi Conference, is at the point of death of consumption and requests me to ask the ADVOCATE the prayers of the readers of the Conference; but his end will come before this reaches you. J. H.

The above will be read with painful interest throughout the Mississippi Conference. Let prayer be made that the life of this faithful itinerant may be spared to the church.

I like to study a book a chapter at a time. If my wife should send me a letter of eight pages I should read one page, and then would forget what she is.—D. L. Moody.

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Jackson, La., EDITOR.

All aboard!

For Crowley.

State League Conference.

Plan now to attend.

Time near at hand; do not forget—April 20-23

Pastors will please make announcements accordingly, and send in names of those who will attend at once.

Send names to Rev. Percy R. Knickerhocker, Crowley, La., who will secure free entertainment for all who attend. This is important; do not delay.

For particulars as to rates, etc., write to Rev. H. H. Ahrens, 3641 Constance street, New Orleans.

The Shreveport and Arcadia districts will shortly hold League Conferences within their bounds. We appreciate the invitations to be present at each and fill a place on programme, and regret that previous engagements preclude the possibility.

In a letter recently received from Rev. Paul M. Brown, Conshatta, La., he states that, ere long, two Epworth Leagues will be organized in the bounds of his charge. So mote it be!

The March-April number of the Methodist Magazine is bright and interesting. On first page is a good picture of "the most prominent Methodist layman in America."

The first article, entitled, "Backward California Glimpses," is contributed by Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald in his own delightful style, which makes everything he writes so readable.

It is significant to note that President McKinley and Bishop Fitzgerald, who thus figure prominently in this popular magazine, are ardent friends of the Epworth League movement, and have each been potent factors in the organization and development of the work.

The work in Mississippi grows apace. We know of no State in the South in which the interest has increased so rapidly and the work so materially developed.

Many young men and women hitherto comparatively unknown in church work have been developed and brought to the front till they have become "workmen that needeth not to be ashamed." What the League has done for the Mississippians it can do for the young people of other States.

"When weary in the strife I faint,
When pours my soul her deep complaint—
Her warfare but begun;
O God! how doth it cheer my heart,
What pow'r to live and wait impart,
To hear that word, "Well done!"

NOTICE.

The Southern Pacific railroad, through Mr. L. J. Parks, informs me that the rate for our Conference is fixed finally for one-fare round trip. I have received the names of some eighty delegates. I will be compelled to have the names before the Conference, so that arrangements may be made for them. Let everyone expecting to come write me through their secretaries or inform me themselves at least four days before the Conference. If necessary to reach me a day or so ahead, let them telegraph their names.

RESOLUTION.

The Board of Trustees, at a called meeting on yesterday, passed the enclosed resolution and instructed me to forward same with request for publication. JNO. W. GRIFFIS,

April 7, 1899.

Appreciating the importance of our educational interests, we heartily endorse the Twentieth Century Fund, and request that all the preachers of the North Mississippi Conference observe the first Sunday in May, and carry out the programme as furnished by the General Board of Education.

GLEN MARTIN CHURCH.

As I move over my district, I find that there are, here and there, new churches and parsonages, some already completed and others nearing completion. Others of these buildings, so necessary to a live Methodism, are being planned and steps taken for their erection in the near future.

Glen Martin Church, on the Conshatta circuit, is a real gem of architectural beauty and finish. When a body of people put up a church like that, it stands as an indication of their refinement and self-respect. Located about four miles from Conshatta, and on the other side of the river, it will answer all the purposes of the church that will soon be organized there, and which will no doubt put into active operation the Epworth League, Sunday-school and all other of our ecclesiastical machinery. Begun during Rev. J. F. Patterson's pastorate, the Rev. Paul M. Brown, this year in charge, is looking for a Methodist episcopos or some lesser headlight to solemnly dedicate it unto God, and so set it apart from all unhallowed and common uses. Mr. W. B. Clark, well-known to many of the brethren of the Louisiana Conference, was the main instrument, under God, for the building of this very creditable church-house. I greatly enjoyed on last Sunday afternoon meeting those Glen Martin folk and preaching Christ to them from the pulpit of their new church.

1. When a remittance is made to the treasurer of the Board of Education, please state whether it goes to the "Twentieth Century Fund" or regular assessment.

2. When a remittance is made in the interest of the "Twentieth Century Fund," please state the number of members in the charge and the number represented in the contribution. It is my purpose to keep a record of these points, and I hope to be able to report to the next Annual Conference the "banner charge" (charge contributing largest amount per member) and the banner district. SOMETHING NEW UNDER THE SUN.

Yesterday (Easter Sunday) our new church at Belzoni was opened and christened with song and prayer. It is a tasty, beautiful and substantial structure costing about $1,000. It was begun under the administration of my predecessor, Rev. J. H. Bass. It was a calm and lovely Easter Sunday. The first sermon was on the Resurrection of Christ. Every seat in the house was occupied by an attentive listener, and every one seemed to be proud of the beautiful new church and rejoice in the song and service. The door of the church was opened, and we received one member on profession of faith—a fair young lady in the prime of life. At the new altar she took the vows that millions on earth and in heaven have taken, and received holy baptism.

The Methodist membership is small in number in this town and vicinity, but they are not a feeble folk, as is seen in what they have wrought. L. M. LIPSCOMB.

CHRISTIAN WOMANHOOD.

BY REV. W. C. BLACK, D. D.

The above-named work has had a sale of nearly six thousand. From the many scores of highly commendatory notices that have appeared in the church papers, we present the following:

"We hope it will be read by every woman in the church."—Florida Advocate.

"It is the best thesaurus of facts concerning womanhood with which we are acquainted. The author has evidently given painstaking thought and care to the preparation of this volume. After showing the degraded condition of woman under the highest pagan civilizations, he demonstrates that it was Christianity that began to raise her to higher levels, and that since the Reformation the good work has been going forward. We wish thousands of women to read this excellent volume."—Dr. C. F. Deems.

The price is $1, and we will send it postpaid on receipt of that sum. But to that select class who subscribe for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we make the following special offer: Pay your subscription one full year in advance, and send us sixty cents additional, and we will send you the book postpaid.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR.

Thousands of Families Have One in the House at All Times.

The Same Exceptional Opportunity Offered Here to All Readers of This Paper.

A prominent citizen remarked recently to the editor of "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE:" "It may seem surprising to you, but in my house we have a family doctor there all the time. Nor am I the only one who has this great blessing," said he. "I know of many families who have this same doctor always on hand, always within reach."

"Do I mean a man, a physician, in flesh and blood?" he asked. "No, not exactly that; the family doctor that I refer to is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy. We have not had to call a doctor to our house since we have used it."

This is the testimony of thousands who know Swamp-Root for what it is. This famous medicine is the absolute conqueror of kidney and bladder diseases, and many a man and woman who walk the streets to-day in the complete possession of health owe their lives to the power of this great discovery over kidney and bladder ills and uric acid disturbances. In diseases of the blood, no matter from what source they arise, Swamp-Root goes right to the source of the trouble, and cures by first removing the cause, and sends the blood leaping and bounding away in quest of bright eyes and rosy cheeks.

Constipation and liver troubles, urinal weaknesses and the torture that goes with them, rheumatism, stiff joints, in fact, diseases arising from any wrong condition of the blood, liver, bladder or kidneys, are promptly overcome by Dr. Kilmer's famous discovery, Swamp-Root.

None but those who have made a study of the subject realize what an immense amount of work the kidneys perform every day. They are the sewer of the system, and once they become clogged up, poison runs riot and disease has full sway. Just as a choked sewer breeds pestilence in a city, so do weak and unhealthy kidneys breed disease in the human body.

Swamp-Root clears out all the impurities, helps the kidneys to perform their work properly, drives the poison out of the blood and system, invigorates and regenerates you and adds tenfold to the pleasures and comforts of life.

Swamp-Root has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief, and has proved so successful that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of the "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE," who have not already tried it may have a free sample bottle of Swamp-Root and thus test for themselves its wonderful curative properties.

If you will send your name and full address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., a sample bottle will be sent absolutely free by mail post-paid, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and containing some of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women who owe their good health, in fact their very lives, to the wonderful curative properties of Swamp-Root.

This great remedy is for sale at most drug stores in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. Don't make any mistake, but make a note of the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and remember that it is prepared only by Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

If you take advantage of this generous offer and write for a free sample bottle be sure and mention the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE when sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

THE REASON WHY.

BY PRISCILLA LEONARD.

I know a little maiden who is always in a hurry,
She races through her breakfast to be in time for school;
She scribbles at her desk in a hasty sort of flurry,
And comes home in a breathless whirl that fills the vestibule.

She hurries through her studying, she hurries through her sewing,
Like an engine at high pressure, as if leisure were a crime;
She's always in a scramble, no matter where she's going,
And yet—would you believe it?—she never is in time!

It seems a contradiction, until you know the reason;
But I'm sure you think it simple, as I do, when I state
That she never has been known to begin a thing in season,
And she's always in a hurry, because she starts too late.

—Christian Advocate.

BE BRIEF.

I saw one excellence was within my reach—it was brevity; and I determined to attain it.—Jay.

Many a youth has failed to get a situation because he talked too much when making his application. Business men have no time to waste, and they appreciate brevity. Brevity of expression always makes a favorable impression upon a good business man.

When you have occasion to call on a man during business hours, stick closely to the matter under discussion, and use just as few words as possible, and get away as quickly as you can. Every moment of his working hours is valuable, and he has no time for useless conversation.

Many a writer has had his manuscript returned "with thanks," or without, because he did not express himself briefly and pointedly. Editors have no time to rewrite articles, and often return valuable material because the ideas contained in it are too long drawn out. One of the greatest helps to success in any walk in life is to learn to think concisely and to express oneself briefly. Rufus Choate would convey in a minute's conversation what his contemporaries would require an hour to state clearly. Then he returned to his work. While a correspondent would devote a column of the paper to an important article, Thurlow Weed would treat the same subject in a few words in the Albany Evening Journal, and put the argument into such shape as to carry far more conviction.

"I am surprised that we lost our case," said a lawyer to his client. "I said all I could for you." "That was the trouble," replied the convicted man. "You said too much. Your long argument will hang me."

"Wasn't that a finished sermon?" asked a lady of a friend, as the two were going out of church. "Yes," was the reply, "but I thought at one time it never would be, and I forgot the first of it before the middle was reached."

"Be brief," Cyrus W. Field once advised a friend. "Time is very valuable. Punctuality, honesty and brevity are the watchwords of life. Never write a long letter. A business man has not time to read it. If you have anything to say, be brief. There is no business so important that it can't be told on one sheet of paper. Years ago, when I was laying the Atlantic cable, I had occasion to send a very important letter to England. I knew it would have to be read by the prime minister and by the Queen. I wrote out what I had to say; it covered several sheets of paper; then I went over it twenty times, eliminating words here and there, making sentences briefer, until finally I got all I had to say on one sheet of paper. Then I mailed it. In due time I received the answer. It was a satisfactory one, too; but do you think I would have fared so well if my letter had covered half a dozen sheets? No, indeed. Brevity is a rare gift."

A. T. Stewart regarded his time as his capital. No one was admitted to his private office until he had stated his business to a sentinel at an outer door, and then to another near the office. If the visitor pleaded private business, the sentinel would say, "Mr. Stewart has no private business." When admittance was gained, one had to be brief. The business of Stewart's establishment was dispatched with a system and promptitude which surprised rival merchants. There was no dawdling or dallying or fooling, but "business" was the watchword from morning until night. He refused to be drawn into friendly conversation during business hours. He had not a moment to waste.

If you want to do substantial work, concentrate; and if you want to give others the benefit of your work, condense.

"Genuine good taste," says Fenelon, "consists in saying much in a few words, in choosing among our thoughts, in having order and arrangement in what we say, and in speaking with composure."

"If you would be pungent," says Southey, "be brief; for it is with words as with sunbeams—the more they are condensed, the deeper they burn."

"When one has no design but to speak plain truth," says Steele, "he may say a great deal in a very narrow compass."

The fame of the Seven Wise Men of Greece rested largely upon a single sentence by each, of only two or three words.

"The wisdom of nations lies in their proverbs."

"Have something to say," says Tryon Edwards; "say it, and stop when you've done."

Gems are not reckoned by gross weight. Mere words are cheap and plenty enough; but ideas that rouse, and set multitudes thinking, come as gold from the mine.

Begin very near where you mean to leave off. Brevity is the soul of wisdom as well as of wit. —Success.

"I do not mind in the least," said a conscientious mother one day, "when I see my little daughter making mud-pies and soiling beyond wearing the frock that was clean an hour before, but my heart is full of solicitude when I see her unwilling to share some plaything with another child. I do not care at all when I see her toss off her hat and run bareheaded into the sunshine that is turning her as brown as a berry, but I am grieved unspeakably when I know that she has told me the least bit of an untruth."—Exchange.

Individuals are largely influenced by what they read and the conversation they hear. It enters into the very life and finds expression. First, in their words; second, in their actions, and, third, in the very expression of the countenance. How careful, then, should we be in the selection of the literature we read and the company we keep. "Of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."—Rev. J. G. Reed.

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT,

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living

I know nothing can make up for such a loss as yours. But you will still have love on earth all around you, and love is not dead. It lives still in the next world for you, and perhaps with you. For why should not those who are gone, if they are gone to their Lord, be actually nearer us, not farther from us, in the heavenly world?—Charles Kingsley.

NAPOLEON LOST THE BATTLE OF LEIPSIC because of a fit of indigestion. One dose of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL would have given him instant relief, and the fate of the kingdoms of Europe been decided differently. It is really marvelous how quickly a colicky pain will vanish when a teaspoonful of Mul-en-ol in a wineglass of hot water is taken. Try it; you will never suffer from colic.

Hygiene.

THE VALUE OF FRESH AIR.

The admitted advantage of an outdoor life in many morbid conditions, and notably in consumption, seems to point to the conclusion that there is something definitely injurious in the indoor life which is now the common mode of existence among civilized people.

It is a striking and startling thing that the mere removal of a patient into the open air should lower his fever, should remove his night sweats, and take away his hectic, and it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that if these symptoms are removed by the purity of the air outside, they must have been largely caused by the impurity of the air within the house.

Nor have we any right to assume that it is the consumptive only who suffers. Doubtless the healthy struggle against and overcome evil influences before which those who are tuberculosis succumb, but that is not to say that in the struggle we do not suffer, and, indeed, the facts recently brought forward are sufficient to show that the stuffy life of warmth and comfort which civilized man now "enjoys" is bad for the health even of the healthiest.

We make our windows fit, we pad our doors, we shiver at a draught, we surround ourselves with woolen curtains, dusty carpets, and fluffy, luxurious upholstery; we breathe the same air over and over again, and then we wonder that we are not strong and vigorous. The fact is, we are daily using up the exuberant vitality with which nature has provided us in struggling against artificial conditions.

How powerful for evil, how deteriorating these conditions are, is shown by the fact that their mere removal gives back to the consumptive that vitality which enables him to overcome the seeds of disease within him.

Fresh air is not a thing to be taken in little doses once a day, but a thing to live on.—London Hospital.

LEARN THIS FACT.

The body is constantly trying to throw off waste matter. This waste matter is intended, by nature, to be taken care of and carried off by the bowels, the kidneys, and the myriads of pores of the skin. If the bowels do not move daily or oftener; if the kidneys are not flushed by generous draughts of pure water, drunken midway between (not during) meals; if the pores of the skin are not kept open, then the waste matter, which should be thrown off, is cooped up in the system and poisons it.

It is often offered as an argument against the necessity of daily baths that our ancestors had no bath-tubs, and bathed infrequently, but they were much in the position of the laborers of to-day.

Their active lives, the coarse clothes they wore, the coarse food they ate, the simple lives they led, the pure air they breathed, etc., all contributed to keep their bodies frictioned into a state of health.

JOB EARNED HIS TITLE BY GREAT SUFFERING. Had he flourished in these days, his recourse for consolation would not have been the company of three nagging friends, but a bottle of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL, which has a wonderful power to dissipate the inflammation, cool the feverishness, and completely cure boils and carbuncles.

"The old oaken bucket, moss-covered bucket that swings in the well," laden with cool, refreshing, thirst-quenching drink, is not more grateful to parched throats than a few drops of delicious MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM to relieve a cold which has settled in the throat and chest. It is a sure cure.

CLARK—Dr. CHARLES BUFORD CLARK was born at Attalaville, Attala county, Miss., Sept. 18, 1858; graduated in medicine at the University of Maryland in 1882; located in Kosciosko, Miss., for the practice of his profession in 1881; was married to Miss Lily B. Weems, of Durant, Feb. 10, 1886, who only lived two years after the union, and left a little girl; which followed its mother in a few months.

January 14, 1896, Dr. Clark was married to Miss Mattie Ballard, of Grenada, Miss., with whom he lived most happily until his death, which occurred Feb. 7, 1899.

The above is that chronological record which appears, with some variations, in every life, and can not indicate the character whose mortal life they bound.

Dr. Clark's life was marked by a strong and sturdy character. He yielded himself in early childhood to the careful training of a cultured Christian mother. Early her ideals became his models, her opinion his law, her life his pattern; and in all his life he adhered to the course she had planned for him. In his manhood his convictions were strong, his courage in the right unfaltering, his devotion to duty unwavering. The strength and beauty of his character were manifest alike in his home life, his social indulgences, and his professional experiences. No man who knew him would question the sturdiness of his private character. His earnest devotion to his profession was one of the marked characteristics of his life. He held his talent and attainment (as physician and surgeon) as the gift of God, practiced medicine for humanity's sake, followed his profession with that enthusiastic, self-sacrificing interest which is only born of such a high conception of a calling in life. It was this that made him a minister of mercy, mitigating human misery with a satisfaction and joy that charmed all who knew him in his professional life. It is understood that he sacrificed his life to his profession. This strong life was the outgrowth of a conscious Christian experience. He loved God, loved the church, loved Christian associations, loved a sin-tarnished populace. Loyal to all claims of life, this allegiance manifested itself in his church relation, both in his private membership and public service as steward in the M. E. Church, South.

A whole county gropes in the gruesome gloom of grief, a church is clad in the crape of mourning, a family—a wife and two children, a devoted mother, a loving sister and brother—bears the burden of a great bereavement; but a soul, made in the image of God, fashioned after the similitude of holiness, the inhabitant of a partially frail body, whose every day of earthly life has been spent in the strain of service, now "rests from his labors, and his works do follow him."

The writer, for three years his pastor, feels a sense of personal grief in his early ascension.

J. C. PARK.

EASTERLING—OLIVE EASTERLING was born in Crystal Springs, Miss., Oct. 5, 1873, and died in the same town on the morning of Feb. 1st, 1899. She was a child of affliction all her life. In her girlhood, under the ministry of Rev. T. B. Holloman, she gave her heart to God, and joined the church. She was blessed with one of the best of mothers, who took great interest in her religious training, and, with other relatives and friends, encouraged and helped her in her religious life.

About three years ago, while the family resided at Bogue Chitto, Olive became deeply interested on the subject of Christian perfection. She hungered and thirsted after righteousness, and for a time her soul was in a great agony of prayer. Under the counsel of a dear friend, and by the aid of her Bible, which was her daily companion, she surrendered all at the feet of her Savior, and, by a living faith in him, she came into the rich experience of perfect love, and from that time her life was a beautiful exemplification of Christian holiness. Her sweet spirit, her patience under suffering, her deep concern for the salvation of others, her love for the house of God, her abiding faith, her good works and her constant joy in the Lord, were the outward manifestations of this deeper work of grace within, of which she was the happy subject. She loved good books, and read a great deal. Her mind was well stored with useful knowledge; but her Bible was pre-eminent with her. She read and studied the Word of God as few Christians do. It was her daily food. She had a good understanding of its teachings, and she grew strong in her faith under its inspiring influence. Few women of her age had made such attainments in Christian knowledge, experience, and character, and fewer still had labored under the difficulties that so greatly hindered her progress. Her life, though brief and full of suffering, was one of singular beauty and of rare usefulness. She was pure gold, refined in the fire. A child of God, dear to the heart of her Father in heaven, she has been taken to his bosom. Her mother had been taken before her, and now, while their bodies sleep together in the beautiful cemetery at Crystal Springs, Sister Easterling and Olive are together in paradise.

W. B. LEWIS.

MCDANIEL—We deplore the sudden and untimely death of Bro. R. C. MCDANIEL, who perished in the flames of the great compress fire at West Point, Miss., on the sixth of March. He was cotton weigher at the compress, and in attempting to save some of his effects, he was caught in the terrible flames and perished in sight of some of his friends, who could lend him no aid.

Bro. McDaniel was one of the stewards and a very consistent member of the M. E. Church at West Point. His seat in the congregation was never vacant when it was possible for him to fill it. He was a kind, good-hearted gentleman, who, so far as we know, had no enemies. He was highly esteemed by all who knew him. I have known him for forty-eight years, and never heard aught against him. He had lived in the neighborhood nearly all his life; a true, patriotic Mississippian to the manner born, with heart open to help the afflicted and the poor. He was a great lover of children (for he had none himself), and always met them with a kind and gentle greeting. They all knew Uncle Bob, and knew they had a friend in this good man. He was a man of robust health, and as active and industrious as a bee. He leaves his dear wife free from want. He is gone to the bosom of the Savior to await her coming in the sweet hereafter. God help her, with us all, to meet him again in the land of the good!

JOHN MATTE:.

RIGGS—DAVID RIGGS was born near New Iberia, La., Feb. 3, 1828, and died in said place Jan. 6, 1899.

Bro. Riggs was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at New Iberia in 1857, and was ever afterwards an efficient and devoted member thereof.

He was twice most happily married. First to Miss Mary E. Hinckle in 1855. She died in 1887. The second marriage was to Miss Althea Lee in 1889, and after a few years of happy wedded life she, too, passed away. These were both efficient co-workers with him in the service of God.

The writer was Bro. Riggs' pastor for three years, and he has never known a more active and zealous man, nor one who was more nearly always in readiness to do anything possible for Christ. He was a laboring man and a man of business, but was always at the mid-week prayer meeting and the week-day services of the church. He was always ready, too, to "give a reason for the hope that was in him." He frequently related his experience, and constantly lived up to his religious profession. He leaves no children, but a large family connection, who, while they regret their loss, "mourn not as those without hope." He died as he lived—in great peace with God and all mankind.

TILLMAN—A mother in Israel, Mrs. RICA TILLMAN, has been called by our Father in heaven to her eternal rest after many years of labor on earth for the good and benefit of humanity. Her deeds are too well known to her friends and the public generally for us to recall them now, for it would take volumes to record them, and our words would fail us to do her justice in this our time of grief and sorrow. She was a faithful member of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Jefferson Street Methodist Church. Although a member of another faith, her noble heart knew no sectarian bounds to keep her from helping her sisters of other denominations in doing good work. She was an "Israelite indeed in whom is no guile."

Farewell, dear sister, you are at rest in the bosom of your God and on God, and our prayer is that the bright example you have left us will ever live green and fresh in our memories to help us on with our works. Some day we will meet you again around the heavenly throne, where we will unite in singing praises to God.

"Servant of God, well done;
Thy glorious warfare past;
Thy battles fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last."

Resolved, That while we deeply deplore the loss of our departed sister, we feel resigned in knowing that "the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

MRS. G. J. BAHIN,

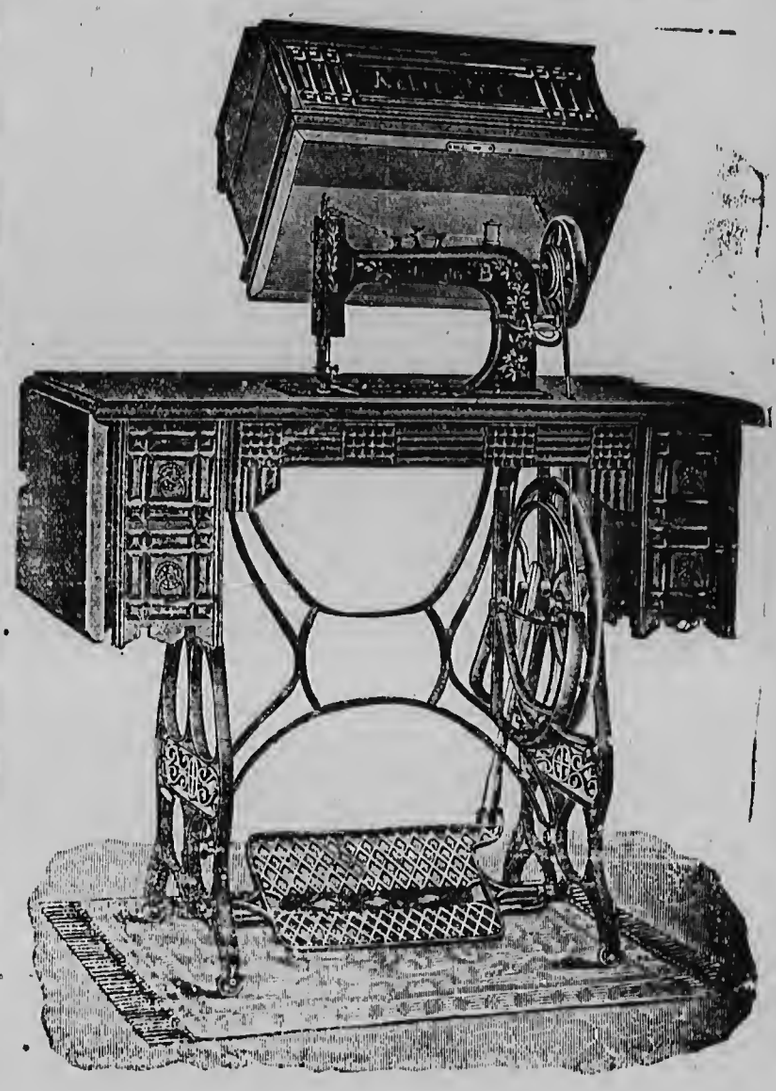
Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great length; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

A disastrous fire occurred in New York City on April 7. Thirteen persons were burned to death.

President McKinley, who has been invited to open the State Fair, which begins, in this city, on May 8, has declined the invitation, saying he can not spare the time.

Emperor William has expressed to the United States ambassador his high satisfaction at the appointment of the American delegates to the Peace Conference at the Hague, especially Captain Mahan.

An indeterminate sentence law enacted in Colorado provides for a minimum and maximum sentence, and gives the penitentiary commissioners the right to parole prisoners after the minimum term has expired.

Aguinaldo has issued a decree directing that Spanish shall be the official language throughout the archipelago, and protesting against the American pretension to force the use of English on the natives, who do not know it.

Miss Elizabeth Plankinton, of Milwaukee, has made a proposition of a gift of $100,000 to build a home for the Young Women's Christian Association of that city. The gift is conditional in that a suitable site must first be obtained.

The steamboat "J. K. Speed" sank at Louisville on April 9. The big Mississippi river steamer may be lost. Many persons on board, but all were saved. The boat was valued at about $25,000. The probable loss on the cargo is estimated at somewhat under $100,000.

General Lawton has captured Santa Cruz, at the extreme end of the lake. He drove the rebels, who were commanded by a Chinaman named Pao Wah, into the mountains. The Americans had six men wounded. The rebels lost sixty-eight men killed and had forty men wounded.

There were handled by the Union Passenger Station in Chicago last year 7,500,000 passengers without accident and $50,000,000 worth of baggage without the loss of a single piece. This is the third successive year in which there has been no claim for lost baggage of any kind at this station.

The Cabinet was in session on April 7. The method of making the payment of $20,000,000 to Spain was talked over, and, although no conclusion was reached, it is expected that the transfer will be made by a draft on the treasury to be delivered to any representative whom the Spanish Government may designate.

Under the new army bill each regiment of infantry and artillery will have a band of twenty-eight pieces, maintained at the expense of the government. Heretofore the army had no music of its own, except at the expense of the officers and the men, as the pay of the band was only that of privates, except as this was supplemented from these sources.

Although no extensive operations have been undertaken in the Philippines since the capture of the rebel capital Malolos, the American army has not been idle. General MacArthur's division has pushed northward from the recent rebel capital, in the direction of Calumpit; while within the past few days a strong expedition, under General Lawton, crossed the sheet of water known as "Laguna de Bay" and attacked the rebel position at Santa Cruz. This last expedition, which was a complete success, extends the operations southward from Manila.

According to the account of the recent hostilities in Samoa, the shelling of the natives by the American and British warships in Apia harbor was due largely to the action of the German consul in advising them to resist the proclamation of the American admiral calling upon all persons to return quietly to their homes and submit to the ruling of the chief justice.

Orders have been issued by the Navy Department, directing that the repairs to the cruiser "New Orleans" be completed by May 7. The expedition of the vessel's repairs was made upon the request of the delegation of New Orleans merchants which called upon Secretary Long and informed him that the people of their city desired to present a silver service to their city's naval namesake.

The latest advices from Samoa indicate that German policy and intrigue have received a decided setback, and, as a result, matters have again assumed a somewhat unfavorable aspect. According to a cablegram from Admiral Kautz to the Navy Department, Malietoa Tann has been formally installed as King. This has been brought about by the joint action of the British and American naval commanders, and in opposition to the protests of the German representatives.

Although the promised proclamation to the people of the Philippines has been issued by the special commission sent to the archipelago by the President, promising local self-government and the widest possible liberty short of absolute independence, no appreciable effect has been produced. Aguinaldo is gradually reorganizing his army and is assembling a strong force north of Malolos, evidently with the intention of opposing a further advance by General MacArthur's troops.

At the Capitol.

I am in my seventy-third year, and for fifty years I have been a great sufferer from indigestion, constipation and biliousness. I have tried all the remedies advertised for these diseases, and got no permanent relief. About one year ago, the disease assuming a more severe and dangerous form, I became very weak, and lost flesh rapidly. I commenced using Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir. I gained twelve pounds in three months. My strength and health, my appetite and my digestion were perfectly restored, and now I feel as young and vigorous as I ever did in my life.

See! Brethren, take notice. Is it I? Surely the Christ-passion for saving souls includes raising mission funds. Can we languish and pine when the work in Cuba and other places is opening more invitingly every day? Hasten to circulate The Review of Missions. It will pay to do it, even at your own expense. Let us, one and all, work and pray, and make a better report the next quarter, the Lord helping us.

A CORRECTION!

MR. EDITOR: I see from the Minutes hat the preacher in charge of the Lake rthur charge is assessed $837, and paid 526.28, and then at the asterisk I find $120 of this to the junior preacher." llow me, as the well-provided-for junior preacher of said charge, to say that the preacher in charge was assessed at $900, minus $250 allowed the junior preacher, or $650, and that the junior preacher only received $84.50. Not wishing, necessarily, by this statement to dispute Bro. Howell's figures, neither to call attention to his egregious error, but being the man who got the money, to correct a mistake.

PAINT TALKS—XV.

A NOVEL PAINT THEORY.

Quite recently a very interesting theory has been promulgated regarding paint. The authors of this theory claim that a paint should crumble off gradually in order to provide a good surface for repainting, and that unless this happens the coating will eventually become too thick. They say that pure white lead, being the only paint that fulfills this condition to perfection, is the only desirable paint.

This theory may be all very well from the point of view of the lead corroder or of the painter—those whose profit lies in the sale and application of paint, but from the point of view of the man who pays the bills and whose property is well or ill protected according to the permanence of the material with which it is painted, the theory is not attractive.

Let those who have to buy paint and pay for its application remember that the fewer pounds of paint at a given price it requires to paint their buildings, and the longer the paint selected will keep these buildings protected from the weather, the better are their interests served.

Pure lead paints certainly chalk off rapidly enough and become porous still more rapidly, so that water is admitted through the coating of paint long before the paint is gone. Another defect is that these paints darken, and white lead destroys the color of many brilliant pigments with which it is tinted.

Combination paints, based on zinc white, on the other hand, do not chalk off, do not become porous, do not darken, and do not affect the color of other pigments combined with them. I have known a building painted with such a combination to stand without repainting for sixteen years, and at the end of that time it actually did not need repainting. If repainting had been desired, however, the surface was in excellent condition for it.

Paint is intended to stay on and not to come off, and the wise house owner will select the "stay-on" kind, regarding his own interests rather than those of the manufacturer or of the painter, whose profits lie in frequent repainting. STANTON DUDLEY.

THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTION.

By order of the convention body. some account of its proceedings are presented here by the writer for record in the ADVOCATE.

The second Annual Convention of the Sunday-school Department of the Mississippi Conference was called to order at Lumberton on the morning of March 29. Our hospitable little city was expecting it, and had provided homes for nearly 80, whose names we had and whose presence was desired. Forty, or more, of these arrived, with a pleasing number of visitors besides.

The opening sermon, from Rev. J. M. Weems, was apposite and impressive; preached Tuesday night. Rev. W. T. Griffin was, next morning, elected chairman, proving an acceptable one. Miss Annie Mellen, last year's convention secretary, was complimented by re-election to this office, conducting it concisely and with undisturbed dignity throughout the session. Mr. W. B. Jones, a valuable layman from Hattiesburg, was elected recording secretary.

The program of the work out out for the body has been already published in the ADVOCATE. It, no doubt, attracted admiring attention to its range and extent of subjects. The makers of that menu certainly purposed a spread. It seemed an embarrassment of riches for so short a session; but its framers explained its voluminousness. There was method, without madness, in it. "We wanted a large attendance," they said, "and by giving many some thing special to do, we hoped to assure their coming." The germ of progress in church work and all work, exposed in that statement, is receiving culture everywhere. Inoculation with it is encouraging and to be encouraged as the sign of the times.

While all appointed to serve did not attend the Conference, many came, and there were papers and addresses delivered by the following: Rev. Henry G. Hawkins, Rev. J. D. Ellis, Rev. J. M. Weems, Rev. B. F. Jones, Supt. R. A. Magruder, Mrs J. P. Drake, Pres. J. W. Beeson, of E. M. Female College; Prof. Swittenberg, Prof. H. C. Yawn, Miss Pauline Stafford, Miss Annie Mellen, Miss Mary E. Hawkins, Rev. J. P. Drake, Supt. H. S. Gunn, Miss Helen Stewart, Rev. N. B. Harmon, Rev. W. T. Griffin, Rev. H. B. Trevilion.

These were, with little exception, productions of high order and genuine merit. Their value was such as to cause the possession of several of them by the Sunday-school Board to be published and kept for wider service in its annual Register.

Dr. James Atkins, Sunday-school Editor, wondered that so few should have gathered to get the benefit of such excellent discussions. Besides complimenting participants, Dr. Atkins was genial help in many of the discussions. He addressed the convention, laying open clearly many doors which are often too little ajar. He inspired his audiences with his full, ready, sympathetic resources. We hope he will hereafter be on hand at the sessions of the Annual as well as the Sunday-school Conferences. There is space for one of his utterances, which is, substantially, that the time is not far when the Sunday-school Conference will be greater in its demands for auditorium and entertainment than the Annual Conference. There was the claim of prevision, prophetic quality in this remark by Dr. Atkins, and it is recorded here as a witness for or against him in the future.

Dr. John D. Hammond left his busy desk at Nashville to run down and, like his confrere, open to view the plans, powers, possibilities and perseverance of the Twentieth Century Educational Board, of which he is secretary. His confidence in the result cheered all hearts, and certainly tended to simplify the problem of raising the local assessment of the fund. Public gatherings, with addresses from Dr. Hammond, throughout the church are in order, and will be called for.

Great good-will invested the convention from the moment of its organization at Lumberton. The hearty address of welcome from Prof. H. W. Forman—once Missouri's, but now our teacher—consecrated and cultured; the response, in characteristic grace and sincerity of expression, from Bro. B. Frank Jones—these prepared the way for constant, increasing sense of harmony in delegates and residents.

The adjournment, Friday night, was taken, subject to future call of the authorities.

Revision of the Constitution will be noted in the year-book, to be issued.

The election of officers for 1899 1900 resulted in.— (Will the efficient secretary, Rev. D. Scarborough, kindly furnish this item? It is not in hand here.)

We feel, at Lumberton, that the convention was a success, and are vitalized by transfusions from its multi-veined energies into ours. We should like to furnish the permanent seat of the Conference, and here announce accordingly.

Our people rejoice in the pleasure of receiving and entertaining so useful an assembly of workmen and workwomen We are accustomed to workmen in this busy, thriving town, and we know them when we see them. And our verdict was, "Well done," and we sent our guests away friends, co-laborers, and wished them earnest God-speed to their several fields.

POINTS.

There was disappointment at your absence, Doctor. The substance of your card of regrets was reported, but the word in future for you is, Don't do it again.

Dr. W. B. Murrah, of Millsaps, paid a promised visit, and truly delighted the church on Easter Sunday, preaching morning and night. He promises to come again.

Rev. Henry G. Hawkins, invited by the writer, remained a week to assist in protracted services at Poplarville. Results of the meeting will be reported later. He was regretted by us all in his departure from us, endeared to all by his sincere spirit and earnest work in the pulpit.

With electric lights in the pretty church and over the place, and the telephone exchange in operation now, we are increasing intention both to see and hear. Large and handsome rooms are new-finished to the parsonage. All honor to the Ladies' Aid Society, payers of the bills.

I am under special obligation to R. W. Hinton, A. J. Clarke and P. E. Williams for their active work in arranging our visitors in their homes. These brethren were a Committee of Reception, meeting all trains, sending delegates comfortably to comfortable homes. They are happily adapted to such hospitable Christian exercise.

Rev. W. W. Simmons was among the delegates. The folds of the pallium of the Seashore district are fitting him finely. He swings his great circle with the endurance of the veteran he looks and is. Sickness caused his visit to be short, to the convention's regret.

Resolutions of appreciation of railway courtesy were adopted. They were all kind. We may stir uneasily over the rising of some great corporations, but we count the great railroads friends. The G. and S. I. road furnished free transportation one way, and reserved a coach for the use of the delegates along its line, at the junction with the Columbia, Lumberton and Gulf road, for several days. It was sided there to be brought here by our road authorities, who made the like terms for fare. The Conference would cheerfully have recommended that all our people make excursions upon these roads daily, except Sundays.

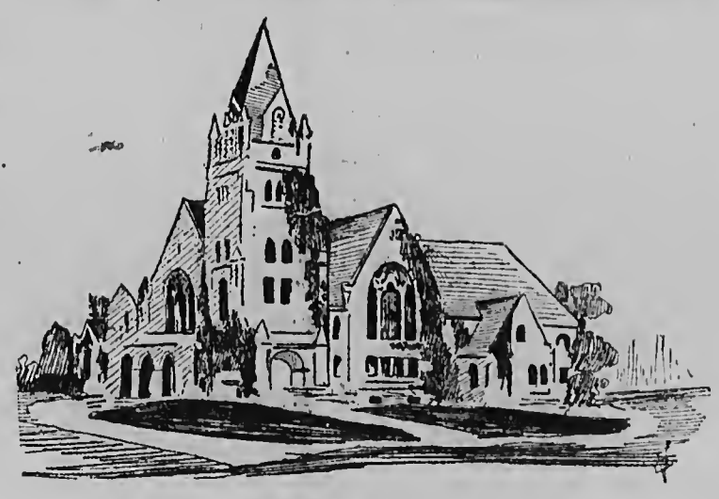
THE OLD CHURCH.



THE NEW CHURCH.

CRAWFORD STREET CHURCH, VICKSBURG.

The beginning of the Methodist Church in Vicksburg may be traced back almost to the beginning of the town, in 1820. Newett Vick, who owned the land on which the city of Vicksburg now stands, and his son-in-law, John Lane, who laid off the town, were both Methodist preachers, and the latter is said to have preached in a blacksmith shop before there was a church or court-house in the county.

As early as 1826 Vicksburg was a monthly preaching-place on the Warren circuit. In 1831 it became a station, and was served by Rev. J. G. Jones, who was destined soon to become one of the leaders of our hosts in Mississippi.

In the appointments for 1834 there appears for the first time as pastor of the church in Vicksburg the name of C. K. Marshall, the great-hearted and brilliant man and eloquent preacher whom Maine gave to Mississippi, and whose name has become a household word in Southern Methodism. Here he married into the distinguished family after whom the city was named, and here for more than sixty years he lived. Here live his children and his grandchildren, and here, in the calm, sweet peace of Christian old age, still dwells the wife of his youth.

Early in the decade, between 1830 and 1840, the first Methodist Church was erected—a substantial brick building, on the lot at the corner of Grove and Cherry streets, donated by Rev. John Lane. This building was afterward set apart as a preaching-place for the slaves, and was thus used until destroyed by fire.

In 1846 there was deeded to the trustees of the church, by Jno. W. and Catherine Vick, the handsome lot on the southwest corner of Crawford and Cherry streets, where there was erected in 1848 the present brick structure, in which, for more than fifty years, the Methodists of Vicksburg have worshiped. The church was designed and constructed by Thomas Hacket, a worthy member of the church, and for many years one of its most honored officials. It was dedicated in 1850 by the Rev. Wm. Winans, D. D. This old building was the church home of the Methodist people of Vicksburg during the siege, and its walls still bear silent, but eloquent testimony to the ravages of war. In the south wall there is still embedded what is said by many to be the first shell fired into Vicksburg by Farragut's fleet, in May, 1862, and the west wall is said to have been penetrated by a Federal cannon ball during the bombardments of 1863

A glance at the list of pastors of the Crawford Street Church from the early times will show that the Methodists of Vicksburg have received the ministerial labors of some of the best men of this church in the Southwest. Besides the names already mentioned we notice those of Preston Cooper, Thomas Ford, Levi Pierce, George C. Light, W. F. Heer, W. P. Barton, George H. Clinton, Whitfield Harrington, W. E. M. Linfield, Joshua T. Heard, W. H. Watkins, and R. S. Woodward—all of whom have entered into rest; while among the living ex-pastors we find Chas. B Galloway, Beverly Carradine, R. J. Jones, W. B Lewis, and C. G. Andrews. The present pastor is Rev. A. F. Watkins, the son of Dr. W. H. Watkins, who served the church here many years ago. To call the roll of the Official Board of Crawford Street Church from the beginning would be to mention the names of many who would be recognized as honored representatives of the political, social, commercial and religious life of Vicksburg.

The building is Gothic in style, and will be built of gray pressed brick, and trimmed with stone and white terra cotta. The architect and contractor is Mr. W. A. Cann, of St. Louis, and the contract price is $20,297 39 The beauty of the exterior of the building is surpassed by the convenience of the interior arrangement. The handsome auditorium, with seating capacity of 453, will be so arranged that by the use of sliding-doors its capacity may be increased by the addition of the Sunday-school lecture-room, the space thus given comfortably seating over 900 people. The Sunday-school, beside its main lecture-room, is to contain a primary department room, a library, and twelve class-rooms. The building, in addition to these advantages, will include an Epworth League hall, two ladies' parlors, a pastor's study, and other rooms contributing to the convenience and efficiency of the church.

Many influences have contributed to the success that is about to crown the efforts of this congregation to build a new house of worship. Two of these deserve especial mention—the members of the "Church Workers," a society of women organized several years ago by Mrs. C G Andrews, and of which Mrs. Scott Phillips has been the remarkably successful president, and the Building Committee, composed of R. L Crook, A. G Cassell, George B Hackett, S. C. Regan, and Julius M. Klein, who have patiently, persistently, faithfully and successfully worked against the difficulties that confronted them.

(For the above facts we are indebted to our accommodating neighbor, the Picayune.—EDITOR.)

THY FATHER HOLDS THY HAND.

While journeying o'er life's thorny way,
O'er mountains steep, or desert sand,
Fear not, if ever, night and day
Thy heavenly Father holds thy hand!

In times of sorrow or of woe,
When evil stalks throughout the land,
Safe thou shalt be, if, as thou go,
Thy heavenly Father holds thy hand.

When doubts and darkness fill thy soul,
And evil spirits 'gainst thee band,
Press on! thou'lt surely reach the goal!
The mighty Father holds thy hand.

As down the darkening vale of life
Towards Jordan's black and stormy strand
Thou onward goest, midst constant strife;
Rejoice, thy Father holds thy hand!

When o'er thy head the billows roll,
Scarcely thou seest the heavenly land,
Yet praise the Lord, with all thy soul,
Thy loving Savior holds thy hand.

FROM SARDIS AS A VIEW-POINT.

MR. EDITOR: You are to be congratulated on the very excellent paper now being sent out to Mississippi and Louisiana Methodism. The NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, our Conference organ, like old wine, grows better as it grows in age. It has many excellent qualities. It is printed on good paper, with clear type; it comes promptly. I am writing this letter on the night of March 30, and the ADVOCATE, of March 30, is before me, printed more than three hundred miles away. The local Sardis paper, issued on the same day, has not reached me yet.

The ADVOCATE has been rich of late in memorial tributes. Those of Dr. John Keener, president of Southern University, tell us of a strong man fallen at his post in the midst of his days, of his usefulness and promise. A short notice of the death of Hon. H. W. Foote, of Macon, Miss., informs us of the removal of a prominent landmark of Methodism. My acquaintance with him goes back to the days of my boyhood, and my esteem and love for him grew with the passing years. For more than half a century he lived in Macon, successful and honored in Church and State. For more than fifty years he was superintendent of the Sunday-school. He loved his church, her polity, and her institutions. His palatial home was a resting-place for the weary itinerant. A sense of loss comes over us as we remember that Judge Foote is dead. "God buries his workmen, but carries on his work."

The columns of the ADVOCATE have of late also been packed full of other good reading matter—personal notes of many brethren, short, pithy clippings; interesting correspondence, reports from the churches, bugle blasts marshaling the forces for the twentieth century movement, strong editorials, and expressions of commendation from appreciative readers. Bro. Babb's review of a single copy of the ADVOCATE was a unique theme for a very readable paper. "What Subscribers Say," in this issue (March 30), as "sample tones of a large number," must be cheering to a toiling newspaper man. Bro. May, "The ADVOCATE gets better all the time," and an accomplished sister, "The ADVOCATE seems, if possible, to grow better all the time."

What is said under "An Editor's Fun" puts it in evidence that we have an editor who, besides being a vigorous writer, has not forgotten his grammar. You are correct in substituting "is" for "are" in the friendly postal card. The brother should thank you, and go back to one of "the branches of an ordinary English education." I wish, Doctor, you would take in hand and straighten out the grammar of the twentieth question in the order of Quarterly Conference business in our Discipline, "Are there a church register?" etc.

If I thought you were in danger of losing your mental poise, or increasing unduly your avoirdupois, I would send you for publication the Dutchman's admonition against being puffed up. But I think that both editor and ADVOCATE deserve the high commendation and liberal support of every Methodist throughout the patronizing Conferences.

Your proposition to send the paper eight months for one dollar brings the ADVOCATE level to the demands of those who clamor for a paper cheap in price, and at the same time would furnish them a paper of high grade. If our preachers would all believe, take hold, and work like Bro. J. W. Raper, of the North Mississippi Conference, your proposition would succeed. Bro. Raper thinks the requisite number of subscribers can be secured. He says: "I think I can get four times as many in this charge as we now have. If all will do the same, we will have about fourteen thousand subscribers." This would indeed be a grand success, and would demonstrate to the satisfaction of others, besides Bros. T. W. Lewis and J. H. Smith, that "success does succeed."

But my pencil has run away with me, and still runs on towards the "wee sma' hours" of the night. I started out to write something of the veteran pastors—mark you, I do not mean venerable—and of the other faithful preachers of Sardis district; but I have regard for the patience of the reader and of the editor, and so must defer what I wanted to say of these worthy toilers in the Master's vineyard to another time.

T. C. WIER.

NO ANSWER.

MR EDITOR: I have been anxiously awaiting the appearance of the article from the presiding elder reviewing Bro. Kent's answer to my question, as promised; but, as yet, have seen nothing of it. Why this long delay? I hope the beloved brother will not abandon the idea of writing, nor defer it any longer. If the practice of levying any per cent. of the amount collected for ministerial support, either for presiding elder or preacher in charge, be in harmony with the law, I would like to be convinced of it, and hope the article alluded to will soon be forthcoming. I am not aware that it is practiced anywhere in our church, save by the district stewards in two districts of the Louisiana Conference; and if it be unlawful, it should be abandoned immediately. I, with many others, regard it as an unwarranted assumption of power, on the part of said stewards, into which they were possibly led by the presiding elders, and hope they will correct their mistake at the earliest possible convenience. THOS. J. UPTON.

NOTICE.

I am reliably informed that the corresponding secretary of the Epworth Leagues of Mississippi, Miss Vic Thompson, is finding it extremely difficult to hear from many of our pastors in regard to the State League work. This should not be so. This office entails upon the one who fills it a vast volume of correspondence and an enormous amount of labor, and pays nothing; and when one is willing to devote her time and attention to it gratuitously, surely she should have the hearty co-operation of all our preachers and Leaguers. It is impossible to carry on the work successfully without communicating with our pastors over the State. Let the brethren respond promptly when they are written to. Both courtesy and the good of the cause demand this. R. A. MEEK,

Member State League Ex. Com.

The field is not the church; the church is simply the reapers thrust out into the field. God help us to keep before ourselves the map of his entire extended kingdom, and give us a heart that is willing to go anywhere. Unless we are willing to go anywhere, we are fit to go nowhere. —W. H. P. Faunce.

THE HAPPIEST HEART.

BY JOHN VANCE CHENEY.

Who drives the horses of the sun
Shall lord it but a day;
Better the lowly deed were done,
And kept the humble way.

The rust will find the sword of fame,
The dust will hide the crown;
Ay none shall nail so high his name
Time will not tear it down.

The happiest heart that ever beat
Was in some quiet breast
That found the common daylight sweet,
And left to heaven the rest.

LOST MEMBERS.

Has there been an actual decline in the membership of the church? A glance at the statistics discloses the fact that at the Conference of December, 1896, 29,280 members were reported, while one year later there were 28,985, and at the Conference of December, 1898, but 27,274. Unquestionably there has been a decline. Neither do omissions, such as Bro. Featherstun refers to, materially affect the matter.

A closer examination of the statistics reveals a fact which is peculiar, to say the least of it. During the year ending January, 1898, 1,949 persons were received into the church on profession of faith, and 1,200 by certificate and otherwise, making a total of 3,149. During the same period 2,389 persons were removed by "death, certificate, and otherwise," leaving a net gain for the year of 760. And yet the Minutes show a decrease of 295. In other words, more than 1,000 members are not accounted for. I am not complaining of the statistical secretaries; I am making no complaint at all. I am asking, Have we gained, or have we lost, members during the year?

Extending the examination, we find that during the year closing December, 1898, 1,128 persons were received on profession of faith, and 1,276 by certificate and otherwise—a total of 2,404; while for the same period 1,412 persons were removed from membership by "death, certificate, and otherwise," leaving a total net gain of 992, and yet by a comparison of totals we find that there was a loss of 1,711 members. In other words, 2,703 persons are not accounted for.

Pursuing the thought a little further, we find that for the nine years ending December, 1898, 17,010 persons were received into the church on profession of faith, and 10,048 by "certificate and otherwise," making a total of 27,058. During the same period 14,260 members were removed by "death, certificate, and otherwise," leaving a net gain of 12,798. According to the report made at the Baton Rouge Conference, December, 1889, there were 19,958 members. In 1894 we received 5,335 members from the Mississippi Conference. Summing these numbers, we find that we should have 38,091, but our last report says that there are but 27,274 members now on the church rolls, showing a leakage of 10,817. More than a 1,000 per year have slipped through our hands—more than ten to each pastor per year.

Pursuing the case a little further still, it appears that these members, unaccounted for, have been lost in the interim between the departure of the preacher for Conference and his return to his charge. Nor is it true that this occurs only when there is a change of pastors. To make my meaning clear, I use a few illustrations: The preachers reported at the Crowley Conference, January, 1898, the total membership of the church in the Louisiana Conference at 28,985. At the Conference, December, 1898, at Mansfield, the preachers, with few exceptions the same men, reported that entering upon the duties of the charge assigned them in January, 1898, they found not 28,985 members, but 26,282, showing a shrinkage of 2,703 while they were away at Conference. In other words: Without intending it, we can see better, and count more, when preparing our reports for Conference than when we get back and begin the new year's work.

I give another illustration: By referring to the Minutes of 1891 and to the statistics of Carondelet, we read, "Total members last year, 745." Now, by referring to the Minutes of 1890, we read, "Total members this year, 809." The pastor of 1891 in the column marked "total members last year" referred to the same total indicated by the pastor of 1890 in the column marked "total members this year," and yet there is a discrepancy of 64. They were counted in 1890; they were lost in 1891.

Another Illustration: By referring to the Minutes of 1891 and the statistics of Felicity, we read, "Total members last year, 451." And by referring to the Minutes of 1890, we read, "Total members this year, 451." Herein the pastor lost no one. It is obvious that at any given Conference the figures given in the column marked "total members last year," should correspond with the figures reported at the previous Conference in the column marked "total members this year."

This does not solve the question of decrease in membership. I did not intend to offer a solution—just another ray of light.

QUALIFICATIONS OF THE PREACHER.

(MR. EDITOR: Following is a brief paper which I, by request, prepared and read before the Ministerial Association of the Aberdeen district, North Mississippi Conference, at Okolona, March 30, 1899, and which that body, by resolution, requested me to forward you for publication in your paper.)

SUBJECT.

The Necessary Qualifications of the Preacher, or Leader, of the Flock of God.

These are two: manhood and zeal. I say manhood instead of knowledge, because knowledge will not enable a man to preach successfully if he have an impaired and enfeebled physical constitution and lack of physical energy; hence a man, to be able to preach successfully, must have a sound body and much physical energy and endurance. Add to this good common sense, practical judgment, and fairly good educational development, and we have the manhood. But if a man have a sound body, much physical energy, and a sound mind and thorough education, yet without godly zeal to inspire and prompt it to action and effort, he will be a failure, or, at best, a stiff formalist. He must, in addition to his manhood, have zeal for the cause and work, and this is conditioned on love for God and men, and this is conditioned on the indwelling Spirit of Christ; and, again, this is conditioned on a true, comprehensive faith; therefore, in order to success as preacher or leader in the work, we must, first, have a broad and comprehensive faith; faith, not only in God and his power and word, and faith in the atoning merits and intercessions of God the Son, but faith in the immediate and personal work of God the Holy Ghost, who applies the salvation which the Father designed and which the Son executed. I emphasize this because I verily fear that many who have faith in God the Father and in God the Son are skeptical as to personal work of the Holy Ghost. A strong love and comprehensive faith in the Triune God does not only bring the soul into touch with Christ, but opens and makes the heart receptive, and into every receptive heart the Spirit of God enters and abides; and where this Spirit abides he sheds abroad the love of God the Charity, implants the new life, the divine nature, fervent love for God and men, and where this fervent love for God and for man exists in the heart, it begets or inspires a real desire and consuming zeal for the honor of God in the salvation of men, and where this zeal is it absorbs, utilizes and devotes, or consecrates, all the physical, mental and moral powers and capabilities in a persistent effort for the glory of God and the salvation of lost men. This makes the preacher, this makes the lay leader; therefore, it is not knowledge alone that makes the strong preacher, for "though I have all knowledge, and have not charity, I am nothing."

On the other hand, a man may be truly religious, full of faith and the Holy Ghost and consuming zeal to even cry out as Jeremiah, "Oh, that my head were waters and my eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep," etc., and yet, if he lack common sense and practical knowledge of men and things, he may and will, to some extent, be a wild enthusiast. So, just as knowledge wants zeal to inspire and prompt it to action, so zeal wants knowledge to control and direct it.

As a shepherd, we are not only to love the sheep and desire the honor of the Great Shepherd, but we must know the nature, disposition, characteristics, and needs of the sheep. We should know the fold, the way to it, the door by which it is entered, and we should be familiar with the watering-places and the pasture grounds, so that we can lead the thirsty to the fountains of living water and the hungry to the greenest pastures.

To briefly recapitulate the true preacher, or leader, of the flock of God needs: 1. True and comprehensive faith, 2. A large measure of the Holy Spirit, 3. Fervent love for God and men, 4. Earnest zeal for men's salvation, 5. Devotion, or consecration, to this one work, 6. A sound body and much physical energy, 7. A large measure of common sense and practical business judgment, 8. All the knowledge of God and men and books and things that he can reasonably possess.

A FEW THINGS.

Mindful of the proverb which says, "He that passeth by, and meddleth with strife belonging not to him, is like one that taketh a dog by the ears," I shall take no part in discussing whether "Nothing succeeds like success" is true or false. Whether that be true or false, it is true that all seeming failures are not real failures. Bro. Lewis will readily grant this; he has said nothing contrary to it. That some preachers really fail Bro. Smith must allow, and some fail, too, not because of "environment," but "because their heart is not in the work"—at least not in the particular "work" (pastoral charge) to which they are sent, and they do not "expect to succeed." While it is much easier to succeed where everybody is pleasant, agreeable, and appreciative, the number of preachers who want to be coddled is too great. If one will take note of the preachers who, on being sent to new works, say, "Well, I can stand it one year," and then begin their work in such manner that it is patent to all that their interest in the work is temporary and slight, he will be astonished at the number. There is growing complaint of the lack of pastoral oversight. Of course, there are always growlers, but much of this complaint is just.

A circuit preacher who lives in town and starts to his appointment at 9 o'clock Sunday morning, reaching there just in time to enter the pulpit, and returns home in the afternoon, is not doing his duty, nor paying his vow to "visit from house to house." Such a charge will run down in spite of all the handshaking excitement he may work up in "dog days." I am not an old man, but I have lived long enough to see preachers grandly succeed who went to their country churches on Friday and remained till Monday, and to see other preachers ignominiously fail on the same charges who went on Sunday morning and hurried away.

An intelligent, observant young layman, reared in the country, recently said to me, "Dr. Jno. Mathews is not only a grand preacher, but he diligently visits his people." And he added with a sigh, "Oh, that some of the less noted ones would learn from him!"

The number of preachers who are not capable of holding successful revival meetings has greatly increased of late years. There are now signs of improvement in that respect. May they continue! An old-time revival is an imperative need; a revival the result of agonizing prayer and faithful preaching of the Word, and a deeper consecration on the part of preachers and the official members of the church and others, and not the result of handshaking and other ecclesiastical drills. This thing of so soon as a meeting is begun to commence with: "All who are Christians, give me your hand;" "All who want to be Christians, give me your hand;" "All who 'ain't Christians, give me your hand," and so on ad infinitum, ad nauseam, has gone too far. Let us get down to real business. It is well that the leaders of the Twentieth Century Movement and the editors of our papers are calling for repentance and a revival. Let every preacher, official and member respond to the full extent of his ability.

ABERDEEN DISTRICT PREACHERS' MEETING.

The Preachers' Meeting of the Aberdeen district met in the Methodist Church in Okolona, March 30, 1899, for the purpose of discussing methods of church work. The meeting was called to order, and after religious services conducted by the presiding elder, Rev. J. M. Wyatt, Geo. Saunders was elected secretary. Owing to the absence of some of the preachers the regular program was not taken up at the time set. While waiting for the train which was expected to bring some of the preachers of the district, free talks were called for on the "Twentieth Century Fund." Bros. Woollard, Wyatt, and others, made very helpful talks in regard to raising this fund. Bro. Strickland, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, and Gavin, of the Baptist Church, were introduced by the presiding elder. The regular business of the meeting was then taken up, and question first was called.

1. The Preacher Is the Leader. How Shall He Be Prepared?

Bro. K. M. Harrison read a very fine paper on this subject, after which several other preachers made interesting and profitable talks. The meeting requested Bro. Harrison to furnish the Nashville and NEW ORLEANS Christian Advocates with a copy of his paper for publication.

After a few minutes' intermission the meeting was opened by singing part of Hymn No. 525, and prayer by Bro. Woollard.

Subject second was then called as announced: My Obligation Growing Out of the Great Commission.

Bro. Craddock read a very good paper on this subject, and several interesting talks were made by others. The meeting then adjourned to meet at half-past two o'clock.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The meeting was called to order at 2:30 o'clock by the presiding elder. Devotional exercises were conducted by Bro. Durritt.

Subject third was then called: The Best Methods of Revival Work.

Bros. Jones, Strickland, Harrison, Bachman, and others, made very interesting and profitable talks and suggestions on this subject.

Question 4 was then called: What Is the Most Effective Way of Creating a Greater Missionary Spirit—One Worth One Hundred Cents on the Dollar?

Bros. Raper, Bell, Jones, Anderson, and others, made very helpful talks on this subject. The meeting then adjourned to meet at 7.45 P. M.

NIGHT SESSION.

At 8 o'clock the meeting was called to order by the presiding elder. Devotional exercises were conducted by Bro. Craddock.

The subject of "The Relation of Christian Education to Missions" was then presented to the audience very forcefully by Bro. Woollard. The meeting then adjourned to meet at 8:30 o'clock Friday morning. The meeting adjourned Friday evening in an informal way after the preachers and presiding elder covenanting together for a revival of religion throughout the Aberdeen district.

Brethren, let us pray for this, and remember that the revival must start in and with the preacher. "The Word of God is the power of salvation; the Word of God is the sword of the Spirit."

Brethren, let us pray and agonize for the Spirit of God. Let us, as preachers, shut out the perplexities of social, political and financial life that we can not remedy or change, and strive to know and preach Christ and him crucified.

May God bless the Aberdeen district this year with a gracious outpouring of his Spirit!

Mrs. W. H. Wall, of North Miss. Conference
Conference Officers of Mississippi Conference
Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, of Louisiana Conference

DEAR SISTERS: Believing that there were many consecrated women in our church, in our own North Mississippi Conference, who would love to know what Miss Lizzie Streater, from our Conference, who was one of the pupils of the Scarritt Bible and Training-school, and is now doing the work of "city missions," employed by the Woman's Board of Home Missions, I asked her to write me of her work. She kindly responded to my request, and has promised to write of the different lines of her work as she can find time.

Her letter was in my column two weeks ago. A week had hardly passed by before I received a sweet letter from a consecrated young lady, asking under what mission society did Miss Streater work, foreign or home missions? Said she was not posted, and wanted all the information I could give; said she had a relative who would love to do this kind of work, etc. Wrote her all that I could to encourage her, and advised her to attend our next Annual Conference, to be held at Maben in the Fall. So one dear "city missionary's" letter has begun to bear fruit already. What a life of constant toil for the salvation of others, and yet such blessed work! Oh, that more of our young women would live for Christ and for the benefit of others, like Miss Lizzie!

The Scarritt Bible and Training-school is ready and anxious to train our girls for Christian work if they will only make use of the opportunity. The programs for the Belle Bennett scholarship have been sent to both Foreign and Home Mission Societies, to raise money to complete this scholarship, which ought to have been finished long ago. Our societies in Sardis will have a joint program later, and hope to realize a nice little sum for the school.

Our Home Mission Conference has been bowed with grief over the loss of one of the pillars in work—Sister J. P. Featherstun—who died March 12 after a month of intense suffering. She had been our Conference corresponding secretary for several years, and was devoted to her work. May God, in his wisdom, raise up one for her mantle to fall on, and may her devoted husband bow resignedly to his will, knowing that "all things work together for good to them that love the Lord!" The golden bowl is broken, the silver chain is loosed—the Master has walked in his garden and plucked one of the loveliest flowers that has ever graced the earth. Sister Featherstun was, in truth, a noble spirit, and I can but feel that God has called her to his happy home, away from the cares and trials of earth. May we all so live as to meet her in heaven!

As editor of the Home Mission column for the North Mississippi Conference, I will be glad to receive reports and letters from the district secretaries and auxiliaries, telling of the work. My effusions will become monotonous; so, for variety's sake, let me hear from you, as well as to stimulate others to good works.

Our Conference recording secretary is now in Asheville, N. C., for her health; hope she will let us hear from her.

Let me hear from you.

Your sister in Christ,

DEAR SISTER: Dr. Lambuth just returned from a tour in Cuba. As secretary of General Board, he visited six of the most important cities, with the view of opening missions, and while looking after the affairs of the General Board, he kindly looked after ours. He is fully satisfied that Santiago needs us most, and needs us at once. His suggestions were laid before the Board, which met a few days ago, and endorsed. Dr. Lambuth advises us to put a suitable woman in charge, and at first open classes in English and the Bible for adults. The women are eager to learn our language, and as they are dissatisfied with Catholicism, and anxious for something better, we will have ready access to them, especially to women of the higher classes. Such an opportunity should be gratefully embraced, since access to the better classes at first will make the evangelization of the island more easy. Early in the new year we hope to have some one in Santiago at work. A house has been selected—a house and home advantageously located, both as to sanitary conditions and protection by law. Are you ready for this work? It means more work, larger offerings, more self-denial; but it means going up to the help of the Lord, who asks us, as a proof of our love, that we take this beautiful island for him. We dare not hesitate on the plea that we have already too much to do. What must be done must be done quickly, cheerfully, gladly, for Christ's sake, who has exalted us in privilege, and expects from us ready obedience. Our rest time is not here, and we do not expect it here, except the rest in spirit, because of the presence and approbation of the Father, who has promised to be with us.

One thousand dollars, the amount appropriated to Cuba last year, will not be enough for next year, and all our missions are growing, and need more than we gave them in June last. How glad we should be that God honors our efforts! But we should be diligent, lest what has been so well begun should not be completed. Urge your societies to read more of the work—more of the needs of heathen lands. February number of Woman's Missionary Advocate will be the China jubilee number. The March number will be enlarged for advertisements. "Dawn on the Hills of T'ang" and the "Dora Rankin Memorial" are ready. Help your membership to read our literature. It is cheap and good. Sincerely,

S. C. TRUEHEART.

Box 405, Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 28, 1898.

AS SUGGESTED BY ONE OF OUR DISTRICT SECRETARIES.

"Would it not be advisable for our officers to write to the Illinois Central railroad officials, and try to have them make us a special rate to the annual missionary meeting, which will convene this year at Sardis, Miss.; also for our district secretaries to write to the different railroads leading them to the I. C., and have published in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE the rate given, the number of delegates required to secure rates, etc., several weeks previous to said meeting?" (If the different district secretaries will write me and give rates secured, I will gladly have them published.)

This matter was overlooked last year; consequently, we had no reduced rates. Should this request be granted, it, no doubt, would insure us a much larger attendance; and if our officers have the encouraging presence of some of our returned missionaries and many noted workers to arouse members and send them home with hearts overflowing with genuine missionary zeal, then would not March, 1900, show a grand forward movement and a victory for the Lord!

MRS. J. L. LENOIR.

FROM A SUPERANNUATE.

MR. EDITOR: I see in the ADVOCATE how many of the preachers were received by their new charges. Well, I am so glad that they were so heartily received, with the prospect of good support. There is a class of preachers that is woefully neglected by the church, which is a disgrace and a shame. That poor, old, worn out, afflicted superannuated preacher that bore the heat and burden of the day, and helped to lay the foundation of the church, and brought it up to its present condition by putting himself, horse, saddle, bridle, when young, at a hundred dollars a year; his wardrobe, library, love-letters, and all other appendages. From house to house he went for many long years, until, worn out, he goes to his Conference for the last time. He is told his services are not wanted any longer. They vote him a superannuated relation. He goes out penniless; no house furnished, no committee of sisters to meet and welcome him to his new home; warm suppers, larder filled with good things, wood piled up in the yard; but he will get from eighty-five to one hundred and fifty dollars from the Conference. He can get a home out of that to support his family, pay his doctor bills, medicine, taxes, and insurance, dig his well, put up his fence. He is dropped out, lost sight of; no poundings or marriage fees. There is a problem I would be glad to see solved: If it takes from eight hundred to a thousand dollars to support a pastor, with a house furnished, with all these poundings, marriage fees, goods at cost, many other presents, how much will it take to support a superannuate preacher with as many to feed; he and his old wife both sick; can't help each other, absolutely helpless, needing medicine or doctors, but no money to pay? He has to get his own home, pay his tax, insurance, dig his well, put up his fence, support his family on one hundred dollars a year; no marriage fees, no poundings, no wood piled in the yard, no filling the larder with good things. He is now forgotten, lost sight of. How does he live? Does anyone know? I am a Methodist from the soles of my feet to the crown of my head, except that rotten spot; how the whole church passes it by as though it did not exist. Well, they will die the sooner by it, and be no longer responsible for the blood of these martyrs. Happy day to the church!

I see in the Minutes of the Mississippi Conference a resolution passed that the money for the Conference claimants be raised in the month of March, so they may be paid each quarter; but the time is past, and the pittance allowed them failed to come; not even one-quarter. Why is that so? Won't the people pay it, or have the preachers gone back upon their word? It has been nearly four months since Conference. March come and gone; that old superannuated preacher had to buy something to eat; pledged his word on the faith of those resolutions to pay the money at the end of three months, but the money has not come. Now, what shall he do? He is out of meat, meal, coffee; no money. What shall he now do? Please tell me.

ONE OF THEM.

IDLENESS A CURSE.

In these days of general depression and want, very fortunate are those who have some work to do. At family worship we have heard a father give thanks to God that for that day something to do was given to every one of the household. Be sure the idle member will be the discontented one, and the disturber of the family's peace. Occupation is so essential to happiness, labor is so universal and positive a law that we hold those happy to whom daily work is given. It is something to be thankful for, that, for our own good, and the good of the world, we have some work to do.—Central Presbyterian.

"Many years ago," says Bishop Whipple, when testifying to the honesty of the red Indian, "I was holding a service near an Indian village camp. My things were scattered about in a lodge, and when I was going out I asked the chief if it was safe to leave them there while I went to the village to hold a service. 'Yes,' he said, 'perfectly safe. There is not a white man within a hundred miles!'"

The Rally will meet in the First Church in Shreveport on Wednesday, May 3, and no pains will be spared by our Leaguers here to make those who attend to have an enjoyable and profitable time. We hope to get special rates on the railroads, and you are expected to come and bear and learn, whether you have a League or not. Write to Miss Myrtle McCutchen as soon as possible that you are coming, and what train you will come on, and you will be met and most cordially entertained. We sincerely trust that the pastors will urge their young people to be here to learn and become enthused in this great movement. Please notify and correct those who are kindly asked to help on the program. Letters and delays can be attributed largely to carelessness on the part of some in responding promptly. Make your plans to come and bring your friends if they are interested in the work, and pray for a rich blessing on the gathering.

For the Committee.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. S. Gale, Decatur, Miss., April 7, 1899: "Our first Quarterly Conference was held in Decatur Church, Saturday, March 25, 1899, Rev. T. L. Mellen, P. E., in the chair. Every interest of the church was looked after, and 'into.' Bro. Mellen is a model presiding elder, we think. His sermon on Sunday, at 11 A. M., on Missions, will bear fruit; has already borne fruit in the heart of the pastor. We are planning a great advance movement on this line. The outlook here is good. Miles traveled, 100; visits, 75; members visited, 145; sermons, preached, 21; lectures (to Sunday-school and Epworth League), 4; collected for foreign missions, $10; collected for domestic missions, $1.50; collected for Conference claimants, $10; collected for district parsonages, $5; collected for Bishops, $5 80; collected for preacher in charge, $65; collected for presiding older, $8; collected for furnishing parsonage, $6.50. Stewards were liberal, and made an advance of $50 on salary of preacher in charge. We hope to bring up a clean and full report at Conference. 'All for Christ.'"

Rev. Jas. M. Martin, P. C., Floyd, La., April 7: "Easter Sunday was a great day for us in Floyd. The church was decorated, and the choir had prepared some beautiful music suited to the occasion, and this scribe preached on the resurrection of Christ. We had two large congregations. At the conclusion of the eleven o'clock sermon I baptized one infant. Our first Quarterly Conference is now a thing of the past. It was held the second Sunday in March. Bro. J. D. Harper, our presiding elder, came Friday preceding the Quarterly Conference, and on account of much rain did not leave Floyd till Tuesday. Bro. Harper is no stranger to the people of this charge, he having been presiding elder of this (Delhi) district eight years ago. Though suffering from la grippe, he preached twice, and our people were greatly pleased with his preaching. He also makes a good presiding officer. We found this charge in rather bad condition, and it will take time and patience to make any great improvement. We expect to soon organize a Woman's Home Mission Society. Our congregations are good at each of three appointments. We are in great need of a revival. It is my purpose to have a camp meeting, to begin the first Sunday in August, at which time I have the promise of the assistance of a 'noted preacher from England,' Rev. T. B. Clifford. Mr. Editor, if you wish to perspire profusely next August, come to the camp meeting, and you and Clifford may alternate in the preaching. The ADVOCATE, in my opinion, is improving. I have already secured several subscribers for you, and I shall continue to press the claims of our church organ. I believe if every pastor in the Louisiana and the two Mississippi Conferences would make an earnest effort, the required number to reduce the price of the ADVOCATE will have been secured by the first of July—perhaps before. Brethren, let us rally to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE."

Rev. J. O. Bennett, Keatchie, La., April 7, 1899: "I am getting on nicely with my work. My people have furnished the parsonage with two nice bed room sets, chairs, tables, cooking stove, and many other necessary articles which go to make the preacher and his family comfortable. I am pressing the claims of the ADVOCATE as I go round, but with little success; but I shall not let up on this until larger success has been accomplished. I am going to press the canvass with more zeal and earnestness than ever before. I am glad that a goodly number of my people are already subscribers to the ADVOCATE, but I shall not be satisfied until the ADVOCATE finds its way into every Methodist family in the bounds of my charge. It is one of the best church papers in the world, and it deserves the patronage and support of every loyal Methodist in the three patronizing Conferences. My people are, in the main, intelligent, educated people, and yet many of them seem to feel but little or no obligation to take their church papers. We need a sweeping revival along this line, that our people may have a greater thirst for good religious literature. We must keep on pulling until this end is accomplished. I am pressing the claims of the missionary assessments, and I am succeeding very well. I hope to be able to make a full report at Conference, in Monroe, this Fall. I shall do what I can to help raise the amount assessed to my work for educational purposes. I have read with much pleasure and profit (in Texas Advocate) the full account of the Conference of the presiding elders at Fort Worth, and am impressed with the importance of that Conference. Surely great good will result from such a Conference. Why not Louisiana have such a Conference, on the same line? Suppose you exhort the Bishops and the 'beloveds' on the subject. I feel that such a Conference would be helpful, and would do much towards raising the Twentieth Century Fund in our Conference. I hope that the powers that be will see to it that we have such a Conference in the near future."

REPORT FROM COLUMBIA CHARGE.

Yesterday was a grand day at Boeuff River Church. The congregation was large and very attentive. The Holy Spirit was present in great power, and the service resulted in one conversion, and the collections ordered by the Conference paid in full. The revival fire is kindling throughout the circuit. Thank God, we can have a revival at every service. G. D. ANDERS, P. C.

Don't tell the people you are grieved at your appointment—that you would have preferred to have been sent to some other charge.

Don't criticise your predecessor too closely—the way he conducted the affairs of the charge. He has friends, and they will be hurt.

Don't go to dinner every time with the rich of your charge, but go also with the poor.—Christian Neighbor.

Life.

Like the flame on the forge that looked fireless and dark.
Ere the bellows-draft quickened the smouldering spark—
So life is a spark; and life is a fire;
And life is a flame rising higher and higher.
One free breath of nature ere hope dies in men,
And the fast-fading embers will waken again.

Thousands of people die of wasting weakening diseases every year who by all rules of nature and reason ought to be restored to health and strength. The medicines they receive from the average doctor according to regulation, stereotyped practice are mere temporary palliatives; they do not reach down deep into the vital organism where the spark of life lies dormant waiting to be awakened.

In numberless cases where every other remedy absolutely fails Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery breathes its strong vitalizing power upon the slumbering forces of life and wakens them into active energy. It quickens the digestive and blood-making glands and empowers them to supply fresh rich nourishment to all the organs and tissues; imbues the heart and lungs with vitality; destroying and excreting naturally from the system the bile-poisoned dregs which lurk in the circulation, thus building up new constitutional vigor and activity.

"I took a severe cold which settled on my lungs and chest, and I suffered intensely," writes Mr. Harrison Smith, of Capereck, Ky. "I tried several of our best physicians, and they gave up all hope of my recovery; they said I had consumption and could not live more than a few weeks. I took five bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and am sound and well today. I feel better than I have in ten years."

Best Edition of the World's Best Book

—THE—

"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers. New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangment for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to April, 1900. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Send for circular. Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

THE CLAIMS OF THE COUNTRY.

Of late years great attention has been given by sociologists, philanthropists, and others, to the grave problems presented by our cities, where all classes and conditions of society are found congregated together, warring elements existing side by side in striking contrast. The elevation of the masses in the great centers of population, the carrying forward of municipal reforms, and the suppression of the drink traffic, are indeed mighty, but highly necessary undertakings, and should, by all means, be encouraged. There is danger, however, that in considering the needs and demands of the cities, we shall overlook the claims and problems of our rural population, who compose the very bone and sinew of the country, and from whose ranks our cities are constantly being recruited.

For a long time the drift of population has been from the country to the cities, which are becoming more and more crowded and unmanageable. The United States Census reports show that during the years intervening between 1870 and 1890 not less than 6,000,000 people removed from country homes to the towns.

In 1870 over forty per cent. of all the people in the United States who were engaged in industrial pursuits belonged to the agricultural class. By 1890 the proportion had decreased to 36.44 per cent. Thus it is evident that an extensive and constant migration from the rural districts is going on—a fact which is far from being an omen of good. That there should be some tendency in this direction is to be expected, for such has always been the case; but there are many reasons for believing that the movement has assumed serious and hurtful proportions. It bodes evil for the future of our nation that multitudes of young men and women are anxious to get away from the farms at all hazards, that discontent is more prevalent among the agricultural class than formerly, and that there is a large number among us who look with contempt or pity upon the unsophisticated tiller of the soil. It is time that more were being done to counteract this unwholesome drift to the towns, and to provide better advantages for the country dwellers.

Several causes are responsible for the growth of the tendency we have noticed, chief among them being the lack of social, educational and church privileges in the country, the introduction of labor-saving machinery, which makes it possible for a smaller number of laborers to raise the food supplies needed for the world's consumption, and the small wages which farm laborers usually receive.

As long as conditions are what they are in many rural regions, we may expect all who can do so to remove as soon as possible to some town or city where there are good schools and churches, and where they may enjoy, in larger measure, the wonderful conveniences and opportunities of modern civilization. "The farmer of to-day," says a recent writer, "needs to learn that the chief end of life is not to raise four-cent cotton to pay for guano and buy mules, with which to raise more four-cent cotton to buy more mules and more guano. He needs to learn that the life is more than meat; that his children are of more value than lands and mules."

Not until people in the country awake to the importance of making farm life attractive, of establishing good roads, of keeping up good schools for six or eight months in the year, and of promoting more general social intercourse, can we hope for the tide of population now setting toward the cities to diminish in volume. Whatever helps to remove the isolation of country life and to furnish opportunities for self-improvement ought to be encouraged. The course of the average country community is the lack of public spirit, the absence of concern or plan for social and intellectual advantages. There is too little thought about keeping in touch with the outer world, and too little union of effort.

Although the illustrated papers of our land seem to take delight in holding the farmers, opprobiously termed "hayseed," up to ridicule, it can not be disputed that the agricultural class are the most sober, industrious and moral of our whole population. Were it not for their conservatism, integrity and diligence, our country would be in a bad way. Talk as we may of the power and glory of our cities, the hope of the nation lies in the sturdy and industrious yeomanry, who, uncorrupted by the snares of city life and unweakened by its dissipations, develop a hardiness of body and manliness of soul that fit them to play a mighty part in the affairs of Church and State. Were it not for the constant accessions of fresh blood it receives from the country, the population of our cities would, ere long, degenerate physically, intellectually, and morally.

Well has it been said, "God made the country, and man made the town." It is in the quietude of the country, amid the uncorrupting scenes of nature, that youth receives its noblest impulses and purest sources of inspiration. It is amid the peaceful pursuits and harmless pleasures of the farm, "far from the maddening crowd's ignoble strife," that character finds its most favorable opportunity for development. The absence of demoralizing influences, the spirit of freedom and self-reliance which farm life fosters, together with the educative value of communion with Nature, all combine to make the country an ideal place, in many (we do not say in all) respects, for the rearing of children.

As the editor of the Religious Telescope pertinently points out: "Nearly three-fourths of the men who have been chosen by the people for the great offices of the nation are men who were familiar with wooded hill and cultivated fields. For example: Washington, Lincoln, Grant, Garfield, Hamlin, Greeley, Tilden, Hayes, Blaine, Harrison, and many others almost equally conspicuous. Henry Watterson spent his early life in rural Kentucky. Murat Halstead was born and lived on a farm in Ohio. Jay Gould spent his early years on his father's farm in New York. Whittier spent his youth in a village, dividing his time between farm employment and his studies. Whitelaw Reid was a boy on an Ohio farm. The reader can add names by the score of successful professional and business men of his own acquaintance whose foundations for success were laid on the farm."

It is plain enough that country life and the industry of agriculture are not looked upon by the general public with that favor which betokens a proper appreciation of their advantages and influences. In our opinion, it is of no slight importance that a reaction in this matter be brought about. The encouragement and elevation of our rural population means much for the good of the whole country, for it is out of this very class, as we have seen, that a large proportion of our leaders are to come, and our citizenship is to receive the most valuable additions. Let our yeomanry become corrupted and dissipated, and the doom of the nation is sealed. Let no man who is doing what he can to enlighten and encourage our rural population imagine that because he labors in obscurity, he is doing an unimportant or a useless work. He is building more wisely than he knows. Nearly all that is best and most enduring in our civilization has been made possible by the homely virtues, industrious habits, and pure ideals fostered by country life. Let it never be forgotten that the country is as essential as the town.

As the editor of the Rocky Mountain Advocate strikingly puts it: "Men can not eat railroad iron and dynamos and the products of sulphuric acid and the electrical shops. We have not yet evolved to a place where we can get on without country schools and the restful monotony of country life. The country is an integral part of our civilization. It is indispensable, and will be for some time to come, unless we all become Christian Scientists, and learn through the unreality of wealth to get along without bread."

THE NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The New Orleans District Conference was held last week at Carrollton Avenue Church, beginning Thursday morning and closing Saturday night, with the presiding elder, Rev. S. S. Keener, in the chair, and Rev. J. F. Foster at the secretary's table. All the pastors in the district were present, with one exception. There was also better than an average attendance of laymen. The presiding elder held the reins well in hand, and dispatched business smoothly and rapidly. The spirit of the Conference was fine, and the session was harmonious and pleasant throughout. Much to the gratification of the brethren, our venerable senior Bishop honored the Conference with his presence on several occasions. President Chambers, of Whitworth College, and Prof. Crisler, of Centenary, were also present. There were two sermons each day. It was our privilege to hear only two—one by Rev. R. H. Wynn and one by Rev. P. H. Fontaine. Both were clear, thoughtful, and well-arranged discourses. We will make no attempt at outlining the work of the Conference, as we were so fortunate as to utilize the facile pen of Rev. George D. Parker to report the proceedings. His report will appear in our next week's issue, it having been received too late for this issue. In accordance with time-honored custom, there was a general swapping of pulpits among the pastors of the city on Sunday.

THE ACTORS' APPEAL FOR SELF-PROTECTION TO THE CLERGY.

Perhaps the most remarkable item in the last number of The American Sabbath is "The Actors' Appeal to the Clergy to Assist in Suppressing Sunday Theatrical Performances." This appeal is signed by F. F. Mackay, president of the Actors' Society of America, and contains many striking sentences, such as these: "The opinion has long prevailed that the actors of this country are in favor of the assignment of Sunday, like all other days of the week, to secular labor for financial gain." "For many years the actors have protested against Sunday theatrical performances of any kind whatever. They have protested against the Sunday performances as a usurpation of right enjoyed by all other citizens—a right to one day of rest in seven."

It is true that the actors take occasion to aggrandize their profession, but they also say, "The Sunday theatrical performance is such a radical wrong—so demoralizing, not only to the actors, but to the community in which the performance is given—that I think it should be the first point of attack."

It appears, too, that the Actors' Society of America, at its annual meeting, passed, by a unanimous vote, this preamble and resolution:

Whereas, The usages of Christian civilization and the custom of our forefathers have ever observed one day in the week as a day of rest; And, whereas, We believe that one day in the week may be, with advantage to the actor, always respected as a day of rest and moral culture; therefore, be it

Resolved, As a society, that we object to theatrical performances at any hour of the day on Sunday; and will always use whatever legal influence we may have to suppress the same.

MANSFIELD, LA.

Last Sunday we were in the bounds of Bro. Sheppard's charge, and found very much indicating a prosperous year for the Mansfield Methodists. Fully up for the quarter on ministerial support, he raised and sent to Bro. Thomson last month his full assessment for foreign missions. The spirit of improvement in material things is upon him and his people, and the church will shortly be thoroughly repaired, painted, and beautified, and the parsonage and other interests looked after. We learned that his congregations are large and appreciative, and the spiritual interest of his hearers is steadily on the increase. It can not be long, unless the signs fail, before the Mansfield Church will enjoy a gracious revival. Sunday night there were many young people at the altar for prayer, and some kneeling in the congregation. The pastor and his flock have good reason to be encouraged. We had the honor of addressing the Epworth League at their devotional meeting, which was conducted with grace and ability by a young lady student of the college.

There are among the pupils of Mansfield College a number of bright and consecrated Christians, competent and zealous in the Master's cause. They are prompt and clear in their testimonies at their League meetings, and they took part in the delightful quarterly love-feast we held an hour before night service. It is at Mansfield where Miss Helen Johnson, gifted in prayer and an earnest Christian worker, is preparing for the mission field. President T. W. Sligh and his accomplished wife, and helpmeet indeed in the work of Christian education, together with a splendid corps of well-equipped and consecrated teachers, have in heart and hand a glorious work for the church and for the young womanhood of North Louisiana. The perfect home-like-ness and genuinely pious atmosphere at Mansfield College is a noticeable and most gratifying feature of the work being done at our only female institution of learning. We feel sure that a girl put there will not only be faithfully and thoroughly instructed in the branches of a useful and liberal education, but the chances are she will be caught for Christ, and go forth at graduation a happy Christian and intelligent worker for God. Mansfield College is doing a grand work, not alone for the girls who crowd her classic walls, but through them, in the years to come, for the church and the communities where their lots may be cast.

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

The American Monthly Review of Reviews contains notes on the career of the new French President; a study of the approaching disarmament conference at The Hague, by Edwin M. Bliss; "A Group of Native American Musicians;" a brief illustrated article on "Kipling in America;" a statement of Canada's claims before the Joint High Commission, by Agnes C. Laut; a paper on "The Evolution of the College President," by Dr. Henry A. Stimson, and a review of American experience in the control of Hawaiian "Malays," by Winthrop L. Marvin.

In Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly, for April, Major-General Wesley Merritt contributes the leading article, entitled, "Our Flag in the Philippines." F. Marion Crawford's "Romance of Rome," also profusely and beautifully illustrated, is another notable feature of the April number. There are illustrated articles upon "Aguinaldo, and the Filipino Envoys;" "Bethlehem, the Headquarters of Moravianism in America," by John P. Ritter; "Our New Colonies, and Sugar," by M. W. Mount; "Through Mexico in a Private Car," by Captain C. H. Wilson; and "Women in the Pulpit," by the Rev. Phebe A Hanaford; complete short stories by Olive Harper and Walter Malone, and poems by Jean Rameau (illustrated by Victor Perard), Louise Chandler Moulton, Minna Irving, Ethel Morse, and Guy Scott.

ANTI-POLYGAMY CRUSADE.

The election in Utah to Congress of Brigham H. Roberts has stirred the Christian public as no event for many years. If this conspiracy of that enormity, the Mormon Church, is successful, then the next Congress will not only stand convicted of being accomplice after the deed in covenant breaking, but give its sanction to that which in every other State is crime. There is not the slightest doubt that he was ineligible to election to begin with, and that he is put forward as the representative of the very thing the Mormon Church professedly abandoned and on the basis of which alone Utah was admitted to Statehood. That Brigham Young's church and people maintain and still practice polygamy, is evident from facts furnished the public by Eugene Young, grandson of the founder of the unsavory, but powerful organization, so strong that the professed politician is ready "to crook (for advantage) the pregnant hinges of the knee." Those who have influence with Congressmen should send personal letters conveying their indignant protest against meditated insult to American womanhood and public faith.—Presbyterian.

NOTES.

From a letter from Rev. C. P. Smith, dated Minden, La., April 14, 1899, we quote as follows:

"To-night fifteen souls came weeping to the altar. Ten of them professed faith in Jesus as a pardoning Savior. The meeting has been in progress just one week. The church has been wonderfully blessed, and the morning meetings have been feasts to the soul. The pastor has done all the preaching, Bro. Clifford being unable to come. But God has used the pastor to the upbuilding of the cause of Christ."

Through a letter from Rev. W. H. Sanders we learn that Sunflower county, Miss., went dry in the local-option election on March 28.

Rev. T. B. Clifford has been appointed to the pastorate of Burgundy Street Church, in this city, in place of Rev. Barnett Wright, resigned.

Rev. C. W. Crisler spent Sunday in the city, preaching to the edification of the people at Felicity in the morning and at night at Burgundy.

We regret to learn that Rev. B. F. Phillips, of the North Mississippi Conference, though somewhat improved, is still unable to fill his pulpit.

We are pleased to learn that Rev. C. A. Powell, although he has not entirely recovered his health, is able to be at his post in the pulpit and the pastorate.

Under date of April 10 Rev. J. M. Huggin writes: "The wife of Rev. J. M. Hampton passed peacefully away on the fifth of this month. Our aged brother will have the sympathy of many friends."

Rev. J. W. Chambers filled the pulpit at Algiers Sunday morning, and at Louisiana Avenue in the evening. On both occasions he magnified his office as a preacher of the Word of Truth.

Bishop Galloway had a keen perception of the fitness of things when he appointed Rev. T. W. Adams to the pastorate in that educational centre, Brookhaven, Miss. He fits the place admirably.

We learn that Dr. H. W. Featherston, of the Brookhaven district, wears his new harness as becomingly as a veteran. Both in administration and in pulpit work he measures up to a high standard.

Bishop Galloway returned from New York a few days since, but is off again to attend an Educational Conference at Little Rock, Ark., after which he will go to Richmond, Va. to deliver a centennial address.

From a letter from Rev. R. A. Meek, bearing date of April 14, we quote as follows: "Dr. Milburn, chaplain United States Senate, will lecture at Corinth, West Point, Starkville, Carrollton and Indianola this week and next."

Rev. H. W. Rickey writes: "We have a fine field for Christ-like endeavor at Clinton, and we are full of hope, happiness and heart. Twelve have united with us, and more to follow. The people are kind, and filled with that fine old Southern courtesy."

Rev. G. W. F. Price, D. D., president of Nashville College for Young Ladies, died on the seventh after a somewhat protracted illness. He was one of our most eminent and successful educators, having been engaged in educational work about half a century.

The family of Rev. J. A. Randolph passed through this city last week en route to Camp Sam Houston, San Antonio, Texas. It is probable that the Sixth Regiment will take its departure for Manila about the first of May. So it is likely that, ere long, Bro. Randolph will be in the plight of the rebel soldier in the old war song—"a long ways from home."

We are glad to receive the following note from Bro. Smith:

MR. EDITOR: Bro. J. A. Poe has rallied, and the doctor thinks if no unexpected trouble arises after some little time, he will be himself again. How kind the parishioners and those good people are to their preacher! Brethren, continue to pray that Bro. Poe may soon be about his loved employ. J. H. SMITH.

The New Orleans branch of the National Woman's Indian Association celebrated its eighth anniversary on the twelfth. The address of the gifted president, Mrs. E. John Ellis, was replete with interesting information concerning the work of the association. Laboring specifically for the education, civilization and Christianization of the benighted tribes throughout our land, this organization merits the confidence and the patronage of Christians of every denomination.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Jackson, La., EDITOR.

Rev. E. S. Lewis writes from Brookeville, Miss.: "We organized an Epworth Leagne yestorday with twenty-seven mombers; will have fifty or sixty by May 1. The outlook is fine. Will have several at West Point, June 22."

A card recently received from Rev. J. W. Featherstun, D. D., presiding elder of the Brookhaven district, contains the following: "I have organized three Leagues within the last month—one at Bahala, on the Providence work; one at Fernwood, on the Whitestown work, and one at Magnolia. The pastors have also organized one at Tylertown and one at Brookhaven. This makes five new Leagoes this year for the Brookhaven district."

Rev. J. A. Randolph, president of the Mississippi Leagues, has been appointed chaplain in the regular army, and will shortly leave with the 25th Infantry from Fort Sam Houston, Texas, for Manila.

He, therefore, tenders his resignation as a League officer, and desires, through these columns, publicly to thank the Leaguers of Mississippi for the honors they have in the past conferred upon him.

We take the liberty of quoting several paragraphs contained in his letter: "I desire to go on record as favoring, more than ever, the work among the young people. Seven months' experience in the army has taught me that if a man's faith stands the strain of temptation which comes to those who are thrown with large bodies of men away from home influences, he must have it re-enforced with a thorough drill in the great truths of the gospel and in practical Christian work."

"Almost without exception, I found that the men in the volunteer army who were at all religions were members of young people's societies at their homes. This seems to be of great importance, for it is the character that will stand firm against temptation's shock that we are to build."

"I trust that I shall not be forgot by the many people I have had the pleasure of knowing in Mississippi. I will be glad to hear from any of them. They can address me at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Texas. I shall still hold my membership in the North Mississippi Conference, and hope to attend its sessions."

We hope the Leaguers in Mississippi will read and regard the exhortation of Miss Vic Thompson, corresponding secretary and treasurer, which we print this week in connection with her financial report for February and March.

May the Leaguers of Mississippi not going up to this Conference without redeeming this pledge. At the Conferences recently held in the Columbus and Aberdsen districts we were taken to the amount of $25 from each of these districts, and I know that the Leaguers were roused to action also in the recent Grenada District Conference, which sickness prevented my attending. Let me urge upon the Leagues in these districts the importance of prompt payment of these pledges. The money is needed, and let us not delay in paying our vows unto the Lord.

THE PROPOSED SUMMER INSTITUTE.

MR. EDITOR: To the suggestion in the ADVOCATE, of March 23, relative to holding a Summer Institute for the instruction of undergraduates and candidates for admission on trial, I have had but two responses. One examiner favors the idea, another does not. Several undergradoates have written me, thanking me for the interest taken in their behalf, and expressing the hope that the proposed Institute may become a reality. With these exceptions, the silence is eloquent.

Early in the year I addressed to ten young men—who I thought were in the class of the fourth year—circular letters containing some practical suggestions concerning the two books upon which I am to examine. Though an acknowledgement was requested, but five of them have written me to date, and some of them are in the class of the third year. The Minutes fail to show who compose the class of the fourth year.

One who has served four years on a Committee of Examination recently remarked to me: "You will find that you will simply have to pass some deserving young men, who, by reason of educational deficiencies and of laborious work on large circuits, are unable to come up to the required standard."

I must dissent from this proposition. These circumstances, and many others, are all well known to our Bishops, who, in prescribing the Course of Study, took into consideration the fact that among candidates for the ministry some were intellectually brilliant, others not so gifted; some were studious, others mentally lazy; some were ambitious to forge ahead to the front rank among their peers, while others were lamentably indifferent alike to success or failure in their life-work. Presumably, the Bishops struck an average. Such is the standard prescribed. No provision is made for failure on the one hand, or for undue favoritism on the other. The undergradnate is expected to expend mental brawn until he is reasonably familiar with the books prescribed in the Course of Study. It is made the business of the Examining Committees to attest that fact when it has been accomplished. They can not truthfully and conscientiously affirm that this has been done, when the written evidence shows the contrary.

In examinations, both in the Civil Service for governmental positions and of teachers in the public schools, the standard of educational qualification is rapidly advancing. The church is loudly voicing the same imperative demand upon the part of her ministry.

Whether or not the proposed Institute is held, I, for one, desire to put myself on record as willing to expend a reasonable portion of my time and substance in assisting this class of my brethren in the ministry.

In conclusion, I make this proposition to the class of the fourth year: Read Hopkins and Tigert carefully, noting what you do not understand. Re-read these books, write out points of insurmountable difficulty, and mail same to me not later than June 30. From these papers I will arrange a symposium, and mail you a typewritten circular letter that will be generally helpful. I can not reply to individual requests for assistance. The above-mentioned letter will be mailed only to those who are sufficiently interested to comply with the conditions.

OUR HONOR ROLL.

In addition to those previously named, the following brethren have sent in new subscriptions:

AN APPEAL.

DEAR BRETHREN: This is a thickly settled community. The people freely attend the ministry. The present building is almost ready to fall, and, besides, will not accommodate one-half the congregation. We have a few faithful Christians, but the mass is godless; yet we have much hope in laboring for a people who will listen to the preached Word. Our work is almost completely hampered at this place (Eminence) for the want of a church. With the exception of a few, who are indifferent and not members of the church, the people are very poor.

We do not ask you to help a people that will not help themselves, for they have, so far as lieth in their power, for some time to come, given liberally.

The M. E. Church, South, has a clear deed to the land. The material necessary is on the ground, and some money in the treasury. Though this far advanced, we must be denied the use of the much-needed church until more help comes in. With several small contributions from over the church we will be enabled to carry on the work to immediate completion. Any amount, however small or large, will be acceptable and useful. I trust God will lay it on your heart to help a little just here. We prefer registered letters, but should you send a money order, send the order on Ellisville, Miss., postoffice, but address the letter to me.

CHRISTIAN WOMANHOOD.

BY REV. W. C. BLACK, D. D.

The above-named work has had a sale of nearly six thousand. From the many scores of highly commendatory notices that have appeared in the church papers, we present the following:

"We hope it will be read by every woman in the church."—Florida Advocate.

"It is the best thesaurus of facts concerning womanhood with which we are acquainted. The author has evidently given painstaking thought and care to the preparation of this volume. After showing the degraded condition of woman under the highest pagan civilizations, he demonstrates that it was Christianity that began to raise her to higher levels, and that since the Reformation the good work has been going forward. We wish thousands of women to read this excellent volume."—Dr. C. F. Deems.

The price is $1, and we will send it postpaid on receipt of that sum. But to that select class who subscribe for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we make the following special offer: Pay your subscription one full year in advance, and send us sixty cents additional, and we will send you the book postpaid.

What Statistics Have Proven!

What Medical Science Has Accomplished

THIS GREAT DISCOVERY IS OFFERED FREE TO "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" READERS.

Statistics prove that more people are brought to the grave by diseases of the kidneys and bladder than by any other disease.

Kidney trouble is in itself so insidious and deceptive that thousands have some form of it and never suspect it.

For many years medical science has been trying to discover some remedy that would positively overcome these dangerous troubles.

But not until recently was the discovery made. Doctor Kilmer, the eminent physician and scientist, after years of study and research, and after test on test that never varied in the grand result, announced the discovery of Swamp-Root, which has proven itself a most wonderful cure for all diseases of the kidneys and bladder.

While Swamp-Root has proved such a remarkable success in curing kidney and bladder diseases, it has also proved equally invaluable in the cure of blood diseases, rheumatism, liver and stomach troubles and in the regulation and cure of all uric acid troubles.

Swamp-Root has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief, and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of the "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" who have not already tried it may have a free sample bottle of Swamp-Root and thus test for themselves its wonderful curative properties.

If you will send your name and full address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., a sample bottle will be sent absolutely free by mail post-paid, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and containing some of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from people who owe their good health,

THE BOOK OPENED;

OR, AN ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE.

BY ALFORD NEVIN, D. D.

PRICE, $1.50.

This is indeed a most valuable work, written especially for Sabbath-school and Bible class teachers, scholars, and all who feel the need, as it is believed many do, of a convenient and comprehensive volume to which they can at any time turn for information to aid them in understanding and defending the Word of God. It has been prepared to serve in this direction as a manual, to which recourse can be had with confidence and comfort, for explanations which might be found elsewhere, but only after research involving great expenditure of time and means. The author is a man of learning and talent, and has written an eloquent volume. All who read the book will be delighted with it. Read what is said of it by the religious press of the country.

"The work is one of universal merit and contains a vast amount of valuable information."—American Christian Review.

"It is a universal compendium in which may be found explanations of many things and much information."—The Church Union, New York City.

This most excellent book we will send, postpaid, for $1 to any subscriber who will pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz., to April, 1900. To non-subscribers we will send it at the publisher's price—$1.50. Address

OUR $1 OFFER.

Much has been said about reducing the subscription price of the ADVOCATE. The only way in which a reduction can be brought about is by an increase in the number of subscribers. In order to facilitate this result, we make the following offer: Until further notice we will take new subscriptions at the rate of $1 for eight months. When seven thousand five hundred new names have been sent in at this rate with the cash, we will extend the time four months longer, thus reducing the price to $1 per annum. When the extension is made, old subscribers will get the benefit as well as new ones, provided they first pay up all arrearages. Of course, no commissions can be given under this offer. Address

NOT LOST, BUT GONE BEFORE.

Say, why should friendship grieve for those
Who safe arrive on Canaan's shore?
Released from all their hurtful foes,
They are not lost—but gone before.
How many painful days on earth
Their fainting spirits numbered o'er!
Now they enjoy a heavenly birth;
They are not lost—but gone before.

Dear is the spot where Christians sleep,
And sweet the strain which angels pour;
O why should we in anguish weep?
They are not lost—but gone before.
Secure from every mortal care,
By sin and sorrow vexed no more,
Eternal happiness they share,
Who are not lost—but gone before.

To Zion's peaceful courts above,
In faith triumphant may we soar,
Embracing in the arms of love
The friends not lost—but gone before.
On Jordan's banks whene'er we come,
And hear the swelling waters roar,
Father, convoy us safely home,
To friends not lost—but gone before.

THE CHRISTIAN IN ACTIVE LIFE.

Men are asking everywhere this question: "Is it possible for a man to be engaged in the activities of our modern life and yet be a Christian? Is it possible for a man to be a broker, a shopkeeper, a lawyer, a mechanic—is it possible for a man to be engaged in a business of to-day, and yet love his God and his fellowman as himself?" I do not know what transformation these dear businesses of yours have got to undergo before they shall be true and ideal homes for the child of God; but I do know that upon Christian merchants and Christian brokers and Christian lawyers and Christian men in business to-day there rests an awful and a beautiful responsibility to prove, if you can prove it, that these things are capable of being made divine; to prove that a man can do the work that you have been doing this morning, and will do this afternoon, and yet shall love his God and his fellow-man as himself. If he can not, what business have you to be doing them? If he can, what business have you to be doing them so poorly, so carnally, so unspiritually, that men look on them and shake their heads with doubt? It belongs to Christ in men first to prove that man may be a Christian and yet do business; and in the second place, to show how a man, as he becomes a greater Christian, shall purify and lift the business that he does, and make it the worthy occupation of the Son of God.—Bishop Brooks.

CULTIVATION OF RESERVE.

Too much emphasis can not be laid on the importance of winning a child's confidence and encouraging him to talk freely to mother or older sister about his interests, his thoughts, his friends. At the same time, there is something to be said about the cultivation of reserve, especially in regard to other people. Beyond a certain point we have no right to discuss the private affairs of our friends, even in the home circle. Honor requires us to keep some confidences, even from the nearest members of our own family, as sacredly as we should guard family secrets from outsiders. We have in mind a woman who is so interested in her neighbors, and so fond of discussing their movements with the person to whom she chances to be talking, that her friends dare not confide any information which they do not wish to become common property. They know at least that nothing is ever kept from her family. From childhood she has always told every bit of news at home, regardless of whom it concerns, because secure in the assurance that it would not be repeated; but the habit thus formed has developed into a relish for gossip not always kept within safe limits, and this well-meaning and kindly woman is fast losing the sense of honor and delicacy which one desires in one's friends.—The Young Woman.

DEAR SIR—I have intended to write to you for some time. I think the trouble on my nose is now about well and I don't see any appearance of a further outbreak. I have sent your papers east, west, north and south with a notice of the cure the medicine has made on me and recommending anyone who is troubled with cancer or sores of long standing, that it is well worth their while to try your medicine, at the same time telling them what it has done for me after a cancer of twenty years standing on my nose, and at my time of life,—soon will be 95 years. I had an idea latterly that my age was rather against me in the healing process, but it certainly appears to be all right now. Yours, etc.,

PETER COFFIN.

BYE, Lock Box 25, Indianapolis, Ind., and he will send them books and papers free, giving prices of treatment, and hundreds of letters from the afflicted in every part of the United States and Canada who have been cured; also half-tone cuts from photographs showing facts that can not be questioned.

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT,

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living

EDUCATION FOR GIRLS.

In childhood our girls should have the same preliminary training as the boys. They should be encouraged to play with their brothers. Boys grow more gentle and considerate by this association, while the girls gain in vigor and force. Indeed, this exchange of courtesies we find all through life, first in play, next in the co-educational schools, and, lastly, in the new homes that are made.

If a daughter is delicate, she should not be crowded with work. Let her education take a longer time. There is no need of hurry. Why can not the truth be recognized that the years of training are the most beautiful years of life? They are full of hopes and aspirations which beautify the soul even if they are never fully attained. The wise mother will do all in her power to extend this delightful period.

A thorough education makes it possible for a young woman to enter almost any occupation she may desire. For those who have been brought up tenderly it is not always pleasant to be compelled to care for themselves, but it is a thousand times better to be able to do so in an emergency than to eat the bread of dependence. Education will fit them to meet just such emergencies.—Woman's Home Companion.

SUCCESS LIES IN YOURSELF.

Men who succeed in the world, as a rule, do so not by having extraordinary, but common opportunities. In other words, success is in the man, not in the opportunity. It is not men with extraordinary opportunities who have left their mark upon the world. It is a Euclid with a pair of compasses; a Galileo experimenting with a straw in his prison cell; a Palissy burning his household furniture to develop his enamel; a Franklin with a kite; a Fulton with a paddle-wheel; a Humphry Davy with old bottles and tin pans in an attic; a Whitney with a few tools in a Southern cellar; a Howe with shuttles, needles, and rough machinery; a Professor Bell, poor, and experimenting on the telephone with the simplest apparatus; a Leonidas at Thermopylæ; a Horatius at the Bridge—these are the men who have been the benefactors of their kind. We pity a young man who can read the history of men who have benefited the world with their inventions, and not feel that he, too, can do something; we pity the young man who can read the biographies of successful men and still claim that he has no chance in life.—Success.

NAPOLEON LOST THE BATTLE OF LEIPSIC because of a fit of indigestion. One dose of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL would have given him instant relief, and the fate of the kingdoms of Europe been decided differently. It is really marvelous how quickly a colicky pain will vanish when a teaspoonful of Mul-en-ol in a wineglass of hot water is taken. Try it; you will never suffer from colic.

WHAT A SMALL BOY COULD DO.

A lad in Boston, rather small for his age, works in an office as errand boy for four gentlemen who do business there. One day the gentlemen were chaffing him a little for being so small, and said to him:

"You will never amount to much, you can never do much, you are too small."

The little fellow looked at them.

"Well," said he, "as small as I am, I can do something that neither of you can do."

"Ah, what is that?" said they.

"I don't know as I ought to tell you," he replied.

But they were anxious to know, and urged him to tell what he could do that neither of them were able to do.

"I can keep from swearing," said the little fellow.

There were some blushes on four faces, and there seemed to be no anxiety for further information.—Exchange.

THE DELUSION OF GIRLS.

"The most subtle and deceitful hope which ever existed, and one which wrecks the happiness of many a young girl's life," writes Dwight L. Moody, "is the common delusion that a woman can best reform a man by marrying him. It is a mystery to me how people can be so blinded to the hundreds of cases in every community where tottering homes have fallen and innocent lives have been wrecked because some young girl has persisted in marrying a scoundrel in the hope of saving him. I have never known such a union, and I have seen hundreds of them result in anything but sadness and disaster."

Madame Roland defined marriage as an institution where one person was expected to provide happiness for two.—Exchange.

BE NATURAL.

One reason why so many girls and boys are uninteresting is because they try to be like somebody else, some acquaintance whom they look upon as a beau ideal, rather than to remain simply themselves. In nature we never see an oak tree posing as a willow, or a horse as a cow, or a lily as a rose, or a dog as a cat. Be natural and you will possess the charm of individuality. Try to pose as something different from what nature intended you to be, and you will sink to the level of the commonplace.

Hygiene.

ALCOHOLICS AS MEDICINES.

Dr. Sir Benjamin Ward Richardson, F. R. S., the leading authority in England on the physiological effects of alcoholics, says:

"The practice of the London Temperance Hospital—now twenty-five years in operation—is incisive and decisive in this respect. We receive there patients in the most varied types of diseases, acute and chronic, in all stages, without any thought of selection. We receive some who are abstainers and, therefore, it might be supposed, ready for abstaining treatment; we receive many who are not abstainers, but we treat all alike in so far as the non-administration of alcohol is concerned, and our results leave nothing to be desired.

"I have watched the treatment of disease for twenty-five years with alcohol; I have watched it for twenty-five years without alcohol; and, apart from any prejudice or the least bias, I am confident, on a review of the whole of the facts, that if the systems of treatment of disease with alcohol and absolutely without it be compared, the non-alcoholic system leads the way as the safest, the most rapid, and most certain system in curative tendencies."

I have the evidence of my own personal experience and the experience of the enormous numbers of people who pass before me every year, and I state that alcohol is not a helper of work, but a certain hinderer of work, and every man who comes to the front of a profession in London is marked by this one characteristic that the more busy he gets the less in the shape of alcohol he takes, and his excuse is: "I am sorry, but I can not take it and do my work."—Andrew Clark, M. ANDLE—Miss HATTIE RANDLE, daughter e late lamented Richmond and Mary Ran- of the Louisiana Annual Conference, and r of Robert and Thos. Randle, of the Lou- a Annual Conference, was born Aug. 29, and died at her brother's, Robert Randle, e parsonage, Big Cane, La., Dec. 2 1898, everal weeks of illness. This writer eferred from the Louisiana Annual Con- ce to the Northwest Texas Annual Con- ce in 1875, and she went with us to Texas, usic our house her home. She being my cousin and the only daughter of her par- and her mother the only living sister of ather, made her feel very near to us; and her amiable and loving disposition and like deportment drew us together in such g bonds that she held a relation in our y as a dear sister or child, and we have rned her loss as such, but we are resigned ise we feel that she has gone to meet her dear father and mother in heaven. was a highly cultured lady, a graduate inden Female College, La., and was a er by profession. She taught a part of ears in Texas, then had a call to Millers- Ky., where, I believe, she remained two , and then returned to Louisiana and t for some length of time, and then back xas and taught a session, after which she ined with us in Gatesville perhaps a year, g herself very pleasant and useful, for uld not bear the idea of making herself ien to any family. She was a fine con- tionalist, not a great talker, but well d in the best literature of the day, and ccurate in pronunciation and choice in made herself very interesting. But than this: she conversed well on the being brought up at the feet of such a and useful itinerant preacher as Rinh- Randle, and in the lap of such a mother y Randle. Her mother married her for years in childhood to the old Oak Grove h, to the Sunday-school where she s class, and was really the prominent in the school, and at this church I am ed to think Hattie professed religion, h of this I am not sure. Her whole life aracter bore testimony to the truth of mental godliness. L S SCOTT.

LER—Rev. WILLIAM ARCHIE MILLER, Samuel K. and Sarah S. Miller, was ear Mount Carmel, Miss., Sept. 19, 1875, d Jan. 9, 1899 as in attendance at Millsaps College both years of my pastorate, but ren- sinable assistance during the Summer. e always ready for every good work, ored with me in the sweetest harmony. eching was not ordinary, for the truth ed was accompanied by the Holy in a single service held by him in his urch, where he was brought up, there many as eight professions.
spirit of self-sacrifice was Christ-like. ed passing the final examinations at to wait on several fellow-students protracted spells of sickness., Also, sted away by long and severe hours and our own hearts were melted in by for him, his mind was not upon his rdans, but those of others. He was ed at the thought of giving trouble to and loved ones. About the needs of and about church finances he asked t questions, and gave freely and liber- n money earned by hard labor, even e fatal disease had set in. stance in affliction was more than for he was buoyed up by the presence ivine Spirit. With hope of recovery— rning to college and completing the of joining the Conference, all gone, aid, "It is all right." His confidence was unshaken.
iller was converted when a boy, and 1897, he entered the experience of sa- tification, which he held to the end. in triumph. JNO. D. CHYMES.

ONG—Mrs. ANNA TERRY HERLONG olest, sweet Christian character. She reat pleasure in doing good unto oth- was gentle in her manner, loving in ion, and pure in spirit. She reflects on the Christian home in which she ed.
thirtieth of June, 1897, she was hap- ried to Bro. H. L. Herlong. Among test blessings that attended this ir was the coming of a beautiful l baby boy. During the yellow fever that occurred at Harriston last Fall est concern of these happy parents yellow fever would almost certainly sweep from their embrace this precious babe. But, alas! the precious mother was stricken with the fever, and after more than a week of patient suffering she received the summons to a home beyond the sky.
Dear husband, parents, sisters, and broth- ers, this is a sad stroke to you; but in heaven God's own hand shall wipe away all tears from all eyes.
In the next world there shall be no night— no night of rest—because none are weary; no night of wailing, because none are sick; no night of terror, because there are none to molest or to make us afraid. In that pure land beyond the swelling flood, where our fountains will be dried, our tears all wiped away, we will gaze undazzled on eternal day.
RENT. F. WITT.

ROUSE—GRIFFIN ROUSE, the infant babe of Bro. and Sister H. P. Rouse, died March 12, aged two months and two days.
Mourn not for the departed spirit, loved ones, for it's only a tender bud plucked from your bosom to blossom as the lily in God's bright field of flowers, where there is peace and joy forevermore. May the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ sustain the bereaved family in the loss of this loved one! "Suffer the little ones to come unto me, and forbid them not, for such is the kingdom of heaven."
This jewel has only preceded you across to the other shore to give you a more glorious welcome when you sail across the river on the old ship of Zion. 'The Lord giveth, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord," were the words of the bereaved parents and family.
W. L. BLACKWELL, Pastor.
Vanclave, Miss.

JERRELL—SARAH ANN JERRELL, daughter of the Rev. Benjamin and Mildred Weatherly, was born in Jones county, Ga., Feb. 29, 1820; died in Holmes county, Miss., Jan. 7, 1899; joined the M. E. Church in Georgia in 1836, at the Marion Camp Ground. Her father was a local preacher. She was married in 1846 to Bethel D. Jerrell, a good, upright Christian. In 1860 Sister Jerrell was left a widow with four children. They became all her care, and she nobly met her responsibility. She loved the church of her choice; was well acquainted with its doctrines and polity, and delighted in all her forward movements. She was a con- stant reader of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE from the first issue until her death. While Sister Jerrell was old, she never became old. Thus has passed away a noble mother and consistent Christian. W. C. LESTER.

SLAY—Died at the home of his parents near Eley P. O., Scott county, Miss., THOMAS ALEXANDER SLAY, infant son of T. A. and Mary C. Slay, March 25, 1899.
The remains of little Tommy were laid to rest in the Cottrell Cemetery, a large crowd of sympathizing relatives and friends attend- ing the funeral service and accompanying the sorrowing parents to the tomb, where the lit- tle corpse was deposited. The body sleeps in the new-made grave, but the spirit has gone to the haven of rest, where it beckons father and mother home.
God knows best; he hath taken his own; his will be done. May he comfort his children in their bereavement! F. J. O'NEIL.

SHELL—Whereas, On the twenty-second of February, 1899, God, in his providence, saw fit to remove from our midst Bro. M. C. SHELL; And, whereas, He has been connected with the Sabbath-school of the Methodist Church at Houston for more than thirty years as su- perintendent and teacher; And, whereas, We deem it meet and proper to express our pro- found sorrow on account of his death, and that we pay this tribute of respect to his memory; therefore, be it
Resolved, That in the death of Bro. Shell the Sabbath-school of the M. E. Church at Hous- ton loses one of its most experienced, faithful and influential workers.
Resolved, That the loss to the minister in charge and to the superintendent, teachers and pupils of our Sunday-school is such as to call forth our deep and heartfelt grief.
Resolved, That while one of our most en- deared citizens, one of the most consecrated members of the Methodist Church, and one of our most efficient Sunday-school workers, has been taken from us, nevertheless we bow in perfect submission to the will of God, who knoweth and doeth all things well.
Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved family and relatives our heartfelt sympathy.

Take courage indeed: to look into a dull future and smile; to stay bound and not shake under the cords; to endure pain and keep the cheer of health; to see hopes fade and die out and not sink into brutish despair—here is courage before which we may pause with reverence and admiration.—Munger.

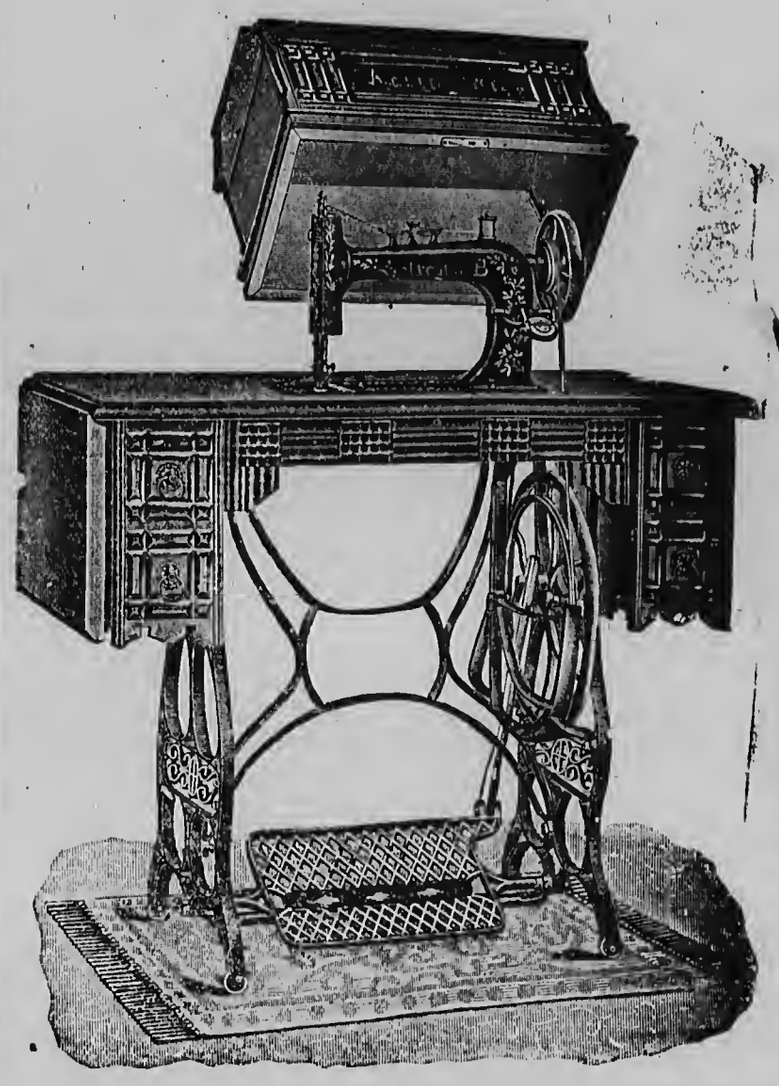
Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine

A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arling- ton B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as au- tomatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.



The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical ap- pearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take-up, convenient foot rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearing polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, con- trolling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great length; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect ten- sion, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell, without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Spain has sent an ambassador to reopen the diplomatic relations broken off by the war.

A disastrous fire occurred at Winnsboro, La., on the twelfth. The fire is supposed to have been of incendiary origin.

The Illinois Legislature has passed a bill to pay bounties to the makers of beet sugar in that State, and has appropriated $75,000 a year for the purpose.

Col. G. M. Govan, of McComb, Miss., died at the New Orleans Sanitarium a few days since. He was colonel of the First Regiment, Mississippi Volunteers, in the Spanish War. He was also Secretary of State of the State of Mississippi for several years.

The officials are said to be concealing the number of killed and wounded Americans in the Philippine war. A reliable authority estimates the dead from bullets and disease at 510, and the wounded at 1800. The dead Filipinos are estimated at from 16,000 to 20,000.

Robert Claussen, one of the enlisted men who went into Santiago harbor with Hobson on the "Merrimac," failed to pass the required examination for advancement to the grade of boatswain, which had been conferred on him for his gallant conduct, subject to mental, professional and physical qualifications.

The celebration attending the return of the United States cruiser "Raleigh" from Manila occurred in New York on April 16. The "Raleigh," accompanied by two small war vessels captured from the Spaniards last Summer, and a fleet of about twenty-five excursion steamers and tugboats, paraded from Tompkinsville to Grant's tomb, and from there back to anchorage in the North river.

The work of getting the army down to a peace basis progresses steadily. The volunteer regiments which have been doing duty in Cuba are being rapidly brought back to this country and mustered out of the service. The work of recruiting the regular army up to its full legal strength is making good progress, and it is expected in the very near future the regular establishment will reach the required quota of 61,000 men.

Lawton wants 100,000 men to pacify the Philippines and establish local governments. He says he could go through the islands with his present forces. He has returned to Manila and will move on San Fernandino, where Aguinaldo has held forth in peace for some time. The expedition to Santa Cruz was only to spread the news of the peaceful intentions of the American Government. Much good is expected to result from the distribution of the Commission's proclamation.

Major-General James H. Wilson sent to Andrew Carnegie, a few weeks ago, a letter suggesting that Mr. Carnegie, if he desired to do something to educate and help the Cubans in the Matanzas district, might start a library there. General Wilson sent him a list of 2000 books which he thought would serve the interests of the Cubans best. Mr. Carnegie said that he had ordered that the books be sent to Cuba. The list contained among them his own book, "Triumphant Democracy."

The political administration of the city of New York is being investigated by a joint committee of the State Legislature, under the chairmanship of State Senator Mazet. Just now the committee is prying into the influences that control the city administration. Testimony brought out the fact that candidates for appointment or election to judgeships, not excepting the Supreme Court of the State, were required to pay an assessment or contribution of from $7000 to $10,000 for getting their names on the tickets. All candidates for office were heavily assessed.

After hearing from the British and German embassies, the State Department is enabled to announce positively and finally that the three parties to the Berlin treaty had agreed upon the instructions to be given their Samoan commissioners, and that it was certain that the commission would leave San Francisco on the twenty-fifth for Samoa. The instructions to the commissioners are identical, the three governments having accepted a form which compromises the differences which have existed up to this point. The commission will be empowered to deal with the situation as it finds it on the Samoan Islands upon its arrival.

The War Department will reply to the telegram of Governor Lee, of South Dakota, to President McKinley, asking for the immediate muster out and return of the South Dakota troops in the Philippines, that the troops will be brought home as soon as deemed expedient by the United States, and as soon as possible with the transports at hand. It is held at the War Department that the law requiring the muster out of troops contemplates that the Executive Department shall have ample time to issue the necessary orders and make the necessary preparations to properly discharge the soldiers and bring them home. The provision in the bill allowing the volunteers in the Philippines to be enlisted for six months, may be construed to mean that the volunteers will not be mustered out before that time, if they are necessary to the government.

At the Capitol.

I am in my seventy-third year, and for fifty years I have been a great sufferer from indigestion, constipation and biliousness. I have tried all the remedies advertised for these diseases, and get no permanent relief. About one year ago, the disease assuming a more severe and dangerous form, I became very weak, and lost flesh rapidly. I commenced using Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir. I gained twelve pounds in three months. My strength and health, my appetite and my digestion were perfectly restored, and now I feel as young and vigorous as I ever did in my life.

UNANSWERED PRAYERS.

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Like some schoolmaster, kind in being stern,
Who hears the children crying o'er their slates
And calling, "Help me, master," yet helps not,
Since in his silence and refusal lies
Their self-development, so God abides,
Unheeding many prayers. He is not deaf
To any cry sent up from earnest hearts;
He hears and strengthens when he must deny.

He sees us weeping over life's hard sums;
But should he dry our tears, and give the key,
What would it profit us when school were done
And not one lesson mastered?

What a world.
Were this if all our prayers were granted! Not
In famed Pandora's box were such vast ills
As lie in human hearts. Should our desires,
Voiced one by one, in prayer, second to God,
And come back as events, shaped to our wish,
What chaos would result!

In my florne youth
I sighed out breath enough to move a fleet,
Voicing wild prayers to heaven for fancied boons
Which were denied; and that denial bends
My knees to prayers of gratitude each day
Of my maturer life. Yet from those prayers
I rose always regirded for the strife
And conscious of new strength. Pray on, sad heart!
That which thou pleadest for may not be given.
But in the lofty altitude where souls
Who supplicate God's grace are lifted, there
Thou shalt find help to bear thy future lot,
Which is not elsewhere found.

OUR GIRLS AND THE TWENTIETH CENTURY FUND.

In considering the possibilities of the new century educational movement, we are impressed with the fact that it means increased advantages for the present and untold benefits for future generations. It means the placing of our colleges on a firmer financial basis; it means men and women better equipped for citizenship and for Christian work; it means equal educational advantages for our girls and boys.

In the March issue of the New Century Education it is stated that there is great need of "academies for girls" in the Southern Church, and that there should be one in each Conference. There is no such need in the Mississippi Conference. We have numerous schools for girls which meet the demands of the academic courses of study, and which can prepare girls to enter the collegiate A. B. course; but the trouble is, there is no well-equipped, endowed college for girls, and the great need of Southern Methodism in Mississippi is concentration of forces, energy, influence and means upon one school for girls to make that one a college indeed in curriculum and results of attainment for its graduates, and, in accord with the resolutions prepared by the General Conference Committee, to have no other school recognized as a college under the auspices of the Conference. Every Methodist Conference, it seems to me, ought to have enough money within its bounds, enough consecrated money, and enough men and women with hearts loyal to the cause of Christian education, and broad-minded enough to appreciate what it means for the nation and for the advancement of the Master's cause, to establish such a school. To attain graduation from this college would become the ambition of every girl of our land; thus ambition would be aroused and zeal kindled as never before for the cause of higher education.

I do not think the best results can be obtained by co-education. Let us have a college in the highest sense of the term for girls; not an annex, not a college for boys, with its doors thrown open to girls. This seems like saying to the girls, "The college honors, but you may enjoy its advantages and benefits to the highest degree of which you are capable." A few might accept the invitation, but the many would not. We want colleges for girls, all their own, with well-equipped departments such as will furnish advantages to fit them for the duties of life. The duties of woman are divided into two classes, according to modern economics: home-making and bread-winning. The former demands the highest attainments as much, if not more, than the latter, and one woman is sometimes called upon to fill both positions at the same time. It was Lamartine who said, "Woman is the beginning of all great things." It is also true that she is the most important factor in the training of statesmen and of churchman; therefore, she should have the first consideration, and the very best provision should be made for giving her advantages and opportunities to prepare for her life-work. The statement above made is well sustained by the fact that the foundation for the education of every man and every woman is laid by the mother in the home and the teacher in the primary schools; and who ever heard of a man teaching a primary school? Who ever heard of a man applying for the primary department in any of our city graded schools? No one ever thinks of such a thing. From this argument follows the concinsion that mothers and home-makers and primary teachers need higher qualifications and better training than those filling any other positions in life's workshop. Everyone who has had any experience in teaching knows how much easier it is to teach children that come from homes of culture and education than those that come from homes where the King's English is murdered, and where it is not even so much as known whether there be any rules of syntax; also how hard it is to correct errors of language formed in childhood. These difficulties may be overcome by giving better educational advantages to girls. It is true that we are only laying the foundation of our life-structure during the entire time of our school course, but the base of that foundation is the training of the years of infancy and early childhood; hence the importance of this training being of the highest quality, and of mothers to whom it is committed being fitted by education of head and heart to competently fulfill the trust.

In the broadening light of the twentieth century dawn women are not relegated to the narrow limits of the hearthstone, where, however, she still shines, and will ever continue to shine; but they have risen to the emergency of expanded possibilities and stepped out into the broader light of extended opportunities for taking their places alongside the sterner sex in working out the problems of life and contributing to its demands upon time and talent. As bread-winners they need the best preparation for life-work in order to become competent to earn the best possible living for themselves and those dependent upon them, as well as to be able to contribute the more liberally to public enterprises, and thus accomplish the more good for humanity. Positions are now thrown open to them which were formerly thought of only for men. With these enlarged opportunities come also increased responsibilities, and they should have equal advantages with men to make preparation to meet these responsibilities and to qualify themselves to earn equal salaries with their fellow-workmen. A college graduate stands a better chance in the struggle of life than a person of the same attainments otherwise secured, and the higher the curriculum of the college, and the more extensive its reputation, the better will be the chances of its graduates to secure positions of prominence and profit. This is especially true of the profession of teaching, which profession is the one most availed to women who have to make their own way in the world. All these things prove that our girls should have the very best educational advantages, and in order to secure these advantages, there should be separate colleges provided for them, where they can fit themselves for the duties that life demands of them. Fifteen years ago the State met this demand for higher education for women by the establishment of the Industrial Institute and College at Columbus. Why should not the church recognize the same demand, and prepare to hold our own girls by providing for them equally with our boys? It is stated in the History of Mississippi that the establishment of this separate State college for girls was urged "rather than risk the costly experiment of co-education" at the University at Oxford. This practical view of the question, it seems to me, will apply to the case of a Methodist college for girls in Mississippi. Should co-education be attempted, dormitories for the girls would have to be provided at an outlay equal to that already made for the boys. Then, moreover, such an arrangement would necessitate a delay in the time of opening, as it would require considerable time to get the building ready to receive occupants.

Here is Whitworth College, with her more than two entire town-blocks of grounds, two large brick and three frame buildings, healthy location, an alumnæ of over four hundred members, an existence of over forty years, and a curriculum ranking with that of colleges for boys. What more does she need to make her to the Mississippi Conference what Randolph-Macon Woman's College is to Virginia, except an endowment fund which will enable her president to plan and execute even greater things for the college for the future than she has achieved in the past?

Whitworth College, representing, as she does, the result of the labors and thought of the best years of the life of one who was once an honored member of the Mississippi Conference, should be the pride and glory of the Mississippi Conference.

The present prosperity and outlook for Whitworth, and the improvement in surroundings and advancement in curriculum and attainments she has made during the past five years, should inspire the friends of higher education with confidence to believe that any outlay of means and effort to endow would be profitably expended, should such be centered upon this institution.

Let the Methodists of the Mississippi Conference rally to Whitworth College, and make her for our girls what Millsaps College is for our boys.

ADDIE V. MARSHALL.

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

When I was a boy about twelve years old my good old mother urged me to read the "Memoir of Carvosso" and "The Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul," by Philip Doddridge, and these books begat in me a great hungering for reading on the subject of sanctification, holiness, Christian perfection, or the same thing by whatever name it might be called. Since then I have read every book I could buy or borrow on this subject. Most of them have been wise, and a few otherwise. I think I understand pretty well all the crooks and turns and the cranks in the arguments on this subject. Many true things, and but few new things, have been said on this subject within the scope of my reading for the past forty-odd years. The ground has been so well worked that the chances for new discoveries are few and far between. Mr. Wesley, and others of the old writers, seem to have anticipated the discussions and controversies that would arise for one or two centuries to come. When we come to think of it, men have been trying to "perfect holiness in the fear of God" for six thousand years. There were "holy men" and "holy women" of old long before these controversies began, and in some places many men and many women "leave the principles of the doctrine of Christ and go on to perfection"—"perfection in love"—without ever having heard of any discussions on the subject. The whole thing is so easy and so in harmony with the operations of grace that they would be surprised to know that men and women have differed so widely, and oftentimes so viciously, on this subject. It is not at all needful to understand the controversy in order to attain holiness. Numbering the blessings and staking off the boundaries of each is not essential to the process of being made perfect in love. A theory on the subject hinders more men than it helps. It is exceedingly difficult to get religion—first or second blessing—on a preconceived plan. An angel could hardly forecast an experience. "The new birth" was an insoluble problem to the trained mind of Nicodemus.

The last book I have read on this subject, "Scriptural Sanctification," by Dr. Jno. R. Brooks, D. D., is brand-new, having been published this year. It is Christian in temper and conservative in tone—a sanctified book on sanctification. For this reason, if not for better, it is to be commended. Dr. Brooks seems to favor the second-blessing view of this subject. In this he is in a long line of good and great men. His style is clear and strong. His quotations from other authors are copious and accurate, and full enough to be perfectly truthful and fair. His statements are submitted to the test of divine truth. One need not accept his interpretation of every passage of God's Word expounded in this book. This book exhibits a degree of judicial calmness and fairness that is refreshing in these times of controversy and confusion. Dr. Brooks carries a level head above a pure heart. I do not agree with the Doctor in every statement made, but I found no word that I would wish to eliminate or soften. The spirit of a Christian is seen on every page, and in every line and word. Such a book deserves to be commended and circulated.

GILDEROY.

TWO VALUABLE BOOKS.

This year marks the centenary of Mississippi Methodism, and Mississippi Methodists are reviewing the history of Methodism in Mississippi. This is an opportune time to review the doings of our forefathers, and to recount again the struggles and trials of that heroic band of men and women who planted the first seeds of Methodism in Mississippi soil. Such a review of our history will be an inspiration, and give an impetus to our present work that will be far-reaching in its results.

To anyone who may desire reliable information at first hand, I would recommend the "Introduction of Protestantism into Mississippi and the Southwest," and the "History of Methodism in Mississippi," both by the Rev. John G. Jones, late of the Mississippi Conference. These books will furnish information and facts concerning the introduction and planting of Methodism in Mississippi which, perhaps, can not be obtained from any other reliable source.

It is to be regretted that only one volume of this invaluable history has been published. Two volumes remain in manuscript. What a graceful tribute to the memory of the sainted author it would be for the Mississippi Conference to publish the remaining volumes during these last years of the present century, and thus vindicate the sincerity of the Conference of December, 1872, which, by unanimous resolution, requested the preparation of this history!

Bishop McTyeire, in acknowledging the helpfulness of the MS. of this history in preparing his own "History of Methodism," says, "This interesting addition to our denominational literature ought to be published."

Dr. W. P. Harrison, then our Book Editor, in his introduction to Vol. I., in speaking of the heroic struggles and hardships of Mississippi pioneers, recorded in this history, says, "All these were endured by men whose history can not be lost without damage to the church." The chivalrous deeds of these valorous men are forever lost to the church if this history remains unpublished.

The first volume embraces a period of time extending from 1799 to 1817. A few copies of this volume may be had of Rev. Jno. A. B. Jones, of Magnolia, Miss., and a few copies of the "Introduction of Protestantism into Mississippi and the Southwest" may be had of Mr. R. W. Millsaps, of Hazlehurst, Miss. B. F. JONES.

Hattiesburg, Miss., April 20, 1899.

THE WEST INDIES.

The following are a few interesting facts gleaned from reliable sources by Rev. B. F. Lewis, and read at the Jackson District Missionary Institute:

1. The church at Macon, Ga., under pastorate of Bro. Pinson, pledges the support of one missionary for a year.

2. The South Georgia Conference pledged $800 a year, for three years, to support a missionary.

3. A Georgia pastor pledges his church for the support of a missionary.

4. The Georgia Epworth Leagues pledge $1,000 for three years for this purpose.

5. Mulberry Street Church, Macon, Ga., supports a missionary for one year.

6. A Mississippi layman pays $800 a year for five years.

7. The Allende Church, Mexico, sent Rev. G. B. Winton $36—the amount collected for their Christmas celebration—for this work.

8. A college president in the South offers to move his school to Cuba at the call of the church.

9. A N. Y. graduate of Ann Harbor wishes to establish an asylum for the children of the reconcentrados.

10. This, besides a number of smaller gifts of money, and several offers to go to Cuba as missionaries.

11. At Cienfuegos a lot has been offered for a church-building, and the natives have urged upon us to send missionaries.

12. At Matanzas the government offers to repair a suitable house at the cost of $600 or $700, and rent it to us for $30 per month as an asylum, furnishing medicines and food, if we will take about seventy boys from the overcrowded asylum.

13. At Matanzas we have a night school, with 12 or 15 men and boys; 10 church members, 32 candidates, 20 children in day school and 54 in Sunday-school, and the reports which have come from every quarter in which there have been efforts towards evangelization are most encouraging.

Correspondence.

JACKSON DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

According to the requirement of the Discipline, and in response to the call of the presiding elder, the preachers of the Jackson district, and others interested in the missionary cause, met on the morning of April 19, at 9:30 o'clock, in the First Methodist Church, in the capacity of a Missionary Institute. Rev. T. B. Holloman, presiding elder, was ex-officio chairman. After devotional exercises H. G. Hawkins was elected secretary, and the published program was taken up. J. D. Crymes spoke on "Missionary Workers of the New Testament," emphasizing in a forcible manner the urgent need of the Spirit in those who, at home and abroad, enterprise this great work. A good paper on "Methodism and Missions," prepared by W. B. Lewis, was read, and R. Bradley delivered a splendid address upon the same subject, tracing the history from the time that the Wesleys came to Savannah, Ga., as missionaries to the Indians, on through the achievements and conflicts of the present decades. J. W. McLaurin showed plainly the need of the Scriptures printed in the language of the peoples, if we would gain access to them and save them. H. G. Hawkins talked on 'Our Missions in Asia," using maps of Southwestern Japan and of Kiang-su province, China.

In the afternoon H. C. Brown talked in an interesting manner, showing the need of putting the missionary idea and spirit into the minds and hearts of the children, and B. F. Lewis read a fine and thoughtful paper on "Mission Work in Our New Possessions."

The Woman's Foreign Missionary cause was well represented by Mrs. I. S. West, who read a paper that gave a good resume of their work, and by Mrs. Susie Parker, who, among other thoughts, advanced the idea that whatever departments of the work the pastor stressed prospered, "ministers being flames of fire" (Heb. i, 7). Miss Addie Purnell's paper on Woman's Home Mission work showed that four parsonages were helped in this Conference last year, and ten since the society began its work, five years ago. She asked the pastors to serve as "Ways and Means" Committee, and called upon the 30,000 Methodist women of Mississippi to lend hands and hearts.

T. B. Holloman led the evening rally, and the hour was devoted chiefly to a study of our field in Japan, "The Mission of the Inland Sea." H. G. HAWKINS, Sec'y.

TUPELO, MISS.

The work here is moving on well. This people has done all for us we could ask. We have been on the go since we came, and the Lord is rewarding our labors. The Epworth League is in fine condition. We have one of the best Sunday-schools in the State; well organized, with fine attendance. Congregations large and increasing at each service.

Contract has just been let for a seven-thousand-dollar church to be completed Sept. 1. It will be one of the prettiest churches in our Conference when finished. Have sold the old parsonage since we came here, and contract has been made for a handsome new one to be built on the lot beside the church. We will occupy the new home by Aug. 1. Have received ten into the church, with more to follow.

S. B. MYERS

A RICH HARVEST.

The following dispatch was published recently in the Times-Democrat. We republish it as throwing light upon the methods that have to be adopted by American citizens in order to get what is due them by the United States Government.

"It is estimated that Washington attorneys will clear nearly $1,000,000 in fees in the disbursement of the $3,400,000 appropriated by the last Congress for the payment of war claims.

"One attorney alone, who is well known in Washington as a giver of dinner parties to congressmen and senators, will aggregate in fees nearly a quarter of a million of dollars.

"It is not generally known how much the claimants paid their attorneys, but the percentage is said to be large. Persons qualified to speak say that the amounts vary from 25 to 33 per cent.

"The department is exercising extreme caution in making settlements with claimants. Complete identification is necessary in every case. Auditors Timme and Brown, who have the handling of these claims, require, in every instance, all papers in the case, which have to be obtained from the files at the Capitol. No money is paid to attorneys. The check must be made out to the original claimant or to his legal heirs or representatives."

If I am faithful to the duties of the present, God will provide for the future.—Bedell.

MY WORK.

Not mine to mount to courts where seraphs sing
Or glad archangels soar on outstretched wing;
Not mine in union with celestial choirs
To sound heaven's trump or strike the gentler wires;
Not mine to stand enrolled at crystal gates,
Where Michael chalmers of white coats waits;
But lesser worlds a Father's kindness know,
Be mine some simpler service here below—
To weep with those who weep their joys to share,
Their path to solace or their burdens bear;
Some widow in her agony to meet,
Some exile in his new found home to greet;
To serve some child of Thine, and so serve Thee.
Lo, here am I, to such a work send me.

—Selected.

THUS ENDETH THE CHAPTER.

The former narrative closed with a brief reference to the Quarterly Conference at Lawrence that cold Saturday and colder Sunday, when the Sunday-school was frozen up (or frozen out), and the new presiding elder preached to a congregation of four men, one good woman, and a boy. All got as close to the stove as possible, so that, while there was no shouting, there was no shivering, and the preacher had liberty. The whole day saw the thermometer indicate just six degrees above zero, and the next morning the mercury had run down to six degrees below zero, and in exposed places as low as eleven or twelve—the coldest day recorded in the history of Mississippi, or of "the Nantchee country." But there was the warmth of genuine hospitality in the homes of Prof. Jones (the model County Superintendent of Education) and of Bro. C. M. Wells, where children abound, and Christian grace is manifest.

Mention ought to have been made of the Vossburg and Heidelberg Quarterly Conference, which was held at the latter place on Wednesday, the twenty-fifth day of January, instead of the first Saturday and Sunday in March, as had been appointed. The consolidated circuit wanted to be reorganized, and so the early call was made. The attendance of official brethren was good, but only a few of the Heidelbergers were out to hear the sermon. The brethren were hopeful and cheerful. Three of Vossburg's officials walked the four miles to attend, and one of the brethren carried not only one-fourth of the assessment on his church in cash, but also more than two hundred pounds avoirdupois. Grace, grit, and gumption! Those brethren love the church.

The morning of Saturday, Feb. 18, was the time when "the beloved" reached Pelahatchie on the way to New Providence, the place for holding the Clarksburg Quarterly Conference. Young Bro. Canthen had brought a horse for "the beloved" to ride, as no one was willing to trust buggy, or even wagon, to haul the heavy weight five miles. Not being as young and active as he used to be, "the beloved" sought the aid of a convenient gallery, and while Bro. Canthen pulled on the opposite stirrup, "the beloved," by main strength and awkwardness, climbed into the saddle. The horse resigned himself to the inevitable, and made pretty good time through mud and mire and slush and slop to what had once been the Clarksburg parsonage, which W. P. Jones was forced to abandon, and where Geo. W. Ferrer refused, and properly refused, to take his wife and little children. It was a cold day, and the only chance for a fire was at the abandoned parsonage. A sermon at the church and dinner on the ground prepared the way for the Quarterly Conference, which was attended by less than half of the official members. The grace of liberality did not abound. The Board of Stewards assessed themselves and the others of the 346 members (including three local preachers) only $170 for the support (?) of the zealous and capable young preacher who has been sent to minister to them in holy things. They are abundantly able to pay $500. The willing mind and loving heart are lacking. "They would have made a bigger assessment if Bro. Moore had only 'a been married, and they could have paid him in corn and molasses and meat." They didn't seem to think it might have been Bro. Moore's misfortune, and not his fault, that he was not married.

The next Quarterly Conference was at Rose Hill. The longest way round was the nearest way there. By rail to Meridian and down to Enterprise—66 miles—and thence by wagon over the best road in the district (up to that date) 12 miles to Rose Hill, with Bro. Foreman, the preacher in charge, and Jeff. Davis, a steward. Bro. Foreman and his clever wife managed to make "the beloved" very comfortable that Friday night, but, doubtless, made themselves and more than one of their eight children very uncomfortable in so doing, in that little parsonage home. A sermon next day, and the Quarterly Conference immediately thereafter, and a bountiful dinner at Bro. Davis' home, completed the labors (some labor is sweet i) at Rose Hill. There was a remarkably fine attendance of official brethren at this Quarterly Conference, and acquaintance was renewed with all of them. Especially was "the beloved" glad to meet Dr. Peck, a beloved physician, who had recently been quite ill, but was able to be out to hear the sermon and attend the business meeting. Bro. D. S. Harmon, from Paulding, looked as familiar as he used to look in West End Church, Meridian. He is a worthy successor to the lamented S. S. Cope. An advance of $50 over last year's assessment was made for the pastor's support.

At 3 P. M., accompanied by young Bro. George French, "the beloved" mounted Bro. J. W. White's horse (Bro. F. rode his own horse!), and was on the road across Penantley Creek and swamp, and the other creeks and swamps and strips of prairies that lie—and worse than lie!—between Rose Hill and Hickory, where "the beloved" was due that night in order to preach the next day. The sixteen miles was covered in due time, greatly to the relief of the horse and of the rider.

Gracious was the reception accorded at the home of Bro. and Sister O. Hopkins, whose Christian hospitality had been enjoyed in former years. "The boys" gladly welcomed we also. But how they had changed! The eldest was not at home. He was at the Chicago University taking a post graduate course, and the second has just resigned his captaincy in the volunteer army, and was planning various laudable things for the future. The third one is a student at Millsaps College. Large and very attentive congregations greeted the preacher at the morning and evening services, but the attendance on love-feast was not so good. A few brethren spoke, but only one sister was willing to speak a word for Jesus. Our women are becoming strangely quiet, and not like the Methodist women of other days. The attendance at Quarterly Conference, Monday afternoon, was very good. Notwithstanding the burning of the house of worship at Newton, there was no reduction in the assessment for the pastor's support, and the determination to bring up all the assessments in full. Chunkey was the second pastoral charge to meet in full an assessment made for repairing the district parsonage.

Home Monday, off Tuesday; Hillsboro the destination. Spent the night in the bleakest, barest, and most desolate-looking house in the district—the Hillsboro parsonage. There "the beloved" had the pleasure of baptizing Bro. O'Neil's baby girl, whose arrival in January had delayed the coming of the family till the middle of February.

Off to Oak Grove, seven miles beyond, where the Quarterly Conference was held. A sermon, but no sacrament. An advance of one hundred dollars over last year was made in the assessment for the preacher's support. Indeed, only two charges have cut the assessments this year—Clarksburg and Forest.

Can "the beloved" ever forget the journey of March 10 from Forest to Montrose? He is better prepared to appreciate Agog's exclamation, "Surely the bitterness of death is past." Had "the beloved" not been twice over the roads south of Forest, and twice over those north? So, when they came, not saying,

"Beware the pine tree's withered branch, Beware the Alpine avalanche!"

but: "I am sorry for you. That road is awful!" He only smiles. He thought surely the worst was over. But, but, but! Who ever traveled the prairie road from Forest to Matthews' Hill? Who ever crossed Leaf river and traveled the lane up to Bro. Ab. Carr's? Who ever crossed Turkey Creek and the prairie there by? Who ever crossed from Pineville over to the Raleigh and Newton road? Who ever crossed Talla-hala Creek? Who, who, who ever did those things and survived, without being tired out or "completely flambergasted," as Rufus Choate used to say? Why, "he would be as great an achromatic as a pleonasm in a modern zoological garden!" as an aspiring orator recently declared. An orthodox supper at the parsonage, and a cordial welcome at the home of Prof. Geo. W. Burton and wife, who were known in their wooing days at Binnsville, made no little reparation for the rough roads and weather. The Quarterly Conference was held in Mount Zion Church, nine miles south. Only one church (Montrose) had apparently made any effort to collect quarterage, and a pro rata distribution would not have paid "the beloved's" horse hire; so all the corn and fodder and meat and money were applied to the preacher in charge, and "the beloved" got nothing. Bro. Burton is winding up several years' faithful labor as principal of the Forest District High School. He is a fine teacher and a devout Christian. Cotton was still being picked on the Gammage and other prairie farms in Jasper county.

The trip to Johns, on the Shiloh work, was made by rail to Brandon, and thence with Bro. Frank Robinson behind his sprightly horses. This Quarterly Conference was in many respects the most satisfactory held during the whole round. Three collections on Saturday and one on Sunday did not interfere with the spirituality of the meeting. Everything was in good shape. Neither the preacher in charge nor the stewards had been idle.

Bro. B. F. Lewis levied toll on "the beloved," both coming and going, and the Brandon people (some of them) listened patiently and attentively each time. And "the beloved" had the honor of baptizing Roger Le Roy, infant son of the Rev. B. F. Lewis and wife.

The trip to Decatur was without note, except that the pastor and family have been well sweetened with molasses, and that the congregation contributed more to the Bishops' fund than the whole circuit did last year. An addition was made to the preacher's salary. The first charge on the round to report collections for home and foreign missions and for Conference claimants.

And then came the long, wearisome ride from Forest to Conehatta; thence to Union; thence to Muckalusha Old Fields; thence to Mars Hill; thence to Coffadeliah; thence to Talla-Chulok; and thence by way of Union and Conehatta to Forest—something over 120 miles in "the beloved's" buggy. To Dr. J. D. Langford, F. M. Hester, P. H. Howse, F. B. Deweese and Jno. W. Toles and wives thanks are due for appreciated hospitalities. At Coffadeliah "the beloved" had the honor of baptizing T. L. Mellen Howse (may the boy never have cause to be ashamed of the baptismal name!), and at Talla-Chulok the privilege of baptizing Edgar, infant son of Simpson J. and Mattie Tubby; and John William, infant son of Abe and Lou Golden (Choctaws).

In all my trips I have noticed new buildings, new fences, new clearings, cotton bales under shelter, and other indications of prosperity; in the homes of the people plenty of bread and meat and milk and butter, and almost an unlimited supply of excellent molasses—far superior to what can be obtained in New Orleans. Dr. Langford, of Conehatta, assured me that he had made 147 gallons of fine molasses on less than a quarter of an acre of land, and Dr. Barnes, of Homewood, made 70 bushels of oats to the acre. And if further evidence of the fertility of the soil be needed, let me say that the rubbers which were planted so deep in the prairie soil last January were up by the middle of March! And another evidence is, that in Smith county there are nine candidates for county treasurer, and in Jasper the same number of candidates for tax assessor!

T. L. MELLEN.

"SUCCESS VS. FAILURE."

The question with us now is, Which is the great first principle, philanthropy or the gospel? Which ever is the fundamental principle is surely the preacher's great work, for without controversy he is the leading factor in the salvation of souls. Do we consider morality, intelligence and general respectability sufficient to carry the soul to heaven? If so, professional preaching—a kind of financial agency to draw the crowd and take collections—is the great work of the preacher. I hear the answer like the sound of mighty thunderings from about five thousand itinerant preachers and a million and a half Southern Methodists, as in one voice they cry, "No, no; verily, this will never do." "Ye must be born again;" "born of the Spirit," "born from above." We must have the strong heart of sinfulness changed to the heart of spiritual, fleshly tenderness; a new heart and a new spirit must be put within us, and we must keep our hearts with diligence, for out of them are the issues of life. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness," and "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

Our preachers must keep in touch with the great heart and spirit of the Master, in order to touch the consciences of humanity and help them to the regeneration of souls. He may have talents polished in all the schools; they may shine like diamonds; but if his heart is cold and dead to God and humanity, it will be like a diamond on the bosom of a corpse. Yea, he may have all the eloquence of men and of angels, and if he is not moved by love, he will be as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. Yea, he must preach in demonstration of the Spirit and of power. Jesus says, "Without me ye can do nothing." Truly, the man on whose words is hanging the salvation of the world should be left unhindered, to "hear the word at the mouth of God and warn the people from him." The watchman on Zion's walls, the one who stands between the living and the dead, should be able to speak with no uncertain sound. He should not burn strange fire on the altar. And if this work is so delicate and so momentous that the Lord selects his own messengers and sets them apart to this one work, and from everything else, and the King's business requires haste, and the Lord would have him throw off all encumbrances, not even to carry two coats; and if, indeed, the fields are ripe to the harvest, and while we delay they die, the preacher ought not to be made responsible for other great interests.

True, philanthropy and the gospel are not antagonistic. One can not well do without the other, and the preacher may, in extraordinary cases, help works of charity, and always be in sympathy with them and encourage them.

But this is quite different from being made responsible for several regularly-organized systems of financial enterprise, and being dubbed with failure if he fails to bring them all up in full.

But who introduced this standard in our church? No one. Who advocates it? No one. Who is responsible for it? No one. Well, how did it get here? By the influence of surroundings. We live in a practical age, which, when boiled down to the last analysis, means a money-getting age, and the churches seem all to be affected by it, or they are all failing in conversions, the real work of the salvation of souls, and in material things. I suppose the churches are in better condition now than ever before, but there is a general spiritual dearth. It seems to me that if any church ever was excusable for having its ministers look after financial interest, that our church has been.

Just after the war between the States we found our treasury depleted, our publishing interests, our schools, our church-houses and our homes were in ruins, and our preachers, like heroes of the cross, bravely began the work of rebuilding the waste places, and now everyone who has an enterprise to advance wants the preachers to undertake it, and instead of turning loose when the emergency was over, we have added to the preacher's financial obligations. But surely now we have skilled, consecrated laymen who would be glad to devote their talents to the church and the Lord if we would give them a chance, and they would manage it much more successfully than the preachers, even if the preacher had nothing else to do, for they have been trained to that kind of work, and the preachers have not.

Surely the time has come for us to follow the apostles' example. When believers multiplied they gave the [illegible] tables to laymen, while the apostles gave themselves continually to the Word of God and prayer, particularly now that spirituality has so nearly gone from us. I know there are some preachers and churches who have the same old-time power. God has several thousand yet who have not bowed the knee to Baal, but they have to hide away; they are crowded to the wall. We need to bring them out, untie their hands, give them prestige, emphasis, the preached gospel, and spirituality, before they can be effective, and surely this is a good time to start with renewed energy and life at the close of one century and the beginning of another.

I suggest as our motto something like the following: One million and a half converts by the dawn of the twentieth century, detailed as follows: A scriptural lesson and private prayer daily by every member; family prayer in every home; all our members attending and taking part in the Sunday-school, the prayer meeting, missionary work, and Epworth Leagues, and that we continue earnestly in prayer and song until the Spirit's power and consolation comes back to our hearts, back to our homes, back to our pulpits and churches, until penitents crowd our altars, and the shouts of new-born souls are heard in the camp of our Israel. Then we can stand in the gray dawn of the new century with panting hearts, faces flushed and eyes swollen from a long night of agonizing prayer, yet with a heavenly radiance on our brows, and glory in our souls, as we each present a redeemed soul we have won for the Master; and a shout of victory will girdle the world and reach the skies, and there will be great joy in the presence of the angels of God over one and a half millions of blood-bought souls converted to Christ. Then our one and a half million dollars we have raised for education can be presented to train them for works of righteousness, while the church continues with stronger motives and zeal for the salvation of souls, for this must not be a spasmodic work, but a sturdy, energetical agony for souls until the world has been won for Jesus, and the millennial dawn rings the shout of victory for glory and for God.

(Concluded.)

P. S.—I wish to thank Dr. Black for valuable space in the ADVOCATE, and I thank Bro. Lewis for breaking the ice and furnishing me a springboard from which to dive into the subject. I also wish to thank the brethren for communications of appreciation and endorsement of my position. The Lord lead us all into paths of usefulness, and to the happy home of the soul at last.

DEAR SISTER: As a large majority of the Board favor a change of place because reduced rates could not be obtained to Austin, the Board will meet May 18, in Tulip Street, Nashville. Nearly all the postals have been returned, and all but one think the matter of expense a sufficient reason for the change. This year, more than for many years, there are larger numbers of missionary candidates, as well as two or three missionaries whose traveling expenses to Austin would cost the Board heavily, without the usual reduction. I know all the members regret any disappointment felt by the Austin ladies, who have so cordially prepared for us, but our preferences can not always be considered. Our recording secretary has been notified to do her best to secure rates to this place. The Woman's Missionary Advocate, for April, will contain notice of the change of place, as well as other papers. The preliminary meeting will take place in Tulip Street Church, East Nashville, Thursday, May 18, 4 P. M. Further announcements will be sent later, when I have time to consult with the ladies of Tulip Street. Miss Holding was resting without nausea or fever after the operation on Tuesday (14). Our prayers were answered, and we are thankful.

I must take time to say a word about our work on the Island of Cuba, at Santiago. The school which opened with eight bright little girls, has already run up to [illegible] all of the better class. They are eager to learn English, and learning English under consecrated Christian teachers means learning Christ—the Christ of the Bible.

Miss Haygood's recent letter says she is better now than for two years past.

Grippe, scarlet fever and small-pox have interfered much with some of our Mexico schools, but have not distressed our Boarding Departments up to the present—that is, scarlet fever and small-pox have not. Grippe has been felt by several of our missionaries. Pray for your representatives in foreign fields, and for God's presence especially at our next Annual Meeting, May 18.

Sincerely, S. C. TRUEHEART.

NOTICE.

The twenty-first Annual Meeting of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions will be held (D. V.) in Nashville, Tenn., beginning May 13, 1899. The prayers of a united church are invoked in behalf of this and other meetings, especially the prayers of every member of our auxiliary societies. The members of the Board who go up annually to these gatherings go to worship in the truest sense of the word. They go to praise, to pray, and plan for the extension of His kingdom who said, 'Occupy till I come." They know not when He shall come, but they do know there are many, many places not yet occupied and held for Christ. Yes, the thought of the millions who do not yet know Christ is appalling. Friends of Jesus and co-workers with him, "help these women!"

The Christian Life.

Reproof is not, as a rule, easy to take. Impatience and resentment are often manifest upon its administration. The backslider dislikes to be reminded of his sins. The stirring up of the conscience and the bringing before him his final accountability give him uneasiness. He becomes offended. He thinks it is nobody's business how he acts. He rebels against, and finds fault with censure, whether administered by Christ himself, or by the session of the church, or by the pastor, or by the private Christian. But the properly disposed child of God acts very differently. He feels that he comes short of his duty, even in his best services. He knows that he often deserves rebuke. When given, he accepts it meekly and graciously, and uses it for his personal profit. It is as medicine to his soul, and results in his spiritual health.—Presbyterian.

Seek to save the young and the old. Put away the unbelief that doubts the child's right to salvation, and that which questions the power of God to move the old and hardened sinner. God loves them all. Christ died for all. The Spirit cries "Come" to all. There is nothing too hard for the Father of mercies.—Exchange.

Resemble thunder in your boldness for God and your zeal for truth; but let your lives shine for lightning, and flash conviction in the faces of those who falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ, and as falsely charge the doctrine of God with licentious tendency.—Toplady.

Practice to make God thy last thought at night when thou sleepest, and thy first thought when thou wakest; so shall thy fancy be sanctified in the night, and thy understanding be rectified in the day, so shall thy rest be peaceful and thy life prosperous.—Quarles.

The Lord wants no cowards in his service. He wants men, courageous, strong men, who will stand up for the truth. But there must be no weak and compromising men. Truth must not compromise with error.—W. L. Smith.

Your body is the dwelling house of the Spirit, and, therefore, for the love ye carry to the sweet Guest give due regard to His house of clay, for the house is not your own.—Rutherford.

THE EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE OF THE ABERDEEN DISTRICT.

This body met at Okolona, March 30 to April 2. In the main, we had a good Conference. Many good things were said. A great deal was said about the relation of the League to the church. Some seem to think without the League the church would die. I am in sympathy with the League movement, and look on the League as being a great factor for good in church work. But the League is not the church; it is only a part of the church at work, and a small part at that. We do not believe, as some seem to believe, that the church will die without the League. God is the source of life to the church, and the church is the source of life to the League. From the church the League draws its supply. As truly as life will put on form, so truly the Epworth League is an evidence of the spiritual life of the church. It has been said, and said out, that if the church did not have the Epworth League, it would die, and that the man is now living who will write the church's funeral sermon. This is a mistake. The Epworth League may become defunct as the class meeting has. Something else may take its place; but the grand old church will live on until God shall call all men into judgment. As long as God is in the church, the church will live. God will be in the church as long as there are any good men and women in it, and there will be good men and women in the Methodist Church as long as the world stands. Men can talk anything to death that is dependent upon social life for its existence. The Epworth League is, in a sense, dependent upon the social circle for its life, and, therefore, it may be talked to death; but the Methodist Church gets its life from God, and can not die.

Men speak often without thinking. We hardly think that any candid man would say, after thinking, that the church is dependent on the Epworth League for its life. The Divine Spirit who actuated Mr. Wesley in the formation of the church has been, and is, in the church actuating it in the great work to which God has called the Methodists—that is, the spread of scriptural holiness through the land. To accomplish this great mission, the church is going forward. The Epworth League, being the outgrowth of the spiritual life of the church, is dependent upon it for its supply, power, and existence. It is merely a development of what the church is doing, and yet greater things will be done by the church.

The Sunday-school, the Woman's Missionary Society, the Home Mission Society, the Epworth League and the educational movements of the church are nothing more than the out-gush of the real spiritual life that is in the church, and the church will do greater things yet in preparing homes for fallen women, the outcast, and the homeless children of the world. God wants to save the world through the church, and the Methodist Church offers to the world a full, complete, and perfect salvation to all men through our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Let us not forget that wherever we work, whether in Sunday-school, missionary society, or Epworth League, we are working in the church, and that to glorify God and do good in the world.

APPROPRIATIONS.

MR. EDITOR: If the appropriation to those circuits will develop them, then let us have the appropriation; if not, take them off. Anything for the most good. Those preachers who are serving those mission circuits are true, good men, and are doing their best along all lines. Those who are serving better appointments are also true, good men. In fact, I have nothing to say of disrespect against Methodist preachers, for they are the heroes of this world. Some of them, however, have to deny themselves of this world's goods a great deal more than others.

I wish also to say a few words in regard to partial and to foll collections. Bro. Lewis is a wise and good man—in fact, he came of a family mostly composed of Methodist preachers. Many of them preached the grand old gospel to me in my infancy. Some of those grand old men of God are yet alive, and are fighting the devil on every battle field they can.

Now to the subject: What one man can do all can do, all things being equal; but circumstances have much to do with what we do. I am sure the church puts nothing upon preachers but what is right. I would thank God in my heart if all could bring up full collections along all lines. I am sure there is no preacher in the North Mississippi Conference that does not make a faithful effort to do so. I know one that has spent two fine plantations in thirty years bringing up his collections in full. In fact, when he got all he could from the people, he just went down into his own pocket after the balance. I know one other whose custom has been to get all he could, and then pay the balance out of his own purse. I know one other who has deprived his own family of nearly all the comforts of life to carry up his collections in full. I know one other young preacher, without any family at that time, who served a work four years at a salary of nine hundred and fifty dollars per year, and when he was moved he did not have enough money to pay the freight upon his books. Of course, he carried up his collections in full; but the question of my mind is, Was the work developed, or was the preacher? Many of us have no farms to spend; have no purse of our own to fall back upon. Many of us haven't much salary to draw upon. What can we do but do our best? Get every cent we can; give the tenth of our little salary; ask God for a clear conscience; go to Conference; receive our appointments. Thank God there is no appointment in Methodism I would not willingly take upon its merits without any appropriation; but if the taking off of one denbles another in the same settlement, let me have it back. We will all report collections as full as possible. I want no advantage of any man, but put me on the same footing with all, and see if all men will do the same thing, all things being equal. May God bless all Methodist preachers! I expect to be one until I die.

"THE PASTOR AND THE EVANGELIST."

MR. EDITOR: The indiscriminate charges brought against the evangelists sometimes by an unspiring young brother who thinks he has solved the problem by saying the "chief glory" of the evangelist "is the golf that is in the work for him," are incorrect. Since I am of the evangelistic tribe, I certainly have the right to speak for myself. It can not be proven that I am a Judas. While I was on a circuit or station as a Conference preacher, my only "methods" were to preach the gospel, call mourners to the altar, and then talk to and pray for them. These are my "methods" now. My "chief glory," as settled between myself and God, is in the salvation of souls. I am in the work to stay till God calls me hence. Sometimes brethren write and ask me what do I charge for my services. I desire to inform them through the columns of the ADVOCATE that I have no price whatever on my labors but traveling expenses. Preaching to the poor who have no money is my "chief glory;" but when I go to help some one on a financially poor circuit, without any money promises whatever, as I have done, and in answer to earnest prayer and preaching the work of the Lord prospers in our hands, many souls are saved from sin, and brought into the church, and then the new converts and church members begin to pay up a faithful pastor his money, and to the Conference collections, and, finally, the above persons, together with the other denominations of a community, throw in their mites and make up the evangelist a little purse above expenses to carry home to give to a widowed mother and sisters and other holy purposes—then I think it extremely selfish for anyone to grow jealous, and accuse a man of making money his "chief glory." I believe in every pastor getting who he pleases to help him, just so he gets a man pure at heart, and one that will be helpful to him. This world, church and all, belongs to God. Brethren, let us pray for each other.

"THE DAY WILL COME."

Seers and poets are prophets of a time when men shall learn war no more, when "the swords shall be beaten into ploughshares, and the spears into pruning-hooks."

Tennyson's famous lines announce in sonorous words the time when it can be said that

"The war-drums beat no longer, and the battle-flags are furled
In the parliament of man—the federation of the world."

Victor Hugo takes up the prophecy, and declares:

"A day will come when the only battlefield will be the market open to commerce, and the mind opening to new ideas. A day will come when bullets and bomb-shells will be replaced by votes, by the universal suffrage of nations, by arbitration of a sovereign senate, which will be to Europe what the Parliament is to England, the Diet to Germany, the Legislative Assembly to France. A day will come when a cannon-ball will be exhibited in public museums, just as an instrument of torture is now, and the people will be astonished how such a thing could have been. A day will come when these two immense groups, the United States of America and the United States of Europe, shall be seen extending the hand of fellowship across the ocean, exchanging their products, their industry, their arts, their genius, clearing the earth, peopling the deserts, improving creation under the eye of the Creator, and uniting, for the good of all, these two irresistible and infinite powers—the fraternity of men and the power of God."—Success.

"Observe a method in the distribution of your time. Every hour will then know its proper employment, and no time will be lost. Idleness will be shut out at every avenue, and with her that numerous body of vices that make up her train."—Bishop Horne.

Blessed is the man who has the gift of making friends; for it is one of God's best gifts. It involves many things; but, above all, the power of going out of one's self, and seeing and appreciating whatever is noble and loving in another man.—Thomas Hughes.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. H. S. Jobos, Colfax, La., April 18, 1899: "Just closed a nice little meeting here at Colfax, with the membership greatly revived and encouraged. Bro. Turner, of Boyce, was here, and preached to the delight and edification of the people."

Rev. C. M. Crossley, Vimville, Miss., April 13, 1899: "We came to our work on Jan. 11, determined to do the best year's work of our life, and were executing our determination with flattering prospects; but, alas! on April 1 that dreadful malady, small-pox, broke out in our midst, and at least thirty persons were exposed before they knew what it was. Myself and two children are of that number. Our work has suspended. We are quarantined in and quarantined out. We are quietly and patiently resting and trusting in the Lord to open the way for us to resume our work. Pray for us."

Rev. W. L. Graves, P. C., Tunica, Miss., April 11, 1899: "We have just closed a great revival at Tunica, Miss. Rev. O. L. Savage, of Coffeeville, Miss., did most of the preaching. He deals with the Word, and is convincing. I have not heard a better series of sermons than he gave us. Rev. W. M. Campbell, of Austin circuit, entertained us twice, to the delight and comfort of all. The Holy Ghost was with us in every service for eleven days. Seventeen souls were saved kneeling at the altar. Others were reclaimed, and my whole church made alive. We have had twenty-seven additions, doubling our membership here since Conference."

Rev. H. D. Howell, Natchez, Miss., April 19, 1899: "When I came to Wesley Chapel charge, Jan. 10, there was no home for the preacher, and none projected. I hired a house and began my work. Dr. J. C. Ballard, of Jefferson Street Church, said we must have a parsonage for Wesley Chapel; so he went to work, and now we are comfortably domiciled in a new, beautiful, commodious parsonage, valued at fifteen hundred dollars. We have good congregations, a good Sunday-school, and Epworth League. We need a revival of pure religion, for which we are hoping, working, and praying. Doctor, come and see our new preacher's home, and preach to our people. We feel very grateful for what has been done, and encouraged to work for greater things."

When a young woman starts out in married life with a modest home containing just the bare necessities, she pictures herself in the future the mistress of a stately mansion, possessing the comforts and luxuries of life. In that dreamland of the future there will be rich carpets on the floors, fine paintings on the walls, a magnificent sideboard loaded with silver and dainty tableware in the dining room, musical instruments, books and all that the heart of a sybarite could yearn for, and—a baby.

To either man or woman, all the comforts and all the luxuries of life and all the wealth in the world soon become a bore and a weariness, unless there is a baby for whom they can both contrive and plan and work. A woman who, through ignorance or neglect, suffers from weakness and disease of the delicate and important organs concerned in wifehood and motherhood, blasts all these hopes. Either she will be childless, or will lose her own life in the struggle of maternity, or her babies will be born puny, sickly and peevish and unable to withstand the ordinary ailments of childhood. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription surely and completely cures all these delicate complaints. It is the discovery of one of the most eminent living specialists in women's diseases,—Dr. R. V. Pierce, for thirty years chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. The "Favorite Prescription" acts directly upon the sensitive organism concerned. It imparts to it health, strength, vigor, virility and elasticity. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. It robs maternity of its perils and insures a healthy, robust child.

Best Edition of the World's Best Book

—THE—

"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers. New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$1.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Touch Thou mine eyes, that I may see What Thou wouldst have me do and be.
—Helen E. Brown.

Love is the highest word. It is the synonym of God —Lamartine.

The only help that is beneficial to any man is the sort that helps a man to help himself.—Selected.

To be happy is of far less consequence to the worshipers of fashion than to appear so.—C. C. Colton.

Those that dare lose a day are dangerously prodigal; those that dare misspend it, desperate.—Bishop Hall.

Do not wait for extraordinary opportunities for good actions, but make use of common situations.—Goethe.

Every industrious person should try his hand at something, and, if he does not succeed, he should try both hands.—Exchange.

Old age is lovely as seen in a life of more than fourscore years, brightened by a Christ faith, and rich in peace and joy.—Solon W. Bush.

If I can only place a little brick in the pavement of the Lord's pathway, I will place it there, that coming generations may walk thereon to the heavenly city.—Phillips Brooks.

Every day that is born into the world comes like a burst of music, and rings itself all the day through; and thou shalt make of it a dance, a dirge, or a life march, as thou wilt.—Carlyle.

No angel will come to you except when you are about your tasks. Leave them, to ascend some mountain-top to meet the angel part way, and you will never see him.—Amos R. Wells.

The horse, no sooner is its head turned homeward, than it trots and goeth cheerfully. And shall not we, who deem ourselves wiser than the horse, go to our home cheerfully?—Ivan Parrin.

Get into the habit of looking at the silver lining of the cloud; and when you have found it, continue to look at it rather than at the leaden gray in the middle. It will help you over many hard places.—A. A. Willis, D. D.

They say I am growing old because my hair is silvered and there are crow's feet on my forehead and my step is not so firm and elastic as before. But they are mistaken. That is not me. The knees are weak, but the knees are not me. The brow is wrinkled, but the brow is not me. This is the house I live in. But I am young, younger than I ever was before.—Guthrie.

The greater part of the courage that is needed in the world is not of a heroic kind. Courage may be displayed in everyday life as well as on historic fields of action. The common need is for courage to be honest, courage to resist temptation, courage to speak the truth, courage to be what we really are and not to pretend to be what we are not, courage to live honestly within our means, and not dishonestly upon the means of others.—Selected.

THE GREATNESS OF SERVICE.

The world calls him great who wields kingly powers, or who commands the luxury and splendor of wealth. It delights to honor him who boasts of noble birth and lofty estate, though he may have made a ladder to fame and fortune out of the suffering and defeat of others. Too often we count him happy who is the wearer of proud titles and the occupant of high offices, though in character he may be a knave and in intellect a weakling. The fleshly ideal of greatness is that of being ministered unto, of enjoying in large measure the fruits of the toil and self-sacrifice of others. While men are coming more and more to appreciate greatness of character and nobility of soul, they are a long way yet from recognizing the truth that only he is worthy to be called great who serves instead of being served

The human conception, and the ideal set before us by Christ, are as far apart as the poles. The chief desire of the unregenerate man is to be served. He longs to be able to command others. He delights to be courted, flattered, and favored. The man, however, who has become imbued with the Christ-spirit, finds his chief joy in serving others, in using his time and talents in promoting their welfare. How numerous selfish people are! What a world of trouble they often cause, and how supremely disagreeable they make themselves—all because they insist upon making others minister to them, regardless of their own convenience or pleasure! The man or the child who continually wants to be waited upon, thinking scarcely at all of the duty of serving others, is an intolerable nuisance. It is pleasing indeed to the natural man to be ministered unto, but it is ruinous to the soul.

Christ, the great Teacher, makes the startling announcement that he who would be greatest in the kingdom of heaven must stoop the lowest, must condescend to perform the most despised tasks for others. He gave "supremacy to service and mastery to ministry."

In some degree the Christian ideal has pervaded society and business, but it is far from being put foremost. In the homes of our land is the law of service most frequently and beautifully exemplified. This is one of the principles that makes home life so grand and sacred a thing; but in those households where selfishness dominates the atmosphere, how great is the discord and unhappiness! Cold and selfish as is society, in many respects, it recognizes the beauty and necessity of unselfish service. Politeness has its foundation in the Christian motto, "In honor preferring one another." A true gentleman is one who at all times puts others before himself, who constantly acts unselfishly and generously towards his fellow-men. The more faithfully a man obeys the law of Christ, the more courteous and gentlemanly he will be.

The politician, too, who really has the interests of his constituents at heart, makes ministry the rule of his conduct. He feels that "a public office is a public trust," and in many things becomes the servant of all. More and more the public is recognizing that the spoils-man who seeks an office merely for what he can get out of it is unfit for such responsibility. In all the walks of life the man who is anxious to serve, rather than to be served, is destined to be sought after and honored.

Spiritual development is conditioned largely upon obedience to the law of service. Just as the physician acquires skill in treating his patients, just as the lawyer becomes more proficient with the pleadings of each case, so the Christian, by crucifying self and serving his fellow-men as he has opportunity, becomes more Christ-like in character and richer in faith and feeling. As President Gates has well said: "God has so ordered the social life of our race that no man can make the most of his powers of mind and heart and will until he employs those powers in the service of his fellow-men."

Service of one kind or another is the God-ordained means of advancing God's cause and kingdom. In order that God's love may be known, and his truth may triumph, we are to become, as it were, the servants of all, doing good in his name every day and everywhere.

"To think you can do nothing," says Phillips Brooks, "is almost as presumptuous as to think you can do everything."

There is little merit, however, in favoring and serving merely those who love and favor us. "For if ye love them which love you, what thank have ye? for sinners also love those that love them. And if ye do good to them who do good to you, what thank have ye? for sinners also do even the same." The true disciple feels that he must search out the poor, the neglected, and the outcast, and do them good. Nor should our ministry be confined to a single channel, as is too often the case. Not infrequently the writing of a letter of consolation or counsel to one in need of it proves a blessing of great value. Sending flowers to a sick-room, or making a visit to those in distress, brings hope and sunshine ofttimes into hearts almost in despair. As some one has wisely said, "It is better to put hope into a discouraged man's heart than to put money into his pocket." But it is worse than folly to offer men spiritual aid and comfort alone when temporal needs also call loudly for relief.

Furthermore, not seldom is it the case that Christians ask the Lord to do for his work and for humanity what they ought to do themselves. When a man in a Chicago noon meeting asked the audience to pray that God would help a needy mission to a needed building, Mr. Moody, who was in charge, said quickly, "Brother, I would not bother the Lord with that; I would do it myself."

Though the world is dominated by selfishness and sin, it, nevertheless, treasures the memory of its true benefactors ofttimes during their lives, but nearly always after the lapse of a few generations. The names of noble philanthropists like Elizabeth Fry, Clara Barton, Frances Willard, John Howard, Peter Cooper, the Earl of Shaftesbury, and a host of others, will live and be gratefully cherished long ages after the monuments which millionaires and nobles erect to themselves shall have crumbled into dust. The surest path to enduring knowledge and glory is the renunciation of self and the dedication of one's powers to the service of humanity. He whom the Lord will crown with the highest honor is he who loves and serves his fellow-men most.

AT HAMMOND.

By invitation of the pastor, Rev. J. H. Montgomery, we lectured on Thursday night, the twentieth, at Hammond, La. This was our first visit to this thrifty, enterprising town. There is, perhaps, no town in the State which has grown more in the last six or eight years than Hammond. In 1890 it had less than four hundred inhabitants. It now has a population of nearly three thousand. It has a number of large, substantial, well-arranged business houses built of brick. Its residences are, for the most part, modern in their style of architecture. We know of no town in the South which, in this respect, compares with it. The population is composed largely of Northern people. As a sequence of this, the M. E. Church has had an organization there for several years, while our church did not get a foothold until last year. We now have an organization, but no building. Bro. Montgomery, with the hearty co-operation of his little flock, is working diligently to raise sufficient funds to erect a neat, tasteful house of worship. The lecture was given for the benefit of this fund. Those who wish to honor the Lord with their substance can do so by contributing to this enterprise. Our membership there is small, and will not be able to build for some time to come without aid.

During our brief stay in Hammond we enjoyed the hospitalities of Bro. J. P. Holt.

A NEW BOOK.

THE MIRACLE AT MARKHAM. By Chas. M. Sheldon. Published by The Church Press, 104 LaSalle avenue, Chicago. 320 pages. Price, 25 cents, paper; 75 cents, cloth.

The chief character in this story is John Procter, a faithful pastor in Markham, a small city of a dozen or more churches. Becoming convinced that there is a criminal waste of religious effort through lack of co operation among the churches, Procter leads a movement towards federation, and ultimate union. He is assisted by Dean Randall, an Episcopalian, who is driven, however, to a sudden death through anxiety, by the hostility of his church, brethren, because he invited Procter to preach in his pulpit. His son, Francis, who is in love with Procter's daughter, Jane, takes up his father's work, and William Procter, Jane's brother, is introducing, as a layman, the same principles of Christian union in the frontier town of Pyramid, Colorado. His love for Rebecca Phillips, the only daughter of an Andover theological professor, is an additional inspiration to William. Rebecca had refused to marry William because he was not a minister, and Jane had refused Francis Randall because he was. The interest in the story centers in the way these two girls decided their fate, and the way John Procter realized his hope of seeing the twelve churches of Markham made one.

No man can be an intelligent, earnest Methodist who does not take his church paper. It is our conviction that the spiritual apathy in many churches is to be attributed to the fact that so few of our people have religious literature, but spend their leisure moments in reading sensational newspapers and periodicals filled with fiction. Not only does the church paper stir the spiritual life and quicken interest in the movements of the religious world, but it is an incentive to enlarged liberality and deeper consecration. The pastor who places a church paper—not a nondescript, irresponsible journal that claims to be everything to everybody, but a recognized loyal church organ—in every family in his charge, will advance all the interests of his church as he can not possibly do by any other means. When, on the contrary, a pastor neglects the circulation of his own church paper, and takes no interest in giving his people good and pure literature, we naturally infer that he cares little for promoting Methodism, or even for advancing the cause of Christianity, Next to the pulpit, the most powerful factor in spreading the gospel, and bringing men to Christ, is the press, and every earnest pastor should conscientiously use this great arm of the church.—Dr. M. B. Chapman, in Central Methodist.

PRACTICAL FRATERNITY.

The Epworth Herald of the Methodist Episcopal Church came out some time ago, taking the position that our two Methodisms had an opportunity now to work in some degree of harmony in our newly acquired territory. It suggests that as our church is situated nearest to Cuba, it might be well for us to occupy that island with our mission work, and that the Methodist Episcopal Church could take Porto Rico. This the Nashville Advocate thought a good suggestion. Now we notice that Zion's Herald, published in Boston, comes out and takes strong ground in support of the same position. How the Northern Church generally will regard the suggestion we do not know, but it looks to us as very feasible. If we mean anything by our biennial blubbering over fraternity, we now have a fine opportunity to demonstrate it. Cuba is right here in touch with our Southern shores, and we are the better prepared to occupy that field. The Methodist Episcopal Church is well equipped to take charge of all Methodist interests in Porto Rico; and thus the two churches ought to so arrange matters as not to set up altar against altar in these two islands.—Texas Advocate.

A certain preacher met his presiding elder with evil tidings and ingubrious countenance. "Five of my members," said he, "have joined the Baptist Church." To which the beloved, wise above many, made this suggestive, if not consoling reply: "You have about twenty-five backslidden members who are going to eternal destruction, and you do not seem to be at all concerned about them." And there are others who may profit by the words of this wise man.—Midland Methodist.

We will never have it that God created any man, especially any Christian man, to be a blank and to be a nothing. He made you for an end. Find out what that end is; find out your niche, and fill it. If it be ever so little, if it is only to be a hewer of wood and a drawer of water, do something in this great battle for God and truth.—Spurgeon.

Only one Judge is just, for only one knoweth the hearts of men; and hearts only are guilty or guiltless.—Edwin Arnold.

PESSIMISM.

It is a condition of the digestive system rather than a view of life taken honestly at fair range. It is not a theory of things in the clear light of the past; it is a short-legged look into mud-puddles, with no vision of the blue sky that they mirror. It is deliberately and steadily peering into the thunder cloud and refusing to look at the rainbow over yonder. And so it is the worst possible furniture for one's house in life. There is nothing worse to put into your haversack, brave Christian soldier! Leave it behind with the cast-off rubbish of your last night's bivouac. You do not need it. The roll of the drum calls you forward. We are saved by hope.—Zion's Herald.

No church is a missionary church which does not give regularly to distinctively missionary work, and on a scale which will bear comparison with its home expenses. The real test of the missionary ardor of a church, as of an individual, is not the earnestness of its prayers, or the eloquence of its professions, but the readiness, constancy and liberality with which it unties its purse-strings to the claims of the needy world. No church is so poor that it can not afford occasional missionary collections. We are sure that in the end it will find the promise fulfilled that there is that scattereth abroad and yet increaseth.—The Congregationalist.

About the only decent man the world has no respect for is the quibbler. We mean the pedantic porcupine who never reads an unbalanced sentence in a newspaper without sending the editor a column and a half of vinegar-soaked criticism; who never hears a sermon without going into spasms over some unscientific statement; who can't listen to a plain man talk in prayer meeting without jumping up to correct his rhetorical blunders. We can not hope to learn what part of the divine plan such men were intended to fill until we have heard the latest opinion of science on the mission of fleas.—Bible Reader.

The words of Daniel Webster deserve to be remembered again and again. "Many of the ministers of the present day take their text from Paul and preach from the newspapers. When they do so, I prefer to enjoy my own thoughts rather than to listen. I want my pastor to come to me in the spirit of the gospel, saying: 'You are mortal; your probation is brief; your work must be done speedily. You are immortal, too, you are hastening to the bar of God; the Judge, even now, standeth at the door.' When I am thus admonished I have no disposition either to muse or to sleep."—Exchange.

The church is the world's commentary on the Bible. How important the conduct of the professed Christian becomes when it is considered that he may attract the erring to Jesus by consistent living, or may shut the door of hope in the face of the fallen, when by the inconsistency of his life he distorts the truth of God into a lie.—Rev. Stokely S. Fisher.

We are gratified to learn that Rev. T. W. Lewis, of the North Mississippi Conference, has recovered his health sufficiently to fill his pulpit and to resume his pastoral work. Under date of the seventeenth he writes: "I have received seventy-two into the church thus far. I received fifteen yesterday. We have 216 in Sunday-school." A fine record surely.

Through a letter from Rev. W. C. Evans we learn that at the Sunday night service, during the League Conference at Crowley, the sum of $1,011 was raised for the support of a missionary in the foreign field. Rev. Wm. Rev. H. P. Gibbs, pastor of Main Street Church, Water Valley, Miss., died last Sunday morning at his parsonage home in that city. His remains were carried to Columbus, Miss., for interment. He was a good preacher and a faithful, tactful, successful pastor. He was a man of lovable disposition and unblemished character. In his death the North Mississippi Conference sustains a great loss.

P. S.—Since the above was in type, we have received the following notes:

Water Valley, Miss., April 23, '99.

This morning, at 2:30, Rev. H. P. Gibbs, of Main Street, passed triumphantly to the better world. He went over the river shouting, "Victory, victory!" all the way. A purer, truer man I have never known. He leaves a wife and three children to the church he loved and labored for.

Water Valley, Miss., April 23, '99.

Our noble, true and brave brother Rev. H. P. Gibbs, pastor of North Main Street Church, this city, passed peacefully and triumphantly to heaven this morning at 25 minutes after two o'clock. FIFTH ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF EPWORTH LEAGUES IN LOUISIANA.

Thursday morning, April 20, at 9 o'clock, in company with a goodly number of Epworth Leaguers, we left the Crescent City en route to Crowley. The car was a "special," appropriately decorated with the League colors, flags, etc. At Morgan City, Franklin, New Iberia and Lafayette other Leaguers joined the party—all apparently with one purpose in view, and that to gather and then "scatter sunshine."

A reception committee, with carriages, awaited our arrival at Crowley, and in a very short time each delegate was assigned a home. At 7:30 P. M. a reception was tendered the visiting delegates by the young people of Crowley. Addresses of welcome were delivered by Rev. Percy R. Knickerbocker and Prof. A. P. Holt, these being followed by responses from Revs. Thomas B. Clifford and Fitzgerald S. Parker. Recitations and vocal and instrumental solos were delightfully rendered by many of the accomplished young people of Crowley, Miss Wright's orchestra furnishing music al intervals, to the delight of those assembled. The evening was inclement, the rain just pouring down much of the time; yet, despite this fact, the opera house was well filled with a bright and "beautiful" congregation. Last, but not least, upon the programme for the evening was "refreshments," served by young men and young ladies previously appointed to perform this function.

The evening was indeed enjoyable, and concluded with an ice-breaking, or a breaking down of formalities, the duty of everybody consisting in getting acquainted with everybody else.

The regular Conference session opened Friday morning, April 21, at 10 o'clock, by singing Hymns 7 and 127 in the Young People's Hymnal, followed with prayer by R. C. Grace.

Rev. T. K. Faunt LeRoy was appointed to preside, and he proceeded to call for topics and speakers as per the printed programme, the general subject for the day being "The Sources and Developments of the New Life." The subjects assigned were well handled, and the discussion of them will, we are sure, result in renewed zeal and consecration upon the part of those who were present.

The afternoon session opened at 3:30 o'clock, with devotional exercises conducted by R. M. Blocker.

The meeting was presided over by Rev. J. F. Foster, and the time was consumed in discussing methods of League work represented in the three departments. The session was well attended, and many questions of vital interest were discussed.

Crowley is dispensing an open-handed hospitality, such as she is capable of doing, and for which she has earned an enviable reputation. The stores and offices are decorated with the League colors, and everyone is endeavoring to make the occasion both pleasant and profitable.

The special order for to-night's service is the hearing of reports from the Leagues, followed by addresses on "Christian Citizenship."

We hope to furnish particulars of proceedings of remaining sessions of the Conference in the ADVOCATE of next week.

NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The New Orleans District Conference held its sessions in Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans, April 13-16; S. S. Keener, P. E., in the chair. All the churches in the district were represented by their respective pastors and lay delegates. Plaquemine was the only work not represented in person by the preacher in charge, but a letter was read from Bro. Kent explaining his absence, and giving a most encouraging report from his field.

From the reports made it is evident that the pastors are extending the interests of the church, and are saving souls. The spiritual state of the church indicates that there is more intimate fellowship with Christ sought by the members.

The financial situation is encouraging. There is very little indebtedness on church property, and nearly every work reported some part of the Conference collections taken.

With only a few exceptions, the pastors could report strong, active Epworth Leagues, doing good work.

The Sunday-schools were found to be increasing in attendance and interest.

The Conference was opened by a few well-chosen remarks from Bro. Keener, setting forth the object of the gathering, and desiring that it be made a spiritual blessing to all.

Bros. Skipper, Evans, Wynn, Foster and Fontaine preached strong, scriptural sermons.

Our beloved Bishop, J. C. Keener, was present at several sessions of the Conference.

Resolutions expressing regret that ill-health compelled Bro. B. Wright to give up his work at Burgundy, after such an auspicious beginning, were passed; also resolutions on the death of Bro. L. A. Reed.

The license of L. Freeland Magruder was renewed.

Profs. Chambers and Cisler, of Whitworth and Centenary Colleges, were welcome guests in our midst, and spoke hopefully of those institutions of learning.

W. H. LaPrade, D. D., addressed the Conference on the subject of the Twentieth Century Fund.

W. C. Black, D. D., represented the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: W. B. Thomson, W. W. Carre, Jacob Cohen, David Cable; alternates: F. S. Daniels and E. P. Mackie.

Board of Trustees of Seashore Camp Grounds: H. W. Spear, Dr. R. L. Riley, A. S. Daniels, W. H. Krone, W. B. Thomson, J. A. Woodville, S. H. Meyer and Dr. J. W. Adams.

A spirit of harmony and brotherly feeling pervaded the Conference from beginning to end, and those who were privileged to spend these days in discussing the matters of the kingdom were honored by a vision of the King in his beauty.

Carondelet is the place of meeting chosen for next Conference.

OUR NEW CHURCH.

The corner-stone of our beautiful new church has been laid with impressive ceremonies. The day was quite an inclement one, heavy rain storms prevailing in the early morning, but by 11:30 the clouds began to break, and a full house greeted our dear Bishop Galloway, to listen to an exceedingly eloquent address, such as a Galloway only can give. After listening for over an hour (which seemed only a few minutes) to the Bishop, the ceremonies of laying the corner-stone were completed.

In the box was deposited a Bible, a Discipline, copies of NEW ORLEANS and Nashville Advocates and our various Sunday-school literature, coins of various kinds, copies of the local papers, a complete roll of the membership, names of pastor, presiding elder, Bishop, and also a complete list of all who did work upon the building, together with various and sundry items. Our good Dr. Murrah accompanied the Bishop and assisted in the ceremonies. There were also present some of our neighboring brethren and also the pastors of the various churches in our city. Altogether it was a day long to be remembered in our midst.

The beautiful temple is fast approaching completion, and when finished it will be one of the handsomest churches in either city, and not only an honor to Methodism in our own city, but to our whole State. We hope to get possession of the Sunday-school department by May 1, and the whole building by July 1. Our dear Bro. Mitchell is much beloved by his people and is doing a good work in our midst. Come to see us, Doctor, and we will let you preach in our new house.

A P. S. AND THE EXPLANATION.

P. S.—This may be an item of news: A former member of our Conference, but now a member of the M. E. Church and Louisiana Conference, has been sent up here as a missionary in the bounds of Arcadia district. They have no church nor a single member in this country. We have six thousand Southern Methodists in this district, and yet our big sister of even age must send a missionary among us, and a man that, at the last Conference he attended before leaving us, was complained of by his presiding elder, and barely passed muster. Selah! What shall we expect next? B. T. CREWS.

Arcadia, La., March 15, 1899.

As his remark as to complaint made by my presiding elder affects the reputation of a brother, I feel sure that Bro. V. D. Skipper, pastor of Louisiana Avenue Church—who was my presiding elder at the time—will take pleasure in publishing in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE what my offense was, that the general public may know whether or not I was accused of violating any Commandment of the Decalogue.

F. D. VAN VALKENBURGH.

Bro. F. D. Van Valkenburgh's offense in this case was as follows: Rev. W. T. Woodward was pastor of the Simsport circuit, which included Marksville as one of his preaching-places. Bro. Van Valkenburgh arranged to hold a protracted meeting at Marksville. When Bro. Woodward heard of it, he wrote to me, as presiding elder, asking me to see Bro. Van Valkenburgh, and tell him to call in his meeting. This I did, showing him Bro. Woodward's letter; but Bro. Van Valkenburgh refused, and held his meeting over the pastor's protest. I wrote to Bishop Hendrix, stating the case to him. His reply was, "When Bro. Van Valkenburgh's name is called at Conference, make him answer for his conduct." This I did, according to the law of the church and the instruction of the presiding Bishop.

Bro. Van Valkenburgh was not guilty of violating any Commandment of the Decalogue. If he had been, his character would not have passed at all. V. D. SKIPPER.

CHRISTIAN WOMANHOOD.

BY REV. W. C. BLACK, D. D.

The above-named work has had a sale of nearly six thousand. From the many scores of highly commendatory notices that have appeared in the church papers, we present the following:

"We hope it will be read by every woman in the church."—Florida Advocate.

"It is the best thesaurus of facts concerning womanhood with which we are acquainted. The author has evidently given painstaking thought and care to the preparation of this volume. After showing the degraded condition of woman under the highest pagan civilizations, he demonstrates that it was Christianity that began to raise her to higher levels, and that since the Reformation the good work has been going forward. We wish thousands of women to read this excellent volume."—Dr. C. F. Deems.

The price is $1, and we will send it postpaid on receipt of that sum. But to that select class who subscribe for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we make the following special offer: Pay your subscription one full year in advance, and send us sixty cents additional, and we will send you the book postpaid.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know it.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney poison in the blood is liable to attack the vital organs, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell. Then the richness of the blood—the albumen—leaks out and the sufferer has Bright's Disease, the worst form of kidney trouble. Kidney trouble can be detected although it be slow and deceptive. First, by analysis of the urine; second, by the simple test of setting the urine aside in a glass or bottle for twenty-four hours, when a cloudy or brick-dust settling indicates it.

It was for just such troubles that in His infinite power and goodness the Great Physician caused Swamp-Root to grow for the benefit of suffering mankind, leaving it for Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, to discover it and make it known to the world. Its wonderful efficacy in promptly curing the most distressing cases is truly marvelous.

By sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may have a sample bottle of Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail.

When writing be sure and mention reading this liberal offer in NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes are sold by most druggists. Make a note of the name, SWAMP-ROOT, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and remember it is prepared only by Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

PRICE, $1.50.

This is indeed a most valuable work, written especially for Sabbath-school and Bible class teachers, scholars, and all who feel the need, as it is believed many do, of a convenient and comprehensive volume to which they can at any time turn for information to aid them in understanding and defending the Word of God. It has been prepared to serve in this direction as a manual, to which recourse can be had with confidence and comfort, for explanations which might be found elsewhere, but only after research involving great expenditure of time and means. The author is a man of learning and talent, and has written an eloquent volume. All who read the book will be delighted with it. Read what is said of it by the religious press of the country.

"The work is one of universal merit and contains a vast amount of valuable information."—American Christian Review.

"It is a universal compendium in which may be found explanations of many things and much information."—The Church Union, New York City.

"As an aid to Bible students this is a desirable volume."—The Christian Standard, Cincinnati, O.

This most excellent book we will send, postpaid, for $1 to any subscriber who will pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz., to May, 1900. To non-subscribers we will send it at the publisher's price—$1.50. Address

IF I WERE YOU.

BY SIDNEY DAYRE.

If I a little girl could be,
Well—just like you,
With lips so rosy, cheeks so fair,
Such eyes of blue, and shining hair,
What do you think I'd do?
I'd wear so bright and sweet a smile,
I'd be so loving all the while,
I'd be so helpful with my hand,
So quick and gentle to command,
You soon would see
That everyone would turn to say,
"'Tis good to meet that child to day."
Yes, yes, my lord, that's what I'd do,
If I were you.

Or, if I chanced to be a boy,
Like some I know,
With crisp curls sparkling in the sun,
And eyes all beaming bright with fun—
Ah, if I could be so,
I'd strive and strive with all my might
To be so true, so brave, polite,
That in me each one might behold
A hero, as in days of old.
'Twould be a joy
To bear one, looking at me, say,
"My cheer and comfort all the day."
Yes, if I were a boy, I know
I would be so.

THE POWER OF ENTHUSIASM.

"Men are nothing," exclaimed Montaigne, "until they are excited." Like the new and added power of the young lover to paint in hues of paradise the ugliest object, enthusiasm gives the otherwise dry and uninteresting subject or occupation a new meaning. Dickens says he was haunted, possessed, spirit-driven, by the plots and characters in his stories, which would not let him sleep or rest until he had committed them to paper. On one sketch he shut himself up for a month, and when he came out he looked haggard as a murderer. His characters haunted him day and night.

Courage recognizes the danger and meets it with a serene front. Confidence in one's powers, the thought of the prize to be won, the love of glory and reputation, a knowledge of the means at our disposal, and a faith in fortune, are the considerations which strengthen courage; and, if they are marshaled in battle array and led by enthusiasm, the fears which hover over our path will be routed like flocks of evil-boding birds.

It is this most potent factor that is present in all accomplishment which is of value. Does a speaker thrill you with the magic of an eloquence that seems to carry you out of your ordinary self, and sometimes to lead your very convictions captive? Be assured that it is because the speech is vitalized with the enthusiasm of an earnest belief which knows no doubt or hesitation. It enters into every invention, every masterpiece of painting or sculpture, every great poem, essay or novel that holds the world breathless with admiration.

It is a spiritual power. It has its birth among the higher potencies. You never find true enthusiasm in those people who are always groveling in the dirt at the feet of the senses. In its very nature it is uplifting.

Henry Clay, when speaking in the Senate, forgot himself as completely as if he were a father pleading for his children. On one occasion, in appealing to the President of the Senate, he became so oblivious of everybody and everything but his subject, that he left his place on the floor of the Senate chamber, and by gradual steps came down to the chair of the Vice-President, where he stood appealing to him as if none but the latter and himself were present, leaving behind him all his colleagues, who were watching him and listening to him in silent, but wondering admiration.

It was enthusiasm that led Patrick Henry to utter those patriotic words so familiar to every boy and girl, and the same element made Webster defend right rather than a selfish desire.

It was enthusiasm that enabled Napoleon to make a campaign in two weeks that would have taken another at least a year, or even more, to accomplish. "These Frenchmen are not men, they fly," said the Austrians, in consternation. In fifteen days Napoleon, in his first Italian campaign, had gained six victories, taken twenty-one standards and fifty-five pieces of cannon, had captured fifteen thousand prisoners, and had conquered Piedmont. After this avalanche a discomfited Austrian general said: "This young commander knows nothing whatever about the art of war. He is a perfect ignoramus. There is no doing anything with him." But his soldiers followed their "Little Corporal" with an enthusiasm which knew no defeat or disaster.

The Maid of Orleans, with her sacred sword, her consecrated banner, and her belief in her great mission, sent a thrill of enthusiasm through the whole French army such as neither king nor statesmen could produce. Her zeal carried everything before it. Oh! what a great work each one could perform in this world if he only knew his power! But, like a bitted horse, man does not realize his strength until he has once run away with himself.

Indifference never leads armies that conquer, never models statues that live, nor breathes sublime music, nor harnesses the forces of nature, nor rears impressive architecture, nor moves the soul with poetry, nor the world with heroic philanthropies. Enthusiasm, as Charles Bell says of the hand, wrought the statue of Memnon and hung the brazen gates of Thebes. It fixed the mariner's trembling needle upon its axis, and first heaved the tremendous bar of the printing-press. It opened the tubes for Galileo, until world after world swept before his vision, and it reefed the high topsail that rustled over Columbus in the morning breezes of the Bahamas. It has held the sword with which Freedom has fought her battles, and poised the ax of the dauntless woodman as he opened the paths of civilization, and turned the mystic leaves upon which Milton and Shakspeare inscribed their burning thoughts. Young man, do not fear to be enthusiastic! Believe in yourself, and believe in what you undertake, and you may be sure that the world will respect your enthusiasm.—Success.

NOT SO FUNNY.

In a Pullman car on an English railway, recently, says an exchange, a waggish young man, noticing an elderly gentleman trying to put on a light dust coat, went to his assistance. While thus engaged, the young man observed a good-sized whisky flask protruding from one of the old gentleman's pockets, and thought it a good opportunity for a joke. Having helped the stranger on with his coat, therefore, he pulled out the flask and said:

"Will you take a drink?"

The old man did not recognize the bottle, and, drawing himself up, remarked rather severely:

"No, sir, I never drink."

"It won't hurt you," insisted the wag; "it's the best."

"Young man," said the old gentleman, speaking loud enough for all in the carriage to hear, "if you persist in drinking whisky, you will be a ruined man at forty. It is the curse of the land. When I was a boy my mother died, and the last thing she did was to call me to her bedside, and say: 'John, promise me that you will never touch a drop of liquor.'"

"Oh, well, in that case," said the joker, "I must drink it myself," whereupon, suiting the action to the words, he pulled out the cork and took a good drink. A moment later he dropped the bottle with an exclamation which certainly did not sound like a blessing, and yelled: "Ugh! ugh! My mouth's all raw!" Then it was that the old gentleman discovered his loss, and, to the amusement of the other passengers, said:

"Ah, young man, you will be careful before you take another man's property again. I am Dr. ——, and that bottle contained some quinine and iron for one of my patients."

The young man got out at the next station.—Youth's Companion.

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT,

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will shew their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living

WINNING A SOUL.

It is a wise thing to win a soul, because of the rapidity with which soul-saving accumulates. Sow a seed in the ground, and it will bear thirty; each of those will bear thirty; and each of those, thirty; so that in three generations you can almost count a million. It is impossible to estimate the result of the winning of one soul. The immediate outcome may be but a struggling blade or ear, but ultimately from the full corn in the ear, when sown again in other souls, will come harvests that shall shake like Lebanon.

There was a year in the little church at Blantyre when but one convert was welcomed to the Lord's table, but that lad was David Livingstone, and as he was sown in the soil of his much loved Africa, he has become the seed germ of that mighty ingathering of souls which is being garnered into the heavenly storehouse.

A young Sunday-school teacher, a poor seamstress, one Sunday gave to a rough street arab a shilling to induce him to go to a Sunday-school. That boy, Amos Sutton, was converted, went to work as a missionary among the Telugus, and after twenty-five years ten thousand converts were won in a single year.

There is no work so enormously productive of good results as the turning of a sinner from the error of his ways and winning one soul for God.—F. B. Meyer.

NAPOLEON LOST THE BATTLE OF LEIPSIC because of a fit of indigestion. One dose of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL would have given him instant relief, and the fate of the kingdoms of Europe been decided differently. It is really marvelous how quickly a colicky pain will vanish when a teaspoonful of Mul-en-ol in a wine-glass of hot water is taken. Try it; you will never suffer from colic.

THROW OPEN THE WINDOWS OF YOUR SOUL.

The fountain of peace and joy is in the heart. If you would only throw open your heart's windows to the sunshine of Christ's love, it would soon scatter the chilling mists, and even turn tears into rainbows.

A large draught of Bible taken every morning, a throwing open of the heart's windows to the promise of the Master, a few words of honest prayer, a deed or two of kindness to the next person whom you meet, will do more to brighten your countenance and help your digestion than all the drugs of the doctors.

If you want to get your aches and trials out of sight, hide them under your mercies. Bear in mind, my friends, that your happiness or your misery is very much of your own making. You can not create spiritual sunshine any more than you can create the morning star, but you can put your soul where the sun is shining.—Theodore L. Cuyler.

No task is so insignificant as to be despised, if only it belongs in the line of our duty. George Washington stood bareheaded in the rain to answer the question of an aged negress who had asked direction on her journey. It was a very small task for so great a man; but it was part of his duty as a gentleman of high breeding, and he did it, thereby testifying to his real greatness.—Pittsburg Advocate.

CIGARETTE SMOKING.

Dr. C. A. Clinton, of the San Francisco Board of Education, has made a special study of the effect of cigarette smoking among the public school children of that city, and expresses himself in the following unmistakable language:

"A good deal has been said about the evils of cigarette smoking, but one-half the truth has never been told. I have watched this thing for a long time, and I say calmly and deliberately that I believe cigarette smoking is as bad a habit as opium smoking. I am talking now of boys, remember. The effect upon grown men is, of course, not so marked.

"A cigarette fiend will lie and steal, just as a morphine or opium fiend will lie and steal. Cigarette smoking blunts the whole moral nature. It has an appalling effect upon the system. It first stimulates and then stupefies the nerves. It sends boys into consumption. It gives them enlargement of the heart, and it sends them to the insane asylum. I am physician to several boys' schools, and I am often called in to prescribe for palpitation of the heart. In nine cases out of ten it is caused by the cigarette habit. Every physician knows the cigarette heart. I have seen bright boys turned into dunces, and straightforward, honest boys made into miserable cowards by cigarette smoking. I am not exaggerating. I am speaking the truth, that every physician and nearly every teacher knows."

OUR $1 OFFER.

Much has been said about reducing the subscription price of the ADVOCATE. The only way in which a reduction can be brought about is by an increase in the number of subscribers. In order to facilitate this result, we make the following offer: Until further notice we will take new subscriptions at the rate of $1 for eight months. When seven thousand five hundred new names have been sent in at this rate with the cash, we will extend the time four months longer, thus reducing the price to $1 per annum. When the extension is made, old subscribers will get the benefit as well as new ones, provided they first pay up all arrearages. Of course, no commissions can be given under this offer. Address

HUTCHINS.—We have lost one of our best and most consecrated members, Sister LIZZIE HENINGTON HUTCHINS. She was born near Crystal Springs, Miss., June 10, 1839; married Jan 4, 1855, and died at her home in Lake Charles, La., Feb. 11, 1899. Her husband, one son, two bright little girls, and a host of relatives and friends, mourn her death. She was a descendant of Henry Henington, a Methodist preacher who, in the latter part of the eighteenth century, moved with his two brothers, Thomas and John, also Methodist preachers, from South Carolina to Mississippi. John and Henry settled near Crystal Springs, where they reared large and interesting families, some of whom have been and are the best people of the communities where they have lived.

Isaac Henington, the fifth son of Henry Henington, married Martha Rawls, and five children were born to them: Charles and Henry, now living near Crystal Springs; Mrs. Julia Barnes, of West Lake, La.; Mrs. Annie Reid, of this city, and the subject of this sketch. The crowning work of this good man's life was, perhaps, the organization and perfection of the Henington Camp Ground, near Crystal Springs, which stands a monument to his name and liberality.

Sister Hutchins was a worthy representative of her father in loyalty and devotion to the church, and in the performance of duty. As a friend, she was sympathetic and true; as a wife and mother she was incomparable in her beautiful unselfishness. Her first thought was always for the welfare of her husband and children, counting no sacrifice too great to be made for them.

Truly a good woman has gone from us. We are sad that we are her face no more in the flesh, but we are glad that she yet lives, rejoicing in the eternal beauties and glories of heaven. B. F. WHITE.

LOCKHART.—JAMES J. LOCKHART was born in Copiah county, May 10, 1828, but was reared on a farm in Lincoln county, near where Brookhaven now stands. At the age of twenty-one he entered the employ of Mr. Whitworth, a merchant of Brookhaven, afterwards the founder of Whitworth College. After six years' labor there he went to Mt. Carmel, of Covington county, and engaged in merchandising for several years. Thence he came to Simpson county, bought a farm near Westville, and there resided until death.

He was married in June, 1858, to Miss E. C. Darr, to whom were born seven children, three of whom are still living.

In October, 1875, he was married again to Miss L. C. Fenn, who survives him.

He was a consistent Christian. He was converted at Providence Camp Ground in '75, and united with the church at once. At the next Quarterly Conference he was elected a steward, and until his death he was either steward or trustee, and sometimes both, always being a true friend and helper to his pastor.

As a farmer, he was successful, practicing the advice of the apostle when he says, "Owe no man anything." As a father, he was kind and loving, yet firm. As a husband, he was loving and true. As a neighbor, following the doctrine of the Golden Rule, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." As a citizen, he was peaceable, law-abiding, and public-spirited.

February 22, '99, alone at his home with his beloved wife, without a moment's warning or a groan, he passed away. He was buried from the Methodist Church of Westville.

TUCKER.—JOHN ENONY, fourth child and only son of Louiza Jane Stephenson and Reuben Tucker, was born in Arcadia, La., July 31, 1867, and died of consumption in Centre Point, Texas, Feb. 19, 1899.

His bed-side was lovingly surrounded by her who, about ten years ago, in Vienna, La., became his bride, and five little children whom God sent to bless the union of Minnie McCord and John Tucker. The father, bent with cares and hardships, was also present when the life-spark went out.

A short while prior to his marriage he professed religion at a revival here, and joined the M. E. Church under the pastorate of Rev. W. J. Porter. Since then he has always endeavored to lead a Christian life. His membership was transferred to Centre Point, Texas, where, in the hope of recuperating his health, he went last October.

From infancy the importance of "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you" was thoroughly instilled into his soul. He was always good and kind. He was by nature endowed with a genial, sunny disposition, full of affection for all those by ties of kindred near to him. He was a devoted husband, indulgent and tender father. As a neighbor, he was ever ready to extend a helping hand. He possessed many noble traits of character, and was entirely unselfishness.

How consoling to think he is at rest! His aged father, bowed with grief, an invalid mother who realizes nothing but pain, eight sisters, besides his young wife and five children, survive yet. IRENE B. GOODWYN.

SWINDOLL.—Mrs. NANCY H. SWINDOLL was born to Nelson and Anna Ridgeway in Clark county, Ga., Feb. 14, 1822, and died March 26, 1899, at 8:50 o'clock A. M.

Sister Swindoll was twice married—first to Robert S. McLeroy. To them were born ten children, but the husband and father was hurled in 1854. In 1859 she was married to George W. Swindoll, and became the mother of two other children. In 1872 Sister Swindoll buried her second husband. She was the mother of twelve children, grandmother of fifty-six grandchildren and twenty-eight great-grandchildren.

She first joined the Baptist Church, but after moving to Marshall county, Miss., in 1849 with her first husband, she joined the M. E. Church at Bethlehem, where she remained a member, true in the cause, until her death.

Sister Swindoll was a devout Christian, a true friend to the preacher, with heart, hand and pocket-book open to his wants, and will be missed by her church. She praised the Lord in her last illness.

The last whisper that watching, loving friends were able to catch was, "Bless the Lord." She leaves eight children to follow her to the better land. Loved ones, weep not, but follow the good example of your mother and grandmother until you meet her on the other shore.

E. C. SULLIVAN.

GOODLOE.—Mrs. MARTHA GOODLOE, wife of W. H. Goodloe, died at the home of R. J. Goodloe, March 11, and was buried at the family burial-ground by the side of her husband, near Livingston, on Sunday, March 12 1899.

Sister Goodloe had not been sick long when the end came. She had always wished that her life might end when her activity in this life closed; she did not want to be dependent upon others, and it was as she wished. She had only a few months before broken up housekeeping, and left the old home and gone to live with her brother-in-law.

Sister Goodloe leaves a large circle of friends and relatives and loved ones. She had been a member of the Methodist Church since early life, and was a genuine type of Methodist. She had been a member of Livingston Church since 1866, and many an itinerant has shared the kindness of her Christian heart and home. She was a faithful supporter of the church, and will be sadly missed. I have known her for more than three years, and I never knew a purer or holier Christian. Her life was simply beautiful. May her mantle fall on some one left behind!

J. G. CAMMACK.

Florn, Miss.

CALK.—NANCY E. DURR was born in Clark county, Ala., on the eighteenth day of May, 1819. She was converted and united with the M. E. Church in 1833. She was married to Moses Calk in August of 1839, came to Louisiana in 1873, and died at Pollock, La., on the eighteenth day of February, 1899. Her husband and three of her children preceded her to the "other shore," while six children are left to mourn their loss.

Sister Calk was a Methodist of the olden type, living a consistent life six days in the week, and delighting in the services of the Lord's house on the Sabbath, often shouting along her praises to God. She delighted in all the services, and it was rare to be something serious that kept her away. She was attentive to all in sickness or distress, ministering to their needs as she found it in her power. She served God in his church for nearly three-score years and ten, and when the last conflict came she was ready to meet death. After having those about her sing, "Jesus, lover of my soul," and bidding her children and friends not to grieve for her, she went to see the Savior she loved so well "face to face."

It is good for a man to get alone, and then in silence think upon his own death, and feel how time is hurrying him along; that a little while ago he was not—a little while still and he will be no more. It is good to take the Bible in his hands, and read those passages at this season of the year which speak of the coming and the end of all, till from the printed syllables there seems to come out something that has life, and form, and substance in it, and all things that are passing in the world group themselves in preparation for that, and melt into its outline.—Robertson.

A Great Combine

Trusts and Combines in many lines of production, and controlling the output of many factories, have recently been formed, some and other similar organizations are projected. It is not our purpose to discuss here the influence of these trusts, whether beneficial to public interests or otherwise; but we wish to announce to our readers that which is not prejudicial to any interests, but which, on the contrary, is directly in favor of every reader of this paper.

Capitalized at Millions

WE HAVE ENTERED A COMBINATION

HERE IS THE PLAN

A splendid illustrated MONTHLY, devoted to the cause of Methodism throughout this broad land and called THE AMERICAN ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE, is published in St. Louis, with offices in New York and Chicago. It is the peer of the best of the popular magazines in illustration, literature, and typographical excellence, and is designed to be to the Methodist membership of about six millions in America, what the popular secular magazine is to the general reading public. The Magazine is not a competitor of any of the other Church periodicals; it is general in its scope. It is the ONLY ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE PUBLISHED MONTHLY IN THE UNITED STATES, and occupies a field distinctly its own. Its aims and purposes are of the highest. Its ideals are: THE PUREST IN LITERATURE, THE HIGHEST IN ART, THE NOBLEST IN METHODISM. It is a worthy exponent of the great Church it so ably represents.

Some Opinions of Representative Methodists, North and South.

"The American Illustrated Methodist Magazine should be welcomed by the whole Methodist family. Many a number will contain articles worth ten times the subscription price." —Bishop Charles C. McCabe.

"Fair, sweet-toned, appetizing." —Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.

"Our common Methodism is to be congratulated on this valuable accession to our periodical treasures. I hope every Christian will have this beautiful Magazine." —Bishop John F. Hurst.

"It takes rank with the best for its varied and rich table of contents. A valuable auxiliary to our Epworth League work." —Bishop E. R. Hendrix.

"A periodical absolutely solitary in the field it occupies. It is a joy to the eye, the head and the heart. It ought to find a place at once in every family circle in the land." —Bishop W. A. Candler.

"A gem among the monthlies of our land." —T. Berry Smith, Central College, Fayette, Mo.

W. T. Harris, of Washington, D. C., United States Commissioner of Education, has this to say of a recent number: "It is one of the most remarkable magazine numbers that I have seen for a long time, and I beg leave to enclose two dollars for two regular subscriptions. I congratulate you."

The Press, Denominational and Secular, Speak in Highest Terms.

"A future of gratifying success and large usefulness is assured it." —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"The contributions compare well with those of any other Magazine of the day and its illustrations are excelled by none." —Pittsburg (Pa.) Daily News.

"Interesting and attractive, not only to Methodists but also to the general reading public, for the matter which fills the pages is of a character broader than the title would indicate." —Columbus (O.) Dispatch.

"The prospectus of the Magazine indicates that there is an abundant feast of good things in store for its readers; but the Magazine itself is better than any prospectus." —The Pittsburg (Pa.) Times.

"The scholarship of the Magazine is insured by the editorship of Revs. James W. Lee and Smithall Lacock, who are known and loved in St. Louis and throughout the West." —St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"It compares favorably with the best of them, and is a brilliant success from the beginning." —Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.

"We most heartily commend it to our people as a high-grade periodical, worthy to take its place in every Methodist home." —New Orleans Christian Advocate.

"It will aim to advocate and magnify the things which world-wide Methodism holds in common, and especially to be a factor in the cultivation of fraternal relations between the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." —Central Christian Advocate.

"The letter press is superb, the illustrations first-class and the reading matter thoroughly instructive, entertaining and edifying." —Pennsylvania Methodist.

"A triumph of literary talent and mechanical art." —St. Louis Christian Advocate.

"We welcome it, relish it and recommend it." —Western Christian Advocate.

"It takes high rank with the best periodical literature of the day." —Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

"We cannot but give to the Magazine our best wishes, and hope for it great success." —Texas Christian Advocate.

To these might be added hundreds of testimonials from Church officials, pastors and laymen, North and South, all praising the Magazine for its intrinsic worth and its lofty purpose.

"THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF METHODISM," which is being published serially in the Magazine, is a feature of marked interest, and is alone worth the subscription price; but the History is only one of the many interesting and artistic features of each number.

Every Methodist family should be a subscriber. Its price is so small all can afford it, but in combination with this paper an opportunity is offered to secure both publications for little more than the cost of one alone.

The subscription price of THE AMERICAN ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE is $1.00 a year; the subscription price of this paper is $2.00 a year. We will supply BOTH one year for $2.65 in advance.

This is our GREAT COMBINE—a TRUST organized solely in the interests of our readers, and which they are invited to join. Do not delay.

THIS OFFER WILL EXPIRE JUNE 1.

Take notice that in order to get the benefit of this offer you must first pay all arrearages. In order to ascertain the amount of your arrearage, look at the label on your paper and count the months from the date there given to May, '99. Then send 16⅔ cents for each month. Add to this $2.65.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

A cotton mill company, with a capital of $100,000, has been organized in Shreveport, La.

The Vicksburg electric street railroad opened in that enterprising city on April 24.

There is a crevasse on the east bank of Bayon Lafonrche. It will damage several important sugar plantations.

Hon. Samuel I. Baird, congressman for the Fifth District of Louisiana, died in Washington (D. C.) on April 22.

The total amount of power estimated as necessary for the Paris Exposition is 50,000 horse-power, of which 15,000 is allotted for lighting and 5000 for motive power.

The steamship "General Whitney," which left here, on April 17, for New York, foundered north of Cape Canaverel during Friday night. The captain and most of the crew were drowned.

Ex-Senator M. S. Quay, of Pennsylvania, who has been on trial at Philadelphia on a charge of having conspired with one Hopkins, the cashier of the People's Bank of that city, to plunder said bank, was acquitted by a jury.

David Christie Murray, the novelist, alluding, in the course of his speech, to the relations between Great Britain and the United States, suggested the erection upon British soil, by British subscription, of a statue of George Washington as "a recognition of the honesty of the cause in which America fought against us, and of our eternal amity for that great people."

According to the latest advices from the country, the weather during the past week or ten days has been more favorable for agricultural purposes than it has been at any time since the germinating season commenced. For the first time we have had comparatively warm, growing weather, accompanied by soaking rains. As a consequence, sugar, rice, cotton and the smaller crops have made excellent progress.

It will no longer be necessary to kiss the Bible in taking a legal oath in New York State. Governor Roosevelt has signed a bill to abolish the old custom, which has obtained as long as the country itself. The practice was considered dangerous to health, although Magistrate Wentworth says that he never heard of a well authenticated case of a person catching a fatal disease from kissing the Bible in taking an oath.

The celebrated Triple Alliance, which played so prominent a part in European politics during the closing years of the Bismarck regime, has been practically terminated. There has been no open announcement of withdrawal on the part of any of the three powers parties to the agreement, but the disruption of the pact is none the less complete. The Triple Alliance was the product of Bismarck's fertile brain, and its main objects were to restrain Russia on the one hand, and isolate France on the other.

As a result of his allusion to the conduct of the German fleet at Manila during the war with Spain, Captain Joseph B. Coghlan will, in all probability, be relieved of the command of the "Raleigh." The department is very much concerned over the effect of Captain Coghlan's remarks upon Germany. The German embassy naturally feels keenly the revival of stories regarding the attitude of the German fleet at Manila, the circulation of which were intended, the embassy officials say, to interrupt the friendly relations between the Berlin and Washington Governments.

Under General Brooke's order specifying the uses to which Cuban customhouse receipts are hereafter to be applied, municipalities are to be aided from the general fund when conditions justify such assistance. As the customs revenues for the year ending Dec. 31, 1899, promise to reach $13,000,000 or $14,000,000, there will be money enough on hand to meet the most liberal demands that may be presented by the department commanders. Indeed, if customs receipts continue to hold at the present ratio, they could not only be made to satisfy all the present necessities of an insular government, but also to pay the expense of an army of occupation of from 10,000 to 12,000 men.

It seems now as if the Philippine policy of President McKinley is embarrassing his administration. He is said to have made a mistake in not proclaiming to the Philippines that the United States would not seek to retain possession of the islands after a stable government had been established. It was also stated at that time that the United States could not conquer the Filipinos without the expenditure of a great amount of life and money. These predictions are about to be verified. One general states it will take 100,000 men to subdue the Filipinos; another, 50,000. They have been defeated over and over again, driven into the jungles, their towns taken, but once left alone, they spring up from the ground.

At the Capitol.

I am in my seventy-third year, and for fifty years I have been a great sufferer from indigestion, constipation and biliousness. I have tried all the remedies advertised for these diseases, and got no permanent relief. About one year ago, the disease assuming a more severe and dangerous form, I became very weak, and lost flesh rapidly. I commenced using Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir. I gained twelve pounds in three months. My strength and health, my appetite and my digestion were perfectly restored, and now I feel as young and vigorous as I ever did in my life.

WINONA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

CHANGE OF DATE.

The time for the Winona District Conference has been changed so as to include the second Sunday in May, instead of the third Sunday, as heretofore announced. This change was made in order to secure the attendance of Bishop Galloway. The Bishop will deliver an address on "Twentieth Century Education," and will preach on Sunday.

Bro. W. S. Shipman, P. E., will hold the Missionary and Educational Institute on Wednesday, May 10, and Thursday, May 11, will be observed as Epworth League and Sunday-school Day. The District Conference will convene on Friday, May 12. Let all concerned note this change of date.

I am just in receipt of a letter from one of the most progressive young preachers of the North Mississippi Conference, in which he says: "You can depend on me to preach, pray, sing, talk and write education. I believe in it. We will observe Education Day here, and at each church, until all shall hear of the great purpose in view. Then I will write to each individual member, and leave no stone unturned."

A like enthusiasm and activity on the part of all will work wonders, and will make the first Sunday in May a day never to be forgotten. The brother above referred to says, "Pray for me on Education Day."

Dear brethren, let us all be much in prayer, as well as tireless in energy. Let every preacher in Mississippi know that at least one is engaged in earnest prayer for their success in the work of the ministry, and that one will remember them in special prayer on Sunday, May 7. J. R. BINGHAM.

Carrollton, Miss., April 25, 1899.

NOTICE.

Will all the brethren who intend coming to the District Conference, to be held here May 21-28, please oblige me by furnishing me with such information at once? I hope Centenary College will send a representative, and will notify me beforehand. We hope all the preachers will bring their best revival sermons. I hope the brethren will give this matter their earliest attention. We are planning for a great time in Lecompte at our District Conference. Bishop J. S. Key is to lead us.

W. T. WOODWARD, P. C.

Lecompte, La., April 17, 1899.

INFORMATION FOR THE PREACHERS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

DEAR BRETHREN: The treasurer of the General Board of Missions prefers that you send remittances for missions through me, the treasurer of your Conference Board. It saves him much work in bookkeeping to receive your money through one man only, and also other expense and labor. If you send me exchange, money order, or register, it is all right; but it is better still to send me your personal or individual check, as my banker charges nothing for collecting them, and I send my individual check to Mr. J. D. Hamilton, Treasurer, and he has them collected without charge.

Having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, and desiring to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who wish it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail, by addressing, with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 820 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

AS WE SOW.

We shape ourselves the joy or fear
Of which the coming life is made,
And fill our future's atmosphere
With sunshine or with shade.

The tissues of the life to be
We weave with colors all our own,
And in the field of destiny
We reap as we have sown.

A BOUNDLESS OPPORTUNITY.

The following letter from Mr. Elmer E. Hobbard, of Matanzas, Cuba, can not bnt appeal to the sympathy of onr people. As we have before stated, Mr. Hubbard is a consecrated layman working in connection with our mission in Cuba, and any assistance given this heroic worker in his noble effort to rescue the destitute and orphan children will be most worthily bestowed. Let every one give something for these little ones whose very existence is dependent upon such free-will offerings as may be sent Mr. Hubbard. Food, clothes, or money—any or all can be used. This work has no appropriation. It is as much a work of faith as was that of George Muller. May God use us to honor this brother's faith!

212 Velarde St., Matanzas, Cuba.

DEAR DR. LAMBUTH: This has been indeed a Good Friday. A widow and her four boys, another boy with no mother and with a sick father, and a little fatherless, motherless girl—all of them about as destitute as it is possible for human being to be and live—have been given a home, and we have promised to take four more boys to-morrow. On the same day word has come that the Eighth Massachusetts Volunteers, who are getting ready to go home, are going to leave a supply of cots and other outfit sufficient for thirty or forty boys, and we can have these things if we need them. As yet, we have not a chair in the house, but sit on empty boxes, and we have no table or other article of furniture, except what our own hands have made, our cots costing us about fifty cents apiece for the material. Still, we are as happy and as comfortable as we would be if we had the most costly furniture.

The authorities have decided to let the Catholics keep all the children they now have; so we are laying our own foundation, and expect to build thereon. A week ago to-day I rented for $12 a month a house that will accommodate 12 or 15, and perhaps 20, and the indications now are that before the end of the month this house will be too small for us. The opportunity for doing the Master's work in caring for the destitute women and children in this island seems almost limitless. Let us pray that the men and the means may measure up to the opportunity.

LATER.—There are now 13 of us, and we expect three more to-day. Many more have applied, but we tell them they must wait till we get a larger house. We are planning now to get a house that will accommodate at least 50. It ought to be 100. The number will soon be that if we get the help and encouragement from America that we need. All applicants are referred to Mrs. Alfonso, who is a most valuable worker in this mission. She is well acquainted in Matanzas, and knows, or can find out, who are most needy.

Our daily food now is about as follows: 2 pounds of wheat, 8 cents; 4 pounds of rice, 16 cents; 1½ pounds of beans, 8 cents; 3 pounds of sweet potatoes, 5 cents; 5 pounds of bread, 25 cents; tomatoes, 3 cents; ½ pound of sugar, 4 cents; ½ dozen oranges, 18 cents; lard and oil 5 cents; 1 can of condensed milk, 15 cents, and coffee, 5 cents—about $1 American money a day for thirteen. The wheat and beans I brought with me from New York. We parch the wheat and grind it in a coffee mill. If I had a little time, I could figure out the above bill of fare, to see if it meets the scientific requirements as to the amount of the various food elements required, but I know without any computation that our food seems to satisfy us, and that is the important thing.

It is reported that the United States Government is going to stop issuing rations, and I do not know whether we shall be able to get anything in that way or not. Anyway, we shall have to depend sooner or later upon private contributions to sustain this work. There are unused articles in many American homes which would be very valuable to us if we had them here. And often people at home have an opportunity to buy remnants of cloth and other things at a reduced price, while we have to buy them at a high price here. We need a large supply of light clothing for women and children, and some clothing for men; a supply of blankets, or something to spread on our cots; sheets; and if we had pillows, pillow cases, towels, handkerchiefs, and soap. Our supply of wheat will soon be gone, and as it is not in the market here, we ought to have some sent to us. We ought to have something like a coffee roaster for parching the wheat, and a large mill, such as grocers use for grinding coffee, to grind the wheat. Perhaps other articles of food may as well be bought here, unless it is rice. We do not want to have to pay heavy transportation charges. Would it not be well, say, for the presiding elder of a district to appoint some one to whom contributions may be sent, and then all contributions from each district could be sent in one consignment, and expense of sending would be less? Perhaps you could get reduced rates from the transportation companies. There is little danger of too much being sent, for if we receive more than we need in Matanzas, the surplus can go to some of the other many needy places in the island. For our table we shall need more spoons. Such as are sold in the States for ten or twenty cents a dozen are all right. There are, no doubt, a number of other things that I do not think of now that we shall need—carpenters tools, garden tools, and the things needed for hair-dressing, tailoring, dress-making, etc., besides the many little things that are needed about a home, and we shall need some money to buy the needed things that are not sent to us.

Chaplain Sanders, of the Eighth Massachusetts Volunteers, who has taken an active interest in our work, expects to remain in Matanzas two or three weeks after his regiment leaves. With his help we expect to form an organization to have charge of our work for widows and orphans, and, perhaps, we shall have it incorporated. For the present contributions may be sent to Rev. H. W. Baker, 56 Contreras street, Matanzas. United States postal money orders are cashed here, as are also drafts on New York. Care should be taken to put a five-cent stamp on letters, as a two-cent stamp means an additional six cents here. Some of our missionaries have to pay several dollars a month for "postage due."

One of our greatest needs is more men and women. I ought to have at least one man and one woman immediately to help me; more would find plenty to do. Those who come must be willing to live very simply, and, perhaps, with self-denial. I think there is little danger to health in this climate if one uses only simple, wholesome food, and takes other necessary precautions. I think I am improving in health and strength each day. I know that you are praying for us, and I know, too, "faith is better than funds."

Ever sincerely yours,

ELMER E. HUBBARD.

Having known Mr. Hubbard for over fifteen years, both in Japan and in Cuba, I can endorse him as being in every way worthy of confidence. His method of work has the cordial approval of Bishop W. A. Candler, who is in charge of the Cuba Mission, and his self-denying, devoted efforts in behalf of these destitute children should have the hearty support of the people of the United States. Funds or donations may be sent to Rev. H. W. Baker, as indicated above, or to J. D. Hamilton, Treasurer of the Board of Missions, M. E. Church, South, Nashville, Tenn. They will be acknowledged and forwarded at once.

CALIFORNIA LETTER.

BY REV. W. P. ANDREWS.

My last communication to the ADVOCATE was written about the first of January. I reported the falling of much-needed, refreshing showers. Then followed a period when the clouds withheld the rain, and great fears were entertained of another dry year; but in the niche of time the "latter rains" began to fall in copious showers, and continued until all parts of our territory had been visited. Since then the voice of the croaker has ceased; grain, grass, fruits and flowers have grown luxuriantly, and all nature has rejoiced.

Best of all, showers of grace have fallen. Our District Conferences have been held. Being Conference Secretary of Missions, in the interest of the cause I attended them all. It was good to be there. After mingling with the brethren in these gatherings, and listening to their reports, I consider the outlook for our church in California more hopeful than since the beginning of our controversies, a quadrennium ago.

A number of revivals were reported, in some the pastor being assisted by an evangelist, in some by brother pastors, while in others no outside aid was called in, the pastor doing his own preaching. Each pastor was governed by circumstances and his own judgment; upon occasion, no doubt, availing himself of the wise counsel of his presiding elder. I believe, therefore, we may consider the evangelist question settled, and settled as it should have been before any ill-feeling among brethren was aroused. I believe we have with great unanimity, and yet without consultation, come to the conclusion that no evangelist who speaks evil of the church, its ministers and institutions, will be welcomed to any of our charges. Mercenary evangelists are not likely to trouble us any more, as the shekels are no longer poured lavishly into their laps.

The preaching at all the Conferences was good, and it seemed to me more spiritual than usual. The office and work of the Holy Ghost was emphasized, but not in controversy. Indeed, I heard but one controversial sermon, and that was against the doctrine of depravity. The brother who delivered it is an able preacher and sweet-spirited pastor. This subject is his hobby, however, and ride it he will. Perhaps he will tire of it after awhile.

The subject of missions was given the right of way at all the Conferences. The missionary spirit is evidently growing among us. As our temporalities return to their normal state I expect largely increased contributions to this cause. More and more attention is also being given to the heathen in our midst. Many of the hitherto skeptical have been forced to admit that the gospel is capable of saving a Chinaman or a Japanese, even in America. The Chinese and Japanese night schools, conducted under the auspices of the W. H. M. Society, are doing good, though the fact that these people are migratory, and we have no churches among them, prevent us from realizing how much good they do accomplish. My own experience with the Japanese in Oakland convinces me that they are not more difficult, but really less difficult to bring to Christ than gospel-hardened Americans.

Mr. Moody spent a few days with us recently. I had never heard him before. He has the ear of this people as no other man has. No house in the city would begin to hold the crowds that flocked to hear him. Standing room was at a premium long before the hour appointed for each service. He is thoroughly orthodox, and shows no quarter to modern higher critics and other real enemies, though pretended friends to the truth. His visit was needed to counteract the teachings of our liberal clergy. There are several such in these parts. They are not Methodists, though, I would have you know. Methodism stands by the old Bible, and it is to be hoped will ever do so.

In visiting the District Conferences I covered most of our territory. The climate and scenery, as I found them at this season, are unsurpassed. It is certain that I never witnessed the like east of the Rockies. Come, Mr. Editor, and see for yourself.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolutions asked by the Grenada District Conference to be published in our Conference organ:

Whereas, A movement is being made which has for its purpose the removal of the Grenada College from Grenada to Oxford; therefore, be it

Resolved, That only the North Mississippi Conference has power and authority to make such removal, and that no legal or binding arrangement or proposition can be made by other than the Conference itself.

Resolved, Unless Oxford, on account of its advantages and surroundings, is a better place for the school than is Grenada, the removal should not be made.

Resolved, The liberality of the citizens of Grenada toward the establishment, improvement and maintenance of said school entitles Grenada to credit and consideration.

Resolved, If Oxford is not a better place for the school, in a matter of so much importance—the establishment of a great institution of learning—the consideration of a few thousand dollars should not be allowed to influence and control.

Resolved, This question should be settled on its merits, after a fair and impartial investigation.

Resolved, That publicity be given to these resolutions through our Conference organ.

A STATEMENT.

We, the members of the Grenada District Conference, assembled at Tuscumbia, hasten to give expression of sincere grief and sorrow at the death of our brother and fellow laborer in the cause of Christ, the Rev H. P. Gibbs. In his death the whole church suffers a loss; but we are glad to publish to the world that he died as he lived—in the defense of the truth—and was a conqueror to the end. His death was made inexpressibly sad by the fact that he was barbarously assaulted on the streets of Water Valley, April 3, 1899, and violence done his person in a professedly civilized commonwealth. After this the outrageous attempt was made in the courts to blacken his character by charging him with malicious and slanderous utterances to injure the business of the parties who assaulted him. These men invoked the protection of that law for their business, which law they had grossly and cruelly defied in assaulting his person.

The conduct of the papers of Water Valley has been strange in keeping silence in regard to this shameful wrong done a man of God. We claim there should have been prompt and brave denunciation by these papers of the wrongs done Bro. Gibbs.

We here tender our deep, heartfelt sympathy to the grief-stricken wife, children and kindred, and pray the sustaining grace of God to abide with them in their great affliction and sorrow.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Jackson, La., EDITOR.

Being obliged to leave the Louisiana Epworth League Conference in midst of the session we clip from the reports of the duly appointed correspondents as they appeared in the New Orleans daily papers.

The number of delegates in attendance was about a hundred.

Following are the regularly appointed committees:

On Nominations—Rev. F. S. Parker, Prof. T. Carter, Tudor Carre, A. P. Holt, Miss Mamie Dosen.

On Programme—Rev. W. H. LaPrade, Rev. J. M. Henry, Rev. John F. Foster.

On Resolutions—Rev. T. B. Clifford, W. M. Mason, Rev. T. K. Faunt LeRoy, A. S. Daniels, Rev. P. R. Knickerbocker.

Executive Committee—Rev. R. H. Wynn, Rev. Geo. D. Parker, Rev. T. B. Clifford, Rev. P. R Kolokerbocker, F. E. Higbee.

State Treasurer Rev. P. O. Lowrey made his report, which shows that $429 94 has been made on a pledge of $450, made at the last Conference for the support of Mrs. W. B. Nance in China. President Ahrens stated that there was a small deficit, which should be paid before the report is adopted. The twenty dollars needed was quickly raised.

The following officers were elected for the year: Rev. H. H. Ahrens, of New Orleans, president; Prof. A. P. Holt, of Crowley, vice-president; Miss Birdie Edwards, of Mansfield, secretary; A. S. Daniels, of Algiers, treasurer.

After considerable discussion and a hot contest between New Orleans delegates, Arcadia was selected as the next meeting-place for Conference.

On Sunday every church in town was filled by League representatives, who preached to large audiences. The morning services at the M. E. Church, South, were very interesting. A League prayer meeting which filled the church was held in the afternoon. One of the strongest addresses of the Conference was made upon "The Twentieth Century Movement in Methodism," by Prof. Thos. Carter, of Tulane University. He spoke of the past, of the grand achievements of Methodism, but that we were living in the grandest century that had ever blessed the world, and a grander one is at the door. The whole Christian world is roused by the calls of China, Mexico, Corea, India, and Cuba. "Our General Conference last May," he said, "pledged us to great things, and by the grace of God we will respond."

The following resolutions were adopted by the Conference:

First—That the Louisiana State Epworth League was unalterably opposed to Sunday trade, Sunday newspapers, and other institutions that involve the desecration of the Sabbath.

Second—That they oppose with all their influence all mob violence.

Third—That they renew their opposition to the open saloon and social drinking, which is the source of so much evil and leads to many evil influences, and that they lend their aid and every effort to prevent traffic in intoxicating liquors.

The last services of the Epworth Leaguers were last night devoted to listening to addresses delivered by Rev. R. H. Wynn, of Algiers, and Rev. P. L Cobb, of Nashville. The services were truly, as designated on the programme, a grand missionary rally, and if the devoted missionaries to the far East could have been present last night, and seen and listened to the grand and noble efforts that are being made to keep them in the field of triumph for Christianity, their hearts would respond to the aid of the Epworth League by redoubled energy for the cause which they espouse.

The large edifice of the M. E. Church, South, was thronged. Not only was standing room at a premium, but a vast number were unable to gain admittance.

Rev. Cobb's fine work in the field of Christianity is the obtaining of aid towards carrying on missionary work. He is a young man, and devoted to his labors; a brilliant and enthusiastic speaker. He brought forth from the Leaguers and individuals in the audience, by his eloquence and pleadings for the cause of those who are sacrificing their lives in the homes of the heathens, a hearty response. His aim was to raise $1,000. The result of his work shows he did not overestimate the generosity and interest of the Leaguers and people of Crowley in the grand and noble work that he undertook, at this time, amongst them. The subscriptions were as follows: Arcadia League, $31; Crowley Senior League, $199; Mansfield Junior and Senior, $70; all the New Orleans churches, $482; Jackson, $25; First Church, of Shreveport, $125; Texas Avenue Church, Shreveport, $25; Baton Rouge, $30; Jennings, $10; Morgan City, $15; Eunice, $10; Branch, $15; Lake Arthur, $10; Bayou Lachute, $12.

In addition to $1,000 asked for by Rev. Cobb, he wanted one missionary to volunteer, and his request was answered by W. H. Ney, of Lake Arthur.

The League Conference this year has been the best held in the State, both in numbers and the amount of good work done. The delegates go forth better able to push Christian work.—Picayune, April 24.

MISSISSIPPI STATE LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

The program for our State League Conference is nearly completed, and we hope to have it out by the first of May. We are sparing no effort by way of making this fifth State League Conference a great meeting, and we have every reason to believe it will be the greatest gathering of young Methodism ever held in our State. The very best speakers have been secured for the occasion, and Leaguers from every district in the State will take part in our School of Methods. Plans are now on foot to secure a choir of 150 of the best voices that can be furnished by the Leagues of the State. Right here I must insist upon the preachers, League presidents and secretaries giving prompt attention to my communications to them. The King's business requires haste, and the work has already been greatly retarded by persons delaying to answer our letters. It is impossible for us to promote the State work without co-operation along this line. However, great interest is being manifested in regard to the music, and, with Mr. W. A Hemphill as director, I'm certain this part of the Conference will be a glorious success.

The railroads have given us one and a third rates, and the Conference will be held in a church with the capacity of seating 1 300 persons. Let us go into West Point, at least, one thousand strong.

Mississippi Leaguers, awake! Let us rally our forces and go forth to this Conference a mighty army, prepared to help turn the world toward God. Let us conquer the fair city of West Point during our sojourn there "All for Christ." Let us press forward to the very front of the fight in this great warfare against sin and death. Let us not go up to this State Conference, either, without paying our vows unto the Lord. The money we pledged for Dr. and Mrs. Fearn and the Orphans' Home at Water Valley is needed. The manager of the Home has been quite ill, and consequently the money is much needed there. I urge that you do not delay this matter till the time for our Conference arrives. A resolution was passed at the Meridian Conference requiring that the five-cent assessment for defraying expense of State Conference be paid beforehand. We are necessarily incurring a good deal of expense; so please give this matter prompt attention.

WHEN I AM DEAD.

When I am dead
Forgive—oh, this I pray for more than all—
The anguish I have caused, the deeds beyond recall.
Think kindly of me, as I lie so still,
So poor a subject for an angered will.
[illegible]
spoken.
Of hearts bound up, I found all sad and broken.
Think kindly, when this last rest is mine,
And gaze upon my form with looks benign
When I am dead.

PERSONAL REMINISCENCES OF REV. ROBT. B DOWNER.

After an active ministry of forty years the Bishop and cabinet, at last session of the Mississippi Conference, decided that, owing to my increased deafness the past twelve months, it would be best for the people that another should perform my work in the future. Bishop Galloway kindly gave me permission to make a parting address, and the brethren, by resolution, were pleased to order for publication in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE the substance of said address for the benefit of those not present. I would much prefer to be silent, but can not, without showing disrespect to the wishes of Conference. This is my apology for that which follows.

Before my birth, Feb. 28, 1838, my father had imbibed the views of infidelity from reading Tom Paine's books. My mother was a Baltimore Roman Catholic. During a short residence of my parents in Quincy, Ill., they kept a hotel. One Saturday night two Methodist preachers, en route to Conference, unwilling to travel on Sunday, applied for entertainment. My mother was exceeding ill, she thought, nigh unto death. These itinerants, not seeing any hostess, inquired of father if he was a married man, and being informed that the wife was exceeding ill, they revealed their calling as that of Methodist ministers, and ready to render service at the sick-bed, if desired. My father thought to cool their ardor by replying, "Mrs. Downer is a Roman Catholic." The rejoinder was, "That makes no difference to us." Father then said, "I will consult with her, and learn her pleasure." Mother, at mention of the presence of ministers of God in the house, was filled with hope for her soul, as at that time there was no priest to be had anywhere near to administer "extreme unction." She requested that the ministers be admitted to her room. The names of these men of God I do not know; suffice to say, they were soul-hunters, filled with zeal and love for Christ. Mother had never seen a Methodist preacher before, and she was amazed at their heart-searching questions as to her regeneration and hope of eternal life. She confessed her ignorance of all these things, and became convicted that the Roman Catholic faith gave no comfort in that dark hour. They read in the Bible, sang some soul-stirring Methodist hymns; then lead in prayer—such prayer as mother had never dreamed of, much less heard. The Holy Ghost did his work, opened the eyes of the blind, and brought peace to the soul of the invalid one. From that hour till death mother lived near the Lord, and a vow was made that if her unborn child was a male, she would consecrate him wholly unto the service of the Lord. I happened to be that child, and at my birth shortly after, in the town of Evansville, Ind., on being told I was a boy, replied, "He is not mine, but the Lord's, and God has given me the assurance that he will live to manhood, and I shall live to hear him preach the gospel."

My earliest recollections are connected with our home in Hawesville, Hancock county, Ky. As early as three or four years of age I recall great reverence for God and determination to be a missionary to the Tonga Islands. At about four years of age I was brought home one day nearly drowned. Mother was not alarmed. She said, "He will not die now," and began my resuscitation to life. Those standing near saw no reason for encouragement, but her calm faith in God's promise, as related above, stimulated their aid, and I was soon out of danger.

When about five years of age my parents moved to New Orleans, La., as a permanent home. Father had been converted while living in Kentucky under the ministry of the noted evangelist, Rev. Newland Moffit. At about the age of six yellow fever marked me as a victim. Drs. Eddy and Warren Stone were the medical attendants, and in due time pronounced my case hopeless. Mother calmly said: "Well, gentlemen, I suppose, then, that any treatment I may see fit to use will not be disap- [illegible] die." Their reply was, 'You can do as you please; he will be dead in the morning." My mother, while managing a boarding house with nigh unto one hundred boarders, always had a closet for secret prayer, and daily found time to use it. To that closet she went, and laid the whole matter before the Lord, and came out of it triumphant in faith of my recovery. She proceeded to work with me as she felt moved to do, and by next morning, when Dr. Eddy, who was a boarder, came in expecting to see a corpse, he was surprised to find me alive and out of danger. Mother always affirmed that prayer and the Lord did the work.

My boyhood days being spent in New Orleans, I had ample opportunity to be like a majority of boys, disobedient and wicked; but with such a mother, how could I go astray? In the year 1846 war was on with Mexico. My father raised a company of soldiers and was elected its captain, and was ordered into camp at what was called "The Barracks," a spot famous because it relieved England of the service of Gen. Packenham, and covered Gen. Andrew Jackson with glory. My brother Rialdo, senior by two years, and I gained a reluctant consent from mother to visit father at the camp for a day, with the positive promise on our part to be home that night. The mode of travel there was by ocean tow-boat, that daily plied the river between camp and city, conveying men and supplies—distance by land to our home being some seven miles. Before arriving at the camp, we were informed that the boat would proceed to the "Passes" for a tow, and not return to New Orleans until next day. Boy-like, we did not burden our minds much about the matter, while soldiers, martial music, and camp life for a whole day was before us. For a time these attractions hid mother and our promise from our thoughts. But as the day wore on I became restless, and inquired of Rialdo how we would get home. His reply was, "We can't go until the boat returns." I plead our promise to mother to be home that day, and that we might walk. He scouted such a plan and turned away from me. Seeing him resolute, I replied, "Very well, I am going by myself," and off I started over an unknown road leading up the river banks through plantations, now solid city, and after a tiresome, lonely trip that led me into night before arrival, I surprised and made glad the heart of my mother by my appearance. Why so late? I explained about the boat, and that as I had promised to be home that day, I did the best I could and walked.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL LEAKAGE.

BY A. F. GODAT.

(Read before the Louisiana State Sunday-school Convention in Carondelet Street Church, in March, '99.)

Gashmu did not say it, therefore it must be true, that a day-school teacher once, in reviewing a geography class, asked a little Irish boy, "Pat, what is a lake?" "A hole in a kittle, mum," promptly answered the youthful Hibernian. We know of no better definition of a leak. But there are leaks in other things than pots, kettles, and pans, and it is of some of these that we will try to speak this afternoon. There are holes, sometimes plenty of them, in the Sunday-school kettle, and the scholars, gathered with much care, whose enrollment was a source of rejoicing and congratulation, escape—we know not where. Sunday after Sunday the report is read, "So many new scholars enrolled to-day," and yet the Sunday-school does not grow. What is the matter?

To go back to the kettle—what causes leaks in it? Generally speaking, two things—inferior material, and careless handling. Is not this the answer to our question? So, often, when the question of why our schools do not thrive is brought up, we are met by the ready-made remedy of canvassing for new scholars. A good brother frequently—not a Sunday-school worker himself—gets up, talks, and reaches a climax when he quotes the words of our Lord, "Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in." Come in to what? To a poorly-attended, cheerless school; half the teachers absent, many of those present with poorly-prepared lessons, no organist, and the faithful few present singing (because it is one of the things they know, and they can hardly be held responsible for the knowledge), "I love to tell the story," in such a slow and indifferent manner as to arouse the suspicion that they don't love to do any such thing. If it is to such a school, it is no wonder that compulsion is necessary to get them to come in. If we will turn to our Bibles, and read in the fourteenth chapter of St. Luke, we will find that our Master represents these words as spoken by a certain man who made a great supper, and such a command is not given to his servants until he can say in all truth, "All things are now ready."

If I wanted a kettle that would not leak, I would get one that was well made of good material, and then I would handle it properly. Remember that the man who commanded his servants to canvass the highways and hedges for guests, made everything ready for them first. He prepared a feast—not family rations. Let us get our Sunday-school rooms as pretty as possible, our lessons prepared thoroughly, and always have a good supply of fresh, bright and reasonable, as well as staple hymns on hand.

A little girl who had gone into a Protestant Sunday-school was chided by her mother for so doing. She replied: "Mama, it was such a lovely place. The teacher was so nice, and the singing was just like heaven." Small danger that she would leak out. Give us bright, pretty, spiritual hymns, well selected both as to words and music, sung in a cheerful, happy manner, and the battle is half won. Earnest, consecrated, faithful teachers, loving God, loving the Bible, and loving their scholars, will win the other half. Where such are, ways and means follow. Unless we have these, all the plans suggested in conventions or magazines will accomplish little.

A perusal of the advertising matter of the most popular, as well as the most successful, secular schools tends to prove we are right in saying the way to stop Sunday-school leakage is to make the school strong, attractive, and beneficial. Take up the catalogue of any school or college, and what do we find? Long discussions on the value of education in general, and of some branch in particular? No, but we find the beauty and attractiveness of the buildings and surroundings set forth; the comprehensiveness and adaptability of the course of study, and the thoroughness with which it is taught; the character and qualifications of the faculty, are all brought out clearly and forcefully. Where such claims are true, there is small complaint of leakage. Can we not learn a Sunday-school lesson here?

But there is little doubt that the workers who take the trouble to attend the convention, especially those who have come from afar, are possessed of all the spiritual, moral and mental qualifications necessary to make a school attractive. It is only a question with them of what and how. Naaman, when he expected the prophet to tell him to do some great thing, and who became offended at the simplicity of the way, was a type of us all. I am afraid that many are disappointed because at such gatherings as this they learn of nothing that is wonderful, sensational, or startlingly original. There are only three things necessary to build up a Sunday-school universally: Keep what you have, get more, and when you get more, keep them. There is no better way of keeping scholars than the teacher's personal invitation. Visit the irregular, because they need it; visit the regular, because they deserve it. This was once brought home pointedly to me. I had one scholar whose attendance was very poor, and I often visited him to keep him in the school. I had another boy, son of one of the pillars of the church, a model scholar who was always in place, and I never thought it necessary to go to his home. He expressed himself to me on the subject one day very much in the terms in which the prodigal son's brother addressed his father about the feast prepared for the prodigal.

BEWARE OF IMPOSTERS.

On last Tuesday evening there arrived a one-horse-top buggy, with a false canvass cover, on which was printed in large letters some Scripture passages; "The mission as ministers, preaching at 7:30 P. M.; no collection; want, lodging, meals and horse food as a remuneration for preaching," etc. The inmates of the buggy were a man who said his name was Boyd, about sixty years old; a little delicate woman about thirty years old, and a little pert girl about seven or eight years old. They halted on the street of our town in front of the court-house as the elected place for preaching, alighted, seated themselves by the side of the buggy three or four hours waiting for the published hour for their services, stressing the fact that they would not hold services in a house of any kind.

Our Cumberland Presbyterian brethren were engaged in an interesting meeting, in which the whole town were taking part; hence the street parties were appealed to by two parties of Christian gentlemen not to hold services at the same hour it was being held at the church. If they would hold services, either hold before or after the church hour. They emphatically answered they would hold it at 7:30 if there were a half-dozen protracted meetings going on. They commenced at their appointed hour with their instruments of music, just as a peddlor of medicines would to draw his crowd. Three or four intelligent citizens called to hear what they had to say, while a crowd of curious boys and negroes made their audience.

First they boasted of belonging to no denomination, and spent the hour in a tirade on churches and ministers; warned the people to beware of two classes, drunkards and preachers, adding that, if the yellow-legged chicken and salary were taken away, the people would have no preaching; called on the auditors to say whom did the preachers visit, and answered themselves that it was not the poor, but that they visited where the "pot boiled the strongest."

This is the style of holiness people we have been visited by. They can never get a following from an intelligent, Bible-reading people, but they may dupe the ignorant, the uninformed, and poison their minds against churches and preachers; so that the result may be their eternal loss. We can't afford to say, Let such go. I think the intelligent people of a community ought to defend the less informed against the heresies of such anarchists under the guise of ministerial robes, who come from where nobody knows, without credentials or character, looting quiet communities of peace, morals, and ignorant souls who are easily led astray by every wind of doctrine and the cunning craftiness of men. I believe we owe it to ourselves, our children, and the cause of our Christ, to see such would-be moral tramps out of our villages and towns upon their arrival. I have not a word to say against anyone who is a lover of the Lord Jesus Christ and is working for his glory. Such always recognize the rights of the people where they go, and conform to Christian ethics. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

DO PROTESTANT MISSIONS ENCOURAGE GOOD CITIZENSHIP?

BY MISS GENEVIEVE COCHRAN, MERIDIAN

In estimating the influence that the extension of foreign mission work exerts upon the citizenship of its converts, though the standard must be relative, we can measure the results only by the ideal relation of Christian society attained in our own country. So long has been ours the priceless heritage of intellectual and religious liberty that in the rights, duties and prerogatives of citizenship in our enlightened nation there is scarcely a suggestion of the deeper nature of the freedom we enjoy—freedom from trammeled thought and action, from political bondage—social and religious—from that personal thraldom of ignorance and superstition which enslaves the heathen, and which constitutes—to human power and understanding—the strongest and most impenetrable barrier to the salvation of his mind and soul; for citizenship in a Christian land has so incorporated the source and very nature of its great first cause—the religion of Christ—that when we would regard the benighted heathen as becoming capable of experiencing and realizing the sublime truth upon which rests the structure of Christian society, so awful, pervading, irrational and complete is his darkness and ignorance—so depraved that a moral sense must be created in him before it can be appealed to—there seems to be no way by which he may be reached and made able to realize the Truth, save that which Christ showed to Nicodemus: he must be born again. And the new birth must be not only spiritual, but moral and intellectual—a complete revolution of the whole man. Customs hoary with age, superstitions which, through countless generations, are ingrained into his nature, traditions long accepted as realities—all have to be eradicated; the man must be created anew. And we believe we teach, and God demonstrates to us, the efficacy of his plan of salvation. Only this can avail: Faith in Christ as a personal Savior and the one Mediator; faith in the simplicity and truth of the gospel as embodied in the teaching of Protestantism. The Protestant religion, while the basis of enlightened civilization, maintains its adherents in a relation separate and distinct from the quality of citizenship. In contrast to this character of Protestant belief, the Roman Catholic faith, wherever it is practiced, does not admit of citizenship on its own account, but Church and State being one, all the duties and privileges attendant upon the citizen merge into and become one with his religious duties. This union of the affairs of Church and of State, enforced upon every member of the Roman Catholic Church, is readily evident in every phase of the religion, and though in itself plausible, is contrary to Christ's teaching.

To the Pharisee endeavoring to ensnare our Lord with his own words Christ gives an answer full of consummate wisdom, "Is it lawful to pay tribute to Cæsar?" Taking a coin, and pointing to the Emperor's image upon it, Christ replied, "Render unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and unto God the things that are God's." And this lesson to the Pharisee must be our guide. It establishes the limits, regulates the rights, and distinguishes the jurisdiction of the two empires of heaven and earth; hence we may readily trace the initial influence of each religion and deduce the results.

Roman Catholics often enquire why Protestant missions are sent where the Church of Rome is at work; but even a superficial investigation will suffice to show why Protestantism must not only struggle against heathen ignorance and depravity, but at the same time against the almost equally pernicious influence engendered by rampant Romanism.

Dealing impartially, no better example of Roman Catholic work can be shown than in a portrayal of the religion and morals of the South American States. This land of the Southern Cross, so pregnant with nature's generosity, whose possibilities are beyond computation, and to whose resources measure has never been set—a land whose people have capacity for the highest and noblest manhood and citizenship—has suffered papal power for more than three hundred years. And can we now hear this southland calling to us down the centuries for light and help, and fail to realize what Romanism does toward Christianizing a people?

The Christian Life.

BOUNDS OF RIGHT MOURNING.

Sorrow is fitting and proper in its place. When in God's providence we are bereaved and distressed, it is right for us to grieve. God would not have us refrain from weeping or mourning when he takes from us that which we have learned to value and rejoice in as a gift from him. But mourning or sorrow is no excuse for a neglect of our duty to others or to God. If we can not do our pressing daily duty while we mourn, then we should refrain from mourning. A mother must not neglect her living child because of her sorrow over one who has died. A soldier must not fall out from his place in the ranks, while the battle goes on, to show his grief for a fallen comrade. No person ought to be faithless to duty in any sphere because of his longing for one whom God has called away from his side. Under the Levitical law high priest, who had daily duties for all the people, was not permitted to go into mourning even for his father or mother, however his heart might be stricken. His own sorrow must not stand in the way of his ministry of love to others. In a sense, every one of us is a high priest to others, in our sphere of influence or example. No one of us has a right to be neglectful of his priestly duties of sympathy and love because of his grief in bereavement or trial.—Sunday School Times.

The continual conflict of every Christian is between self and Jesus Christ. Self is the old owner who does not like to be dislodged, and disputes the right of Jesus to be enthroned in the heart. Self has abundant uses for the purse, and "can not afford" to give money away that might buy a fine equipage and rare pictures, and other creature comforts that make life agreeable. It keeps a sharp eye on the cheque book, to see that too much is not bestowed on objects of charity, and it whispers artfully, "Remember how our expenses are increasing, and charity begins at home." Self watches the weather on Sunday morning—the one day in all the week when "health" is of paramount importance—and hesitates about the risk of wet feet or sitting in damp clothing. Self comes home late and mutters: "I am too tired for prayer-meeting to-night," although it is never too tired for a party, a concert or the opera. And so smooth-tongued self has an oily plea always ready; and if Christ's sentinel, a living conscience, is not there to challenge and silence the cunning sedncer, self carries the day.—T. L. Cuyler.

In accomplishing your day's work you have simply to take one step at a time. To take that step wisely is all that you need to think about. If I am climbing a mountain, to look down may make me dizzy; to look too far up may make me tired and discouraged. Take no anxious thought for the morrow. Sufficient for the day—yes, and for each hour in the day—is the toil or trial thereof. There is not a child of God in this world who is strong enough to stand the strain of to-day's duties and all the load of to-morrow's anxieties piled upon the top of them. Paul himself would have broken down if he had attempted the experiment. We have a perfect right to ask our heavenly Father for strength equal to the day, but we have no right to ask him for one extra ounce of strength or anything beyond it. When the morrow comes, grace will come sufficient for its tasks or for its troubles:

"Let me be strong in word and deed
Just for to-day;
Lord, for to-morrow and its needs
I must not pray."

—Theodore L. Cuyler.

We often worry more over troubles which never come than over those which actually befall us. We live in fear of our own fancy, or in perplexities and misgivings of our own creation. Even the ills of life are rendered worse by a vivid imagination. It is foolish, however, thus to embitter our days. We should cultivate that Christian philosophy which gilds the future with hope, and accepts the present with patience and resignation. Trustfulness in the Lord dissipates anxiety, whilst hopefulness brightens all occurrences. Health, comfort and joy are all dependent upon making the best of what is, and leaving what is to come in God's hands.—The Churchworker.

If we look down, then our shoulders stoop. If our thoughts look down, our character bends. It is only when we hold our heads up that the body becomes erect. It is only when our thoughts go up that our life becomes erect.—Alexander McKenzie.

Why should we live half-way up the hill and be swathed in mists, when we might have an unclouded sky and a visible sun over our heads, if we would climb up higher and walk in the light of His face.—Alexander Maclaren.

If conscience smite thee once, it is an admonition; if twice, it is a condemnation.—Nathaniel Hawthorne.

But to err all the time is criminal or idiotic. Don't continue the mistake of neglecting your blood. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla now. It will make pure, live blood, and put you in good health.

WHERE SHOULD WE PREACH?

We should preach wherever the Lord appoints. All of the appointments of the truly called and consecrated ministers are made by the Lord himself. Whether we be itinerants or evangelists, our appointments and calls are made by the Lord, in harmony with the legally constituted agencies of his church. This may not always seem to be correct, but it is even so. God sends the preacher to those who need salvation. He does this without reference to salary; hence the first questions that escapes the lips of an appointed preacher should be, "How many souls are there to be won for Christ?" instead of, "What will it pay?"

God is responsible for the preacher's support. There is not a great deal of difference in appointments. The point of success lies in the faith and obedience of the one appointed. The man who will surrender himself entirely to the will of Christ will have success anywhere, and no Christian minister who truly believes that his appointment is from God need to give himself any trouble about his support anywhere. He who does not honor his Lord thus is disloyal in the point of faith. The appointments of our Lord come often in the form of disappointments, but it is enough for us to know that he never makes a mistake. The Lord makes his appointments with a special view to his ultimate glory in the salvation of souls, and not the amount of money to be received. Many are the secret impressions and desires of every divinely-called minister with reference to the salvation of those places that are regarded as hard and neglected missionary territory. There are many such places to-day at our doors that only need the gospel of Christ in earnest, and they would become God-loving and self-sustaining at once. It is not a question of money, nor of big or little places, but a question of divine appointment. The field is the world.

On invitation of the pastor, Bro. Woods, of Blue Springs circuit, Coriath district, we spent last Saturday night and Sunday lecturing on the "Dawn of Better Times," and preaching the Word at Sherman, Miss., which resulted to the glory of God in securing over three hundred dollars and a nice lot toward building a Methodist Church at that place. Our people there are only a very few in number, and have no church-house of their own. The Baptists and Christians (Campbellites) both have a house of worship. All denominations subscribed to the building of our church.

Sherman is a nice little town, situated on the K. C. railroad, between New Albany and Topelo. They have a good boarding-school there, with a religious faculty. It takes Christianity and education to save the world and build up society.

A NEW DEPARTURE.

Mr. Editor: Our presiding elder, Rev. Jas. A. Parker, D. D., made the statement last night that prayer directed to the Son or Holy Ghost was misdirected devotion. His contention was, that all prayer be solely directed to God. Then our hymn book is wrong, and the Discipline is wrong.

For my part, this view of our presiding elder upsets a fond theory; but so far I have found no place in the Scripture where prayer was directed to any other being than God, the Supreme Head of the Trinity.

Let us hear from some of the brethren in regard to this.

The Doctor made the distinction between request and prayer—e. g., the calls upon Christ during his ministry. The thief on the cross made a prayer, which the Doctor contended was not to be copied after. The Master took into consideration his circumstances, and heard him. The Lord's prayer was the scriptural form. H. S. Johns.

The preacher looks upward toward heaven, and though he has not yet got there, is traveling that way; and, even if a very laggard pilgrim, he has commonly climbed somewhat in advance of his people, and got upon higher ground, and breathes a purer air, and sees a little more of those sweet flowers which grow in these well-drained uplands; and as he inspires the balsamous fragrance of the upper woods, taking in long draughts of that strong, invigorating atmosphere, he can not but feel that it is good to be there, and if he preaches [illegible] as much good, he must say, "Come up higher, and try for yourselves the higher life, which I find so strengthening."

Down below are men pulling their feet wearily through muddy paths, and wiping from their brows the sweat of a close, damp, miasmatic region. Must he not call to them, and urge them to come up and look out from these heights of a higher life where motives are nearer heaven? Can he doubt that this is what they must do to be saved, seeing that for them to be saved is to be uplifted and strengthened and brought to know goodness and God?—Treasury.

RESOLUTIONS CONCERNING THE TEACHING OF "MAGNETIC HEALING".

We, the undersigned ministers of the gospel, residents of this city, feel called upon in the interests of truth and morality to give this public statement of our views concerning the so-called "Magnetic Healing" which is practiced in our city.

1. As far as we can learn from published statements and otherwise the doctrines promulgated seem to be an ignorant compound of spiritualism, clairvoyancy and "Christian Science," all of which we believe to be false, and antagonistic to Christian religion, and hurtful to morality.

2. The published references to the Holy Scripture which we have seen are, in our candid judgment, garbled; or are used out of their proper connection, or are foolishly misinterpreted.

3. The pretension by the so-called "Magnetic Healers" to the use of any power, or knowledge of any truth, not already known to rational science, we believe to be false.

We offer this, our solemn protest and warning, to the people of this city, and community generally, solely in the interest of morality and truth.

You are on eagle's wings, and are looking into life. Presently you will be out of the university, and start on your race. Now you are full of zeal, of hope, of enthusiasm; but there will surely come a time when all the joy will seem to have gone, when you seem to have lived a life of failure and disappointment, when life seems not worth living for. This is the greatest thing of all, to keep on walking when roads are dry and dusty, and when the day is hot—to run the race that is set before you without faltering. If you are worth anything, the time will come when, like Elijah, you will sit down under a tree and say, "Take away my life." But blessed be you if at that time you can hear a still, small voice, and rise up into health and strength again.

What has this country a right to look for from its educated young men? Knowledge and skill in the use of material things in life, that the rest may be lifted up; wisdom to see what are the great, divine principles of social and industrial action, and to formulate them into the permanent law of the nation of which you are a part.—Selected.

The punishment for refusing to use the talent given [illegible] the loss of the talent itself. The opportunities will be taken away from him who neglects them. The unused limb grows weak; the still water dries up or becomes foul; the inactive mind loses its power. The loss of the talent begins in this life, is gradual, that men may take warning and have opportunity to repent. But, finally, at the judgment day, the talent will be wholly and irrevocably taken away.—Peloubet.

When you have placed your standard high, and your only dread is the fear of committing a cowardly act, you will be delivered from all lower fears.—Ex.

FROM THE WORK.

ST. HELENA CIRCUIT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

With the help of the good people we have been improving our parsonage. We are building quite an addition, which is nearing completion, and, when completed, will make our parsonage comfortable enough (with the adding of some needed furniture) for any preacher whose aspirations are not unreasonable.

No Sunday-schools were reported from this work last year. Our people have been awakened upon this subject, and we now have several, with more to follow. One of these is at a church (Darlington) where there has been none for several years, and there they have also purchased a new organ. The congregation at that point has increased over two hundred per cent., and still improving.

The "Minutes" of last Conference show nothing paid on any of the collections ordered by the Conference.

At our last appointment here in Greensburg (Sunday, April 16) we took these collections, and "cleared the deck," raising in cash and good subscription nearly $75.00—the pro rata share of the assessments for this church.

Quite a number have joined the church, and if I am not mistaken, the heart-beat of new life is felt all over our circuit.

One thing we lack: the circulation of our Advocate is not as large as it should be. The Advocate is so deserving of our patronage—it is so helpful in our work—it ought to have a place in every Methodist home. I am trying to improve in this also, and trust that my labor in this will bear fruit soon.

J. I. Hoffpauir, P. C.
Greensburg, La., April 24, 1899.

Rev. W. P. Donnell, P. C., Toles, Miss., April 18, 1899: "Thinking some one would like to hear from our Choctaws of Mississippi, I will say we are doing a fine work among them. Jim Johnson is our local preacher, and full of the Holy Ghost, and always ready to do anything his preacher asks him to do. Bro. T. L. Mellen hold our first Quarterly Conference on the third of April; and how glad our Choctaws seem to be that he thought so much of them as to come and be with them! We have organized one Sabbath-school since I came here, and will organize another as soon as we get the literature. I think it bids fair for a church, if not two. Brethren, you do not know how these people need the gospel. For one to read something of them, he can not realize the fact like if you were to come and see them, when they ask the good Christians to come over to Macedonia and help us. I say, Come over to the Indian Mission and help us. When you tell them about Jesus, and how he suffered and died for them, you can see the tears running down their cheeks, and one will say, 'Does that good Man love us Choctaws?' If we, as Christians, do not put forth every effort in our power to send them the gospel, at the last day these people at our doors will point their fingers at us, and say, 'We wanted the gospel, but you would not send it to us.' We need books for them. Send us your old books that are lying on shelves. They will do us good, for we need them."

Rev. Courtland P. Smith, Minden, La., April 26, 1899: "Our meeting has closed, and the results, while not as great as we had hoped for, were satisfactory in many respects. The membership has been much encouraged, the sinners have been deeply impressed by the gospel, and the community has been aroused on religious lines as it has not been for some time. The net results were eleven additions to the church, and about twenty-three professions of faith in Christ. The pastor did all the preaching at the evening services. Some of the morning services were conducted by Rev. John M. Shive, of the Presbyterian Church, who rendered valuable service. Other services were conducted by laymen, who reflected credit on the rank and file of the Lord's army. All the churches of the town gave us right of way, and turned out with our own people to enjoy the services, giving us large crowds. The Epworth League Conference of Arcadia district with us to-morrow night, with the opening sermon by Rev. Dr. Pierce, of Monroe. Will give full report later."

No man has a right to marry a woman and make her his nurse during long years of continued ill-health. A sick man cannot be a good husband, a good provider, a successful business man or a useful citizen; a man had better be dead and done with it than to be a life-long invalid, a nuisance to everybody and especially to the woman whom he has vowed to love, honor and protect.

The trouble with the average man is that he has not the least conception of the causes of ill-health or the right way to go about remedying them. A little indigestion or biliousness in themselves are not serious complaints, but if neglected they may develop into almost any disease in the medical books. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures many serious diseases by promptly removing the causes. It braces up the weak and impaired stomach and restores the appetite. It invigorates the liver and all the secretory glands. It facilitates the flow of digestive juices. It makes the assimilation of the life-giving elements of the food absolutely perfect, and thus enriches the blood. Disease germs are scavengers, and will not enter healthy blood or tissue. They must have the inert tissues of disease upon which to feed. The "Golden Medical Discovery," by enriching the blood, tears down old and inert tissues and builds up new and healthy ones. It wards off consumption and cures, bronchial and throat affections which, if neglected, lead up to consumption. All medicine dealers sell the "Discovery."

"Eight years ago my husband coughed all the time," writes Mrs. M. J. Tedder, of Ellington, Reynolds Co., Mo. "Just as soon as he had finished a meal he would throw up. He was getting very weak. He took half a dozen bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and the 'Pleasant Pellets,' and says he feels better and stronger than ever before and weighs more. Everyone said he had consumption."

Best Edition of the World's Best Book

—THE—

"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangment for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the New Orleans Advocate we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$1.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. THURSDAY, MAY 4, 1899.

The present is our own; but while we speak,
We cease from its possession, and resign
The stage we tread on, to another race,
As vain and gay, and mortal as ourselves.
—T. L. Peacock

They are never alone that are accompanied with noble thoughts.—Sidney.

The three things most difficult are—to keep a secret, to forget an injury, and to make good use of leisure.—Chilo.

If you would hit the mark, you must aim a little above it. Every arrow that flies feels the attraction of the earth.—Anon.

There are two things which we must uphold and hold fast: the sacrifice of Christ upon the cross and the priesthood of Christ in heaven.—Andrew A. Bonar.

The greater a man is in power above others, the more he ought to excel them in virtue. None ought to govern who is not better than the governed.—Syrus.

If I could get the ear of every young man for but one suggestion, it would be this: "Make the most and best of yourself." There is no tragedy like a wasted life.—Exchange.

There are three kinds of people in the world: the wills, the wouldns, and the can'ts. The first accomplish everything; the second oppose everything; the third fail in everything.—Success.

The man who starts out to "mark the perfect men" will not need a very large piece of chalk. You, gentle reader, might be the only man in your neighborhood to receive the mark.—Selected.

A man who lives right, and is right, has more power in his silence than another man has in his words. Character is like bells which ring out sweet music, and which, when touched, constantly resound with beautiful harmonies.—Selected.

It is not seeing one's friends, having them within reach, hearing of and from them, which makes them ours. It is the believing in them, the depending on them, assured that they are good and true to the core, and, therefore, could not but be good and true toward everybody else, ourselves included.—Dinah Mulock Craik.

God wants our life to be a song. He has written the music for us in his Word, and in the duties that come to us in our places and relations in life. The things we ought to do are the notes set upon the staff. To make our life beautiful music we must be obedient and submissive. Any disobedience is the singing of a false note, and yields discord.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

Why do we not always smile whenever we meet the eye of a fellow-being? That is the true recognition which ought to pass from soul to soul constantly. Little children in simple communities do this involuntarily, unconsciously. The honest hearted German peasant does it. It is like magical sunlight all through that simple land, the perpetual greeting on the right hand and the left between strangers as they pass by each other, never without a smile.—Helen Blunt.

THE HOME.

A Christian home, with its merry prattle of children, its sweet companionships, its innocent joys and hallowed influences, is the fittest emblem of heaven, the nearest approach to its blessedness to be found on earth. It is around the fireside, at the mother's knee, that childhood receives its first and most lasting impressions, its purest impulses, and its highest blessings. It is under the parental roof-tree that the young form those habits and ideals which, as a rule, are most influential in shaping character and determining destiny. No matter how beneficient the influences brought to bear upon childhood and youth outside the home circle, they will make but small impression if the home influence is evil or godless.

Though a trite statement, it is, nevertheless, tremendously true that as the tone of the home life of a nation or community is, so will be its elevation or its degradation. In short, the stability and glory of any nation is in direct proportion to the purity and sacredness of the home life of its people.

The crowning disgrace of heathenism is, that in the lands where its darkness reigns, "there are no homes, only houses." No greater misfortune can befall any country than that among its inhabitants the marriage tie should be lightly regarded, motherhood should be looked upon with general disfavor, and domestic life be considered merely as a convenience. Napoleon once, on being asked what was the greatest need of France, bluntly replied, "Mothers." As a writer in the Christian Intelligencer forcefully says: "If England, Germany and America are chiefest among the nations in moral culture and advancement, it is because they have preserved the integrity of their social life. If their people are more loyal, more virtuous and intelligent, it is because they have found these graces in the family circle. The laws of countries are enacted, not in legislative halls, but at the hearthstone. Magna Charta dates further back than Runnymede; back to the time when Stephen Langton stood at his mother's knee."

Modern life, with its enormous distractions, its increasing temptations and cares, and its sordid ideals, is doing no little to undermine the sacredness and integrity of the home. Nor is any disintegrating influence that threatens the stability of society and civilization more to be feared than that which attacks domestic life. The general corruption of home life means the corruption of society, and the certain downfall of national greatness and independence. So fierce are the competitions of the business world, so eager is the rush for mammon, that business men and laborers are spending less and less time with their families—some from choice, it may be; others from dire necessity. Many mothers, too, in their anxiety to keep pace with the events of society and participate in its amusements, find little opportunity to be with their children, the care of whom is being relegated more and more to nurses and teachers. These are a few out of many indications pointing to the fact that the majority of the parents of our country are sadly neglecting the training and oversight of their offspring, and are shifting this responsibility in undue measure upon pastors, Sunday-school teachers, and day-school teachers. Fortunate is it for us that most of our public-school teachers are religious and philanthropic. Otherwise many of the children of this generation would be left almost wholly without instructions in morals and manners. The churches and the schools are doing wonders in the way of training and elevating the young, but this work is sadly hindered oftimes—yea, rendered almost vain—by the unfaithfulness and shortsightedness of parents. When we consider the little attention parents usually bestow upon the intellectual and moral training of their offspring, the wonder is, that they turn out as well as they do. While it is not impossible for children to be better than their parents, it is rare that they become so. Example will have its effect. What care the children about what Rev. So-and-So says, so long as father and mother make light of his teaching, or pay no heed to his religion.

Society has no more dangerous enemy than a godless home. If the home be dark with worldliness and sin, how great is that darkness? The duty of children to parents is not half so important as the duty of parents to children. If mothers were half as careful about the religious training of their children as they are to dress them well and keep them in health, there would be fewer ne'er-do-wells, and fewer wrecked lives. No home is what it ought to be if the voice of prayer is not heard therein. Nor can any father hope to train his children aright unless he himself will lead the way. The neglect of the family altar usually means the decay of family piety. Religion that is not a positive force in the home is but an empty name.

The folly of letting children grow up as they please is stupendous and almost incomprehensible. Some one having remarked to the poet Coleridge that children ought not to be prejudiced in favor of religion, he took him into a garden full of weeds, showing it as a spot not prejudiced in the Spring in favor of flowers and fruits. 'For his part," he said, 'he preferred a garden prejudiced in favor of roses and strawberries." The parents who fail to exercise a strict surveillance over the reading and associations and habits of their children are sure, sooner or later, to lament their mistake. Some one has made the remarkable statement that nearly every boy who goes to the bad is ruined after dark. Wise parents will be jealous of any influence or attraction that lessens in their children the love of home, and that shortens the hours spent under the parental watch-care.

Obedience is a word, the meaning of which multitudes of children in this age are scarcely learning at all, save in the school-room. Nor would they learn it even there if some parents could have their way. To some children home is little more than an eating and sleeping-place.

As the home is the oldest of all institutions, so also it is the most vital. Hence parents should do their utmost to render it attractive, to make its influence sweet and wholesome, and its ideals lofty and ennobling, remembering that they are building for eternity.

After all, it is not wisdom or wealth that makes a home happy and dear. But wherever love, contentment and the fear of God abide, though it be in a thatched cottage or a hovel, there will happiness flourish and righteousness blossom as the rose.

WOMAN'S BOARD, H. M. S.

MR EDITOR: We are just closing the most important and profitable session of the Woman's Board—Home Mission Society—since its organization, thirteen years ago. The work is growing and prospering beyond all expectation. Among other items we find that $9,000 has been appropriated to parsonages this year, besides a little more than $9,000 in loans. Eighteen thousand dollars distributed among the parsonages of Southern Methodism will gladden the heart of many a preacher's wife.

The following resolution—which has just passed—will explain itself:

"In view of the constantly increasing importance of the Parsonage Department of this Society, and in order that the General Secretary, Mrs. Hargrove, may be relieved of the pressure now devolving upon her,

"Resolved, That we recommend a superintendent of the Parsonage Department, whose duty it shall be to study the subject, investigate all claims, and secure the most judicious appropriation of parsonage funds.

"Committee on Parsonages: Mrs. F. A. Lyons, Mrs. T. W. Moore, Mrs. Coppidge, Miss Addie Purnell."

Mrs. F. A. Lyons was elected superintendent of the Parsonage Department. More need not be said as to how well the preachers will fare.

New Orleans has been chosen for next place of meeting of the Board of Home Missions.

Dallas has entertained this body royally, and Texas is all that Texans claim for the Lone Star State.

Truly yours,

DELEGATE FROM MISSISSIPPI.

Dallas, Texas, April 25, 1899.

At the Louisiana State Convention of the W. C. T. U., held last week at Crowley, the election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. M. R. Goodale; vice-president, Mrs. M. H. Crouch; corresponding secretary, Mrs. A. M. Zable; recording secretary, Mrs. E. A. White; treasurer, Mrs. L. F. Blanks.

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

We have just received from the Union Mutual Music and Novelty Co., 20 East 14th street, New York, a splendid home song, entitled, "The Old Farm House on the Hill." Words and music by J. W. Lerman. It is suitable for the piano or organ.

In the May Century Frank R. Stockton records some further adventures of "The Vizier of the Two-Horned Alexander;" an eclipse in India is vividly described and pictured by the painter, R. D. Mackenzie; and Jacob A. Riis tells a police reporter's story of "The Last of the Mulberry Street Barons." Among the miscellaneous papers is Mrs. James T. Fields' sympathetic sketch, from personal acquaintance, of the lives of "Two Lovers of Literature"—Charles and Mary Cowden Clarke. Prof. Wheeler's "Alexander the Great" deals with the Macedonian Conqueror in Egypt and the founding of Alexandria.

In the Ladies' Home Journal, for May, "The Art of Listening to a Sermon" is the first of a series of articles on the pulpit and the pew by Ian Maclaren. Another notable feature is "The Secrets of a Happy Life," by the Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis, D. D., pastor of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, who has become a regular contributor to the Journal. Paul Leicester Ford writes "The Anecdotal Side of George Washington," recounting some of the best, but least-known stories of the "Father of His Country." Joseph Edgar Chamberlin introduces "Helen Keller as She Really Is," giving some interesting glimpses of this marvelous blind and deaf girl.

Major-General Nelson A. Miles, commanding the United States Army, is the leading contributor to Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly, for May. General Miles writes of "The United States Army, and Its Commanders." Admiral Dewey comes in for special honors in this May number in two illustrated articles, namely: "Dewey at Manila—One Year's Retrospect," by Edward W. Harden, United States Commissioner to the Philippines; and "The Surrender of Manila," by Douglas White, the well-known war correspondent. Felipe Agoncillo, the cultured Filipino diplomat, writes an instructive article, under the title of "Are the Filipinos Civilized?" which question he answers in an overwhelming affirmative.

Scribner's Magazine, for May, has secured from Major-General Leonard Wood, the military governor of Santiago, the first official account of the great work which has been accomplished in that province. A striking account of colonial government is also given in the picturesque paper by G. W. Steevens on "The Installation of Lord Curzon as Viceroy of India." It is a brilliant piece of descriptive writing, giving pleasing glimpses of the personality of the new Viceroy and Vicereine, who was an American girl. Governor Roosevelt describes the life of the troops "In the Trenches" after the battle of San Juan. Senator Hoar's "Political Reminiscences" detail many incidents in the careers of the great statesmen of his time, and give the inner history of the famous Hayes-Tilden election contest of 1876.

Self-Culture, for May, opens with an important article on "Deep Waterways for Lake Commerce," and makes a strong argument for an American waterway connecting the lakes with the ocean. "The Fifty-Fifth Congress" is an instructive and well-informed summary of the doings of the late session of the National Legislature. The president of Colby University contributes a thoughtful paper on "The Higher Culture and the National Life," which deals interestingly with a university education and its value in equipping trained experts. The articles on "Brain and Brawn" and on "The Brookline Public Baths" touch informingly on topics of hygiene and physical and mental health. Literature has a varied representation in the papers on "Lowell as an American Literary Critic," on "Victorian Thought and Thinkers," on "The Loves of Goethe," and on "Recent Canadian Verse." Prof. Goldwin Smith has a paper on 'The Ecclesiastical Crisis in England," dealing with Ritualism. The number is tastefully illustrated.

REV. H. P. GIBBS.

All Columbus is sad over the untimely death of Rev. H. P. Gibbs. His remains were brought here and buried from our church last Monday morning. Notwithstanding the short notice, a large congregation assembled at 11:30 A. M. to honor the name and work of Bro. Gibbs. The services were conducted by Rev. H. C. Morehead, P. E., Grenada district, assisted by Rev. R. A. Burroughs, P. E., Columbus district. Revs. Geo. H. Lipscomb, R. H. B. Gladney, A. P. Leech, Eugene Johnson, P. E. Duncan and J. A. Bowen took part in the services. Rev. M. L. Burton was here to attend the funeral, but he was too sick to leave his room. The cause Bro. Gibbs espoused, what he suffered, together with the Christ-like spirit he manifested, made him the hero of the North Mississippi Conference. His brethren will stand by his cause and his bereaved family at all cost. Let all of us pray and work to this end. J. A. BOWEN.

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

A Summer School for students who are irregular in their classes and for teachers will be held at Centenary College, June 12, to continue six weeks. Prominent teachers have been engaged. It will be a fine opportunity for our young ministers to spend six weeks in studying Bible methods and Greek. For particulars address the president.

The notes given Centenary College for an endowment were and are appreciated; but the interest on these notes would be doubly appreciated just now. Out of 1200 notes the interest is only paid on about forty. If you have a note in the treasurer's hands, send a part of the interest, if not all. At least regard your obligation sufficient to write and explain why you have been indifferent. I. W. COOPER.

REVIVAL AT AMITE CITY, LA.

We are in the midst of a heart-stirring, soul-searching revival in Amite. The interest increases at each succeeding service. We had house full and some standing in vestibule last night. The church is greatly revived—five souls were converted and joined church yesterday. This is the fourteenth day of the meeting; will continue it several more. Am all alone. (No, God is with me.) Have preached twenty-four sermons and attended three funerals during last twelve days.

Our faithful, good brother, S. Hyde, who was for a number of years a member of the Mississippi Conference, passed away in great peace at his home in Tangipahoa parish on April 21. His son, Jno. Hyde, followed him on the twenty-fourth. Mrs. Alma Rand—the oldest member of the church in this community—left us on the twenty-seventh instant. She was eighty-nine years of age. She went to God in mature hope and strong confidence. Our people continue to "die well."

Am glad to announce that the demoralizing lawlessness that we have had in this parish for a number of years is thought to be at an end. The prospects are brighter for us than for many years. The church and the citizenship of the entire parish is now enjoying peace and safety. The Lord be praised!

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP IN DETROIT.

The Michigan Legislature has passed an act permitting the city of Detroit to buy and operate its street railway system. When Governor Pingree was mayor of Detroit he had a long controversy with the street railways, and attempted to take charge of them for the city. The courts decided against him; but now that he is governor, he has succeeded in having a law passed which authorizes municipal ownership and management. The present roads are bonded for $11,000,000, and the city will probably have to pay that amount of money to secure possession. Bonds will be issued based on the value of the franchises, the property, and the earnings. Three commissioners—the governor being one—will have the entire management of the business. The only restriction placed upon these commissioners is that the fares shall not be higher than they are now—six for a quarter on the old systems, and eight for a quarter on the new lines. There are some knotty legal questions involved, and considerable opposition has been manifested. The scheme is likely to be tried in spite of these, and the result of the trial will be of great interest to the advocates of municipal ownership of transportation facilities.—Zion's Herald.

NOTES.

Do not fail to read our "Special Offer for May."

President Chambers, of Whitworth College, has been ill for several days.

Rev. H. H. Ahrens left on Monday for Nashville, where he will remain during the week.

Dr. C. W. Carter is in Nashville attending the annual meeting of the Board of Missions.

Rev. W. H. LaPrade, Jr., of the St. Louis Conference, has been in this city for some days, visiting his parents.

Dr. I. W. Cooper attended the meeting of the Arcadia District Lesgue Conference at Minden last week, and delivered an address.

Dr. W. H. LaPrade attended the Seashore District Conference, and delivered an address in the interest of the "Twentieth Century Educational Fund."

A. F. Godat and E. P. Mackie, prominent Methodist laymen of this city, were participants in the recent International Sunday-School Conference at Atlanta.

Dr. W. H. LaPrade left for Nashville on Tuesday to attend the annual meeting of the Board of Education. Before his return he will visit relatives in Florence, Ala. His pulpit will be filled next Sabbath by Prof. Thomas Carter.

Through a pastoral report from Rev. T. J. Martin, which will appear in our issue of next week, we learn that Rev. C. F. Staples, of the Louisiana Conference, is in bed with fever. Bro. Martin asks the prayers of the church for his recovery.

We invite special attention to the notice on our fifth page headed, "A Delightful Excursion." The cause is a most worthy one, and the occasion will, doubtless, be a very enjoyable one. We hope the Methodists of New Orleans will turn out in force.

On account of a catarrhal affection from which he has been suffering for some time, Rev. T. W. Lewis has been granted a thirty days' vacation by his church at Corinth, Miss. He is in Memphis under treatment. He writes that he is improving and hopes to be able to resume work by the sixteenth.

Tickets have been received for a Grand Violin and Mandolin Recital, to be given by the pupils of Mr. C. Erhard Schrenk. The recital will be given at the Athenæum, cor. Clio and St. Charles Sts., on Thursday, May 11, at eight o'clock. An excellent program has been prepared, and a feast of music is anticipated.

Miss Bruce, superintendent of our Cuban Mission Schools in Tampa, Fla., delivered two addresses in New Orleans last Sabbath—one at Carondelet and one at Rayne Memorial. Both were replete with information concerning the important work under her charge. She will also have charge of the new work projected in Key West.

Under date of May 1, Rev. M. E. Tumlin writes: "I have been assisting Bro. J. A. Bowen for two weeks in a great work at Columbus. He had four preachers last week, and none of them ate idle bread. He had three services in the church, and preaching in different parts of the city in the afternoon of each day. The city is stirred, and people are converted and reclaimed here and there as the camp-fires burn."

From a communication on this page it will be seen that the Woman's Home Mission Society has organized a Parsonage Department, and elected to its superintendency Mrs. F. A. Lyons, of this city. Of Mrs. Lyons' great interest in this special work it is not necessary that we should speak, her record on the subject being known to all. We note with pleasure that the next meeting of the society will be held in this city.

TWENTIETH CENTURY FUND, BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT.

BY H. G. HAWKINS,
Conference Secretary of Education.

My first day in the field as Conference Secretary of Education was last Friday with the preachers and lay members of the Brookhaven District Conference, held in the live town of Brookhaven. The hour set for the presentation of the educational cause was 11 A. M., and an audience large and attentive assembled. The speech of the Conference Secretary was followed by one from Dr. H. W. Featherstun, the presiding elder, who gave a resume of the situation in the Mississippi Conference as it relates more especially to our girls' schools. He appealed to the Brookhaven district to bestir itself in behalf of the noble Whitworth College plant. Expressions of approval were given from different parts of the audience, and Rev. T. W. Adams, the Brookhaven pastor, suggested that a collection be taken at the moment. The presiding elder was of the opinion that the time was not ripe for that. I learned afterwards that two men in the audience were ready to subscribe a hundred dollars each.

In the afternoon the president of the Conference inquired from each pastor exactly what had been done thus far towards raising the fund. The answers showed that most of the pastors were intelligently planning to secure the money before the end of the year.

J. D. Ellis, of Mt. Carmel, said that the preparing of the Twentieth Century Fund roll-book had resulted in the careful revision of each church register on his charge.

C. A. Powell, of Crystal Springs, said that one of the ladies of his congregation had consented to take charge of the Twentieth Century Thank-Offering Service, programs for which had been received by all the pastors of the district.

One pastor said that he had scattered his programs broad-cast among his people. That is better than to do nothing at all with them; but the purpose of this program is that it serve, with such modifications as the circumstances may require, as an order of exercises for educational meetings in every congregation, at which meeting the roll-book is to be opened, and cash or subscriptions received.

J. M. Morse said that at Wesson he would observe the day now, and take the collection later.

Five preachers who had not already attended to it gave lists of subscribers to "The New Century Education." I will still have it sent free to those whose names are furnished.

TAKE NOTICE

That our Minion and Emerald Bibles are as good specimens of the bookmaker's art as the Bourgeois. Paper, typography and binding are excellent. They have all the Oxford Helps and the Holman Self-pronouncing feature. The only difference between them and the Bourgeois is that the type is smaller. Take notice that you can get these styles at lower prices than ever before and also get your name inscribed in letters of gold free of charge, provided you order during May. See offer headed "A Bonus to Subscribers."

JACKSON, MISS.

Yesterday evening Mrs. C. E. Wright entertained The Mary Erwin W. C. T. U., of Jackson, in a delightful sociable, with refreshments and good cheer generally. Our Union is flourishing despite the ominous growls of the blind tigers in our midst. There's a petition going around in Hinds county for a whisky election, which we hope will fail to get the required number of signers.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT.

We ended our first round at Pelican on Sunday, April 23, and have to report the prospects encouraging for a good work for the year. The preachers are all hopeful and zealous, and the officials and membership seem disposed to second the efforts of their pastors. While some class leaders were found, not a single class meeting could be discovered, though there is some hope that this most useful means of grace, and so necessary to genuine Methodism, will be revived in the bounds of the district. We held the quarterly love-feast at every point except two, where we were providentially hindered, and found Methodists of mature years who, strange to say, had never been in such a service before. God signally blessed us all in these glorious love-feasts. Calling of mourners and altar service was had after the sermons, and with gracious results. On the cold Sunday we were with Bro. J. M. Brown and a select crowd, with whom we held service, at Grand Cane.

Notwithstanding all the indifference and worldliness of our people, we may honestly report the Shreveport district as being on rising ground. We thank God and take courage, beginning our second round next Sunday at Texas Avenue Church, and purposing, God willing, to hold two Conferences each week.

J. A. PARKER.

A BIG FIRE.

MR EDITOR: You have doubtless seen some notice of our big fire. Every business house, save one small one, several cabins, and a number of barns and outhouses, besides both passenger and freight depots, and the express office, all burned last Wednesday at noon. Possibly a third is covered by insurance, but the loss is heavy. Methodist people are the greatest losers.

I have seen larger fires in larger places, but I never saw a whole town burn before.

This is another blow to our already crippled Methodism. With an unfinished church, a parsonage debt of six hundred dollars, Conference collections about one-fourth of last year's assessment, together with even sadder complications not necessary to mention, I am sure the outlook is not very encouraging.

The town burned down in about an hour and fifteen minutes.

Somebody please write me what to do. Remember us at a throne of grace. J. E. CUNNINGHAM.

CHRISTIAN WOMANHOOD.

BY REV. W. C. BLACK, D. D.

The above-named work has had a sale of nearly six thousand. From the many scores of highly commendatory notices that have appeared in the church papers, we present the following:

"We hope it will be read by every woman in the church."—Florida Advocate.

"It is the best thesaurus of facts concerning womanhood with which we are acquainted. The author has evidently given painstaking thought and care to the preparation of this volume. After showing the degraded condition of woman under the highest pagan civilizations, he demonstrates that it was Christianity that began to raise her to higher levels, and that since the Reformation the good work has been going forward. We wish thousands of women to read this excellent volume."—Dr. C. F. Deems.

The price is $1, and we will send it postpaid on receipt of that sum. But to that select class who subscribe for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we make the following special offer: Pay your subscription one full year in advance, and send us sixty cents additional, and we will send you the book postpaid.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of Swamp-Root.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of untiring scientific research by the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, Dr. Kilmer, and has truly wonderful powers in curing kidney, liver, bladder and uric acid diseases.

Kidney trouble is responsible for more sickness and sudden deaths than any other disease, and is so deceptive that thousands have it without knowing it.

Your kidneys filter your blood and keep it pure, that's what they are there for. You are well when your kidneys are well.

Thousands owe their health and even life to Swamp-Root and thousands more can be made well who to-day think themselves beyond help if they will take Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

By special arrangement with the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and to prove for yourself the wonderful and prompt curative powers of this great discovery every reader will be sent by mail, prepaid, a free sample bottle and with it a book telling more about Swamp-Root and containing some of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured.

Please mention that you read this generous offer in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can get the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes at the drug stores or of medicine dealers. Make a note of the name, SWAMP-ROOT, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and remember it is prepared only by Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

THE BOOK OPENED;

OR, AN ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE.

BY ALFORD NEVIN, D. D.

PRICE, $1.50.

This is indeed a most valuable work, written especially for Sabbath-school and Bible class teachers, scholars, and all who feel the need, as it is believed many do, of a convenient and comprehensive volume to which they can at any time turn for information to aid them in understanding and defending the Word of God. It has been prepared to serve in this direction as a manual, to which recourse can be had with confidence and comfort, for explanations which might be found elsewhere, but only after research involving great expenditure of time and means. The author is a man of learning and talent, and has written an eloquent volume. All who read the book will be delighted with it. Read what is said of it by the religious press of the country.

"The work is one of universal merit and contains a vast amount of valuable information."—American Christian Review.

"It is a universal compendium in which may be found explanations of many things and much information."—The Church Union, New York City.

"As an aid to Bible students this is a desirable volume."—The Christian Standard, Cincinnati, O.

This most excellent book we will send, postpaid, for $1 to any subscriber who will pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz., to May, 1900. To non-subscribers we will send it at the publisher's price—$1.50. Address

DREAMING OF HOME.

BY EUGENE FIELD.

It comes to me often in silence,
When the firelight sputters low—
When the black, uncertain shadows
Seem wraiths of long ago;
Always with a throb of heartache,
That thrills each pulsive vein,
Come the old, unquiet longing,
For the peace of home again.

I'm sick of the roar of cities,
And of the faces cold and strange;
I know where there's warmth and welcome,
And my yearning fancies range
Back to the dear old homestead,
With an aching sense of pain;
But there'll be joy in the coming,
When I go home again.

When I go home again! There's music
That never may die away.
And it seems the hands of angels,
On a mystic harp at play,
Have touched with a yearning sadness
On a beautiful broken strain,
To which is my fond heart wording,
"When I go home again."

Outside of my darkened window
Is the great world's crash and din,
And slowly the Autumn shadows
Come drifting, drifting in,
Sobbing, the night wind murmurs
To the splash of the Autumn rain;
But I dream of the glorious greeting
When I go home again.

"ALWAYS ROOM AT THE TOP."

"Always room at the top," is a notable sentiment of Daniel Webster—almost as famous as his "Liberty and Union." The story goes that some one, presumably a young man with an ambition, asked him whether there were room in the legal profession for more aspirants; to which Webster made the memorable reply: "There is always room at the top."

The superior men, the men ready to take the greatest positions and fulfill large obligations, the men trained from bottom to top of a business in thoroughness, and from east to west in knowledge of its possibilities, will always be few, and generally fewer than the places waiting to be filled.

In the advancing era of probable prosperity before us, this will be likely to be more and more the case. He who looks abroad at the great schemes already afoot, and who has a little imagination of the things which are to come, will have good ground for thinking that, in the next decade or score of years, the "top" sphere, the call for superior service, will be stronger than ever before.

Two examples and illustrations are right at hand, and in two widely different spheres. There are some five or six college presidencies which are now vacant, notably that of Yale college, bereft of her worthy President Dwight; and these colleges look about, apparently in vain, to find suitable men. Now, we do not suppose there is really lack of good, reliable timber to make into great university presidents, but it is not forthcoming. There are doubtless such men, just as there was a Day, unknown to the nation, but upon whom President McKinley had his eye, for a great position. But these men are not forthcoming, and if one has the timber in him to take President Dwight's place, the place is waiting for the right man.

In another line, the newspapers have been pointing out another "top" sphere where there is plenty of room. A paper lying before us says of a navy yard: "Some forty laborers will be discharged from the department of construction and repair, by reason of lack of work at present." But the very next column, in strong lines, we read: "Good jobs for the right men," with the subhead, "Government examiners failed to find master workmen for directing three kinds of navy-yard work." Not a single one of the many applicants who took the examinations for the positions of master machinist for shop work, master machinist for work afloat, and master coppersmith, came up to the government qualifications for the positions, and none was recommended for the vacant places by the examining Board.

"This is a sad disappointment to the officials at the yard, particularly those in steam engineering, as they wish, and so does the navy department, to have that branch thoroughly organized for active operations at the earliest moment, so that work can be done with the greatest expedition, and more important construction undertaken than is being done at present.

"In view of the situation, Rear Admiral Howison has requested the navy department to take some additional step in the matter of appointments immediately. Local men are wanted, and should have the positions, if possible; but if local men are not qualified, or such as are qualified do not apply, why, others must be appointed."

All this should not fail to make its impression upon everybody, especially young men and instructors of young men, and of young women, too. And it certainly makes advisable what young men of discernment and sagacity have sometimes done—to take an extra year of work, after graduation, in the departments of life for which they are preparing. Prepare to be an at-the-top man. Two requisites are essential for these important places:—first, the most absolute equipment for the place possible, is knowledge of principles, details, the business itself, and its relation to the world at large; and, second, a vitalizing energy and supervision which, knowing the business perfectly, shall move it and everyone connected with it forward, to fulfill its purposes and to accomplish desirable results. Neither one of these alone will suffice; both will make a man essential in his sphere.—Success.

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT,

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living

LITERATURE AND CHILD-LIFE.

As far as any real advantage to mind and thought is concerned, much of the reading done by children might better be omitted altogether. Particularly pernicious is the enervating and tasteless pap usually offered to children under the name of "juvenile literature," which, with its commonplace treatment of commonplace themes, its presentation of the child to itself as a hero, its preoccupation with the immature stage of life and thought, deals with the child on its own level merely, ill exercising the child's mind in real power of thought, and ill preparing it for maturity. The reading given to children should always be of a quality sufficiently high to afford the adult mind entertainment or nourishment. There need be no fear that such reading will be beyond the child's comprehension. The normal child is far keener to appreciate and understand the best in literature than is commonly supposed, and should have it as a necessary part of training. A background of good literature, absorbed at home, not as a task, but as a spontaneously sought pleasure, gives that touch of distinction, that breadth and ease, that denote culture, and that are painfully lacking in the average student.—Kate Holladay Claghorn, Ph. D., in "College Training for Women."

SMALL COURTESIES.

One evening last week I entered a room where several young people, with books and work, were sitting around the lamp. The young man with the lexicon and the grammar on the table before him was the busiest of the group; and he instantly arose and remained standing until I had taken my seat. The little action was automatic. The habit of this family is to practice small courtesies, and the boys have been trained from childhood to pay deference to women.

Equally charming are the manners of the girls in the home I speak of—gentle, soft spoken, appreciative, considerate and reverential. To old people they are tender, to children kind, to each other lovely.

One can not too sedulously look after the small courtesies in one's conduct, and, if one be charged with the management of a household, in the accustomed ways of the family. Habits count for everything here, and example is better than precept.—Margaret E. Sangster.

NAPOLEON LOST THE BATTLE OF LEIPSIC because of a fit of indigestion. One dose of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL would have given him instant relief, and the fate of the kingdoms of Europe been decided differently. It is really marvelous how quickly a colicky pain will vanish when a teaspoonful of Mul-en-ol in a wine-glass of hot water is taken. Try it; you will never suffer from colic.

A MOTHER'S FAMILY PRAYER.

When we had laid the body of the husband and father to rest, and night grew apace, my three little fatherless boys, with eyes brimming with tears and voice trembling, said: "Oh, who will talk to Jesus every night for us now, mama?"

I felt my own nothingness, and could only breathe a prayer for help. As if in answer, I did, with great effort at self-control, 'tis true, read a few verses of the 130th Psalm, kneeling with my children and repeating the Lord's Prayer together. Thus began, and has continued with unabated interest, our daily seeking the grace sufficient. The children do not seem to think it "tiresome" when they all take part, asking questions which I try to answer the very best I can.—A Mother in Christian Observer.

"IF YOU LOVE ME, TELL ME SO."

There is a pretty story told concerning the late Dr. Dale. He was traveling, I think, in the colonies. Speaking on one occasion of the relation of a pastor to his congregation, and pleading for a freer reciprocity of feeling between them, he said that he often felt inclined to say to his own people, "If you love me, tell me so." The little speech reached England sooner than did the speaker, and when some months later the Doctor entered the hall in Birmingham in which a "welcome home" had been arranged for him, almost the first object that met his eyes was a large scroll across one end of the building, "We love you, and we tell you so."—George Jackson.

"You are to make the most of your life by looking for the bright side of every event.

"You are to do your work, whatever it may be, with good-natured willingness, since smiles will be of more service to you than scowls.

"You are to bear your burden not grimly nor sullenly, but as cheerfully as a hopeful faith that 'everything that is right' will allow.

"You are to be the servant of Providence, and if you can help your neighbor, you must needs regard it as a privilege to do so.

"You are to remember that when you go hence you will leave behind everything except your character, and that, therefore, the character is to be carefully formed and vigilantly guarded."

"These are simple rules, but they will keep you busy until you are summoned by death to another and a better life."—N. Y. Herald.

We call it death; we make it death—a separation. We leave off there. We gather up the tools that our loved ones drop, and use them to carve out, selfishly, our own pleasures; we let their life go as if it were no matter to keep it up upon the earth. We turn our backs, and go our ways, and leave saints' hands outstretched invisibly in vain.—A. D. T. Whitney.

Hygiene.

CIGARETTES.

Suppose a boy has a lot of cigarettes and smokes a few of them every day. Is there any injury in this? I can tell you, for I have had such boys for patients. Such smoking, even in so-called moderation (as if there were any such thing as moderation in stimulants for the young!), will do three things for him: 1. It will run his pulse up to one hundred, or more, per minute. 2. It will reduce his weight below the healthy standard. 3. It will reduce his strength and general vitality, as will appear in his pale complexion and his diminished appetite. . . . Cigarette smoking is one of the worst habits physically that a boy can form. It injures the heart and digestion, and it tends to check the growth. It gives a lad false notions, and it does not bring him into good company.—Harper's Young People.

A MORNING DRINK.

A glass of water should always be taken the first thing in the morning. It exercises a twofold advantage. First of all, when sipped slowly, it acts as a stimulator to the excretory organs. Secondly, during sleep a great deal of mucus is secreted by the membrane lining the mouth and other organs of the alimentary canal, and this morning drink removes it. Many a morning headache will be cured if this habit is carefully and systematically carried out.—Selected.

Alcohol is not only a poison, with special affinity for the brain, but it is a poison with a fish-hook barb—it can only go in, it can not be pulled out without tearing the flesh.—Joseph Cook.

SPROLE—On Sunday morning, March 12 1899 in Springfield, La., the spirit of Mrs. MARGRET SPROLE (nee Margret Patterson) took its flight.

Mrs Sprole was seventy-five years of age the second of March. Hers was a devoted life of Christian love. Not a sweeter, purer type of Christian faith has it ever been my privilege to know. All associated with her could but feel the silent, divine influence of her sweet life and godly words. Many, many were the quiet, happy Summer hours we spent together, and now, as I recall her saintly smiles and lovely words, my heart grows sad, for never again on earth shall I hear those sweet, gentle tones. How she is missed only those who knew and loved her can tell; none so well as the pure, faithful daughter, her constant attendant and staff of her declining years. God called Mrs. Sprole home to himself, took her from her earthly pains, and placed her in a fairer, brighter home above. Can we wish to call her back? It is meet that the aged Christian should be called home. After a long life spent in our blessed Master's service it is not for us to desire to stay the stern, relentless hand of death when, through it, our loved, lost one is to be given a crown of righteousness that fadeth not away.

O Maggie, weep not for your precious, saintly mother! Lonely, ah, yes, how lonely your heart must be! Every fragrant flower bears to you memories of her blossoming, fruitful life. The little birdies' notes remind you of mother. Her life was one of sacred song. Every breeze wafts to you thoughts of her calm, holy spirit. Even the sound of your own footstep echoing through the silent rooms brings to memory the sound of another's silenced forever. Yes, I know you feel and realize her loss; but when the sad tears dim your eye, when the heartache grows so painful, and fond recollection searches the silent hall of the past, on, let the thought that mother is not dead—only sleeping—crowd out all bitter thoughts. God loved her, and does all things well.

Ah, mourn not; he said, "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter." "He giveth his beloved sleep." Your mother is living. "He that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." A crown of righteousness is laid up for all who are "faithful unto the end," and your mother was faithful unto death. In the bright, celestial home she has met those gone before, and now waits and watches for loved ones left behind. Seems to me that I can almost see her as she so lovingly, so tenderly, so earnestly, so eagerly beckons to her loved children to meet her in the city whose gates are of pearl, whose walks are of jasper, and whose streets are paved with gold, and where her beloved voice joins in the grand, triumphal chorus sung by the angels and archangels around the great white throne on high: "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty! Holy, holy, holy, merciful and mighty! God in three persons, blessed Trinity!" where the Sun of Righteousness shineth about her forever and forevermore.

ROSA TABOR.

ENOCHS—Mr. CANNOLL ENOCHS, son of Judge John R. Enochs and Polly Steen, was born Feb. 7, 1815; moved to Lawrence county, Miss., with his father from Bedford county, Tenn., about the year 1820, where his father lived two years; hence in the year 1822 he was brought to Rankin county. When about seven years of age he married and settled on Monntain Creek, a few miles south of Steen's Creek, not more than one-half mile from his last resting-place; consequently he spent seventy-seven years of his eventful life in a radius of one mile.

One of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of our county has passed away. Enochs and Steens. These two families have contributed much to the history of Rankin county. They have lived contemporary with Hon. T. N. Nowell and Sam Savier. When these two old gentlemen pass away the pioneers and patriarchs of by-gone days will pass into history.

Bro. Enochs was a man of strong constitution true to his friends, just to his enemies; and the highest regard for honor.

Bro. Enochs leaves a family of six children, viz.: Mrs. Mary and Mrs. W. D. Steens, of Steens Creek; Mrs. West, of Copiah county; Judge and John R. Enochs, of Brandon; Sam Enochs, of Jackson, and the Rev. K. S. Enochs, of Jonesville, La., a member of the Louisiana Conference. We buried him at the family burial-ground on Monday, the twentieth of March, 1899, to wait the final resurrection at the judgment day.

ARTHUR—Sister LOUISA ARTHUR was seventy-six years of age when called by her Lord, March 12, 1899, to enter the door of the invisible world. She was born in Germany, and came to New Orleans fifty years ago. She was married to Jonathan Arthur, and in this couple God granted two sons and one daughter, the last one of whom is the only surviving member of this broken household. She came to the Methodist Church from the Lutherans, Sept. 26, 1869. In 1896 she had a stroke of paralysis, and on Sept. 24 1898, she was prostrated, and for more than five months she suffered patiently the will of her Lord. Her membership in the church was not an empty name, but a vital fact. When she could no longer attend its services by herself, a friend aided her, so that she was enabled to fulfill her cherished wish. Two days before her decease her former pastor administered the sacrament to her, in which she solemnly and heartily joined. In her character we had the truest, the most beautiful and scriptural display of personal religion. She knew whom she believed. Of this her profession spoke in the most endearing and lasting terms. Her end was one of peace, and without a struggle she was not, for God took her.

GLEASON—Whereas, It has pleased our heavenly Father, in his wisdom, to remove from our midst by death our beloved sister, Mrs. ROSA GLEASON; therefore, be it Resolved, By our Foreign Missionary Society of McNutt, Miss., that we have lost one of our most faithful, earnest and useful Christian workers. She was ever ready to do any and everything to advance the Master's cause and build up the church she so dearly loved. She was a joy in her home, a blessing to the poor and everyone with whom she came in contact. Her life and character was beautiful, full of charity, hospitality and love, professing Christ by every word and deed. We will miss her words of cheerfulness, Christian counsel and influence in our work for the Master, and we deeply mourn our loss. It leaves a vacancy that can not be filled.

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved husband, children and relatives our tenderest sympathy, hoping they may find consolation in Him who doeth all things well.

MRS. E. E. ITKW, for Com.

PATTISON—WILLIAM W. PATTISON was born in Baltimore, Sept. 4, 1835; moved to Louisiana at the close of the war; married Miss Nannie Gullott, Sept. 27 1866. She died Nov. 19, 1881, leaving him five children. In 1884 he was married to Miss Dutton, and in 1893 moved to Mineola, Texas, where he lived until his death, which occurred March 23, 1899. He was for many years a consistent member of the M. E. Church, South. His home was ever open to the ministers of his beloved church.

In his death our town has lost a true friend and counselor, his pastor a loyal and devoted brother, his wife and children a loving husband and tender father. He has only left us for a few brief years. We, together with his bereaved wife and children, will soon join him in the "beautiful beyond." May the faith that sustained him in his dying hour bring peace to the bereaved loved ones!

BRASWELL—Little BERTHA E. BRASWELL, daughter of Rev. J. A. and M. E. Braswell, died at Drwood, Miss., Jan. 16, 1899, aged two years four months and thirteen days.

Our little darling was sick two weeks with croup, but not seriously until Saturday before she died. Monday, nine o'clock A. M., her suffering was intense, but patiently she bore it all, and bid us all previous to her sickness that she was going to live with papa someday, who preceded her just thirteen months. She was the life of our sad home, caused by the death of our dear husband and father; but we, as the remnant of the family left on earth, will lean on Him who is able to sustain us in this trying time; and while mama, sister and three little brothers mourn her loss, we wait till God, in his own good time, will call us to come up higher where parting is no more, on the happy golden shore. Oh, glorious thought!

DEAFNESS CAN NOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

SOCRATES died from a cup of poison administered by the hand of a friend. How many in this land have died by poisonous remedies given by friendly hands to combat diseases? It is quite a comfort to know that when giving DICKS' CHILLIFUGE there is not a drop of poison in a bottle full of this beneficent remedy.

A Great Combine

Trusts and Combines in many lines of production, and controlling the output of many factories, have recently been formed, some Capitalized at Millions and other similar organizations are projected. It is not our purpose to discuss here the influence of these trusts, whether beneficial to public interests or otherwise; but we wish to announce to our readers that which is not prejudicial to any interests, but which, on the contrary, is directly in favor of every reader of this paper.

HERE IS THE PLAN

A splendid illustrated MONTHLY, devoted to the causes of Methodism throughout this broad land and called THE AMERICAN ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE, is published in St. Louis, with offices in New York and Chicago. It is the peer of the best of the popular magazines in illustration, literature, and typographical excellence, and is designed to be to the Methodist membership of about six millions in America, what the popular secular magazine is to the general reading public. The Magazine is not a competitor of any of the other Church periodicals; it is general in its scope. It is the ONLY ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE PUBLISHED MONTHLY IN THE UNITED STATES, and occupies a field distinctly its own. Its aims and purposes are of the highest. Its ideals are: "THE PUREST IN LITERATURE, THE HIGHEST IN ART, THE NOBLEST IN METHODISM. It is a worthy exponent of the great Church it so ably represents.

Some Opinions of Representative Methodists, North and South.

"The American Illustrated Methodist Magazine should be welcomed by the whole Methodist household. It occupies a field entirely its own. Many a number will contain matter worth ten times the subscription price." —Bishop Charles C. McCabe.

"Fair, sweet-toned, appetizing." —Bishop C. P. Fitzgerald.

"Our common Methodism is to be congratulated on this valuable accession to our periodical treasures. I hope every Christian will have this beautiful Magazine." —Bishop John P. Hurst.

"It takes rank with the best for its varied and rich table of contents. A valuable auxiliary to our Epworth League work." —Bishop E. R. Hendrix.

"A gem among the monthlies of our land." —T. Berry Smith, Central College, Fayette, Mo.

W. T. Harris, of Washington, D. C., United States Commissioner of Education, has this to say of a recent number: "It is one of the most remarkable magazine numbers that I have seen for a long time, and I beg leave to enclose two dollars for two regular subscriptions. I congratulate you."

The Press, Denominational and Secular, Speak in Highest Terms.

"A future of gratifying success and large usefulness is assured it." —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"The contributions compare well with those of any other Magazine of the day and its illustrations are excelled by none." —Pittsburg (Pa.) Daily News.

"Interesting and attractive, not only to Methodists but also to the general reading public, for the matter which fills the pages is of a character broader than the little world indicate." —Columbus (O.) Dispatch.

"The prospectus of the Magazine indicates that there is an abundant feast of good things in store for its readers; but the Magazine itself is better than any prospectus." —The Pittsburg (Pa.) Times.

"The scholarship of the Magazine is insured by the editorship of Revs. James W. Lee and Marshall Lancaster, who are known and loved in St. Louis and throughout the West." —St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"It compares favorably with the best of them, and has a brilliant success from the beginning." —Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.

"We most heartily commend it to our people as a high grade periodical, worthy to take its place in every Methodist home." —New Orleans Christian Advocate.

"It will aim to advocate and magnify the things which world-wide Methodism holds in common, and especially to be a factor in the cultivation of fraternal relations between the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." —Central Christian Advocate.

"The letter press is superb, the illustrations first-class and the reading matter thoroughly instructive, entertaining and edifying." —Pennsylvania Methodist.

"A triumph of literary talent and mechanical art." —St. Louis Christian Advocate.

"We welcome it, relish it and recommend it." —Western Christian Advocate.

"It takes high rank with the best periodical literature of the day." —Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

"We cannot but give to the Magazine our best wishes, and hope for it great success." —Texas Christian Advocate.

To these might be added hundreds of testimonials from Church officials, pastors and laymen, North and South, all praising the Magazine for its intrinsic worth and its lofty purpose.

"THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF METHODISM," which is being published serially in the Magazine, is a feature of marked interest, and is alone worth the subscription price; but the History is only one of the many interesting and artistic features of each number.

Every Methodist family should be a subscriber. Its price is so small all can afford it, but in combination with this paper an opportunity is offered to secure both publications for little more than the cost of one alone.

The subscription price of THE AMERICAN ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE is $1.00 a year; the subscription price of this paper is $2.00 a year. We will supply BOTH one year for $2.65 in advance.

This is our GREAT COMBINE—a TRUST organized solely in the interests of our readers, and which they are invited to join. Do not delay.

THIS OFFER WILL EXPIRE JUNE 1.

Take notice that in order to get the benefit of this offer you must first pay all arrearages. In order to ascertain the amount of your arrearage, look at the label on your paper and count the months from the date there given to May, '99. Then send 16⅔ cents for each month. Add to this $2.65.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The Illinois Central Road has at length accepted what it asked for, the franchise privilege along the river front.

While the number of children and youth in the United States is 21,082,472, the total enrollment of American Sunday-schools is but 9,718,432.

Almost the entire $5,000,000 that the citizens of St. Louis have proposed to raise to clinch the proposition of holding a World's Fair there is in sight.

Susan B. Anthony, although nearly 80 years old, announces that she will attend the international council of women in London next June. This will be her second visit abroad.

During the last few weeks Lady Henry Somerset has been occupied at Eastnor Castle, England, in modeling a statuette of her close friend and fellow worker in the temperance cause, the late Miss Frances Willard.

On May 8 will occur the opening of the State Fair. The day has been chosen as the date of the Peace Jubilee to celebrate the victory achieved by American arms in the war with Spain and the return of peace.

An approximate calculation places the total expenditures of the treasury, on account of the war with Spain, from the beginning of the war preparations, in March of last year, up to the present time, at $276,000,000.

A noted case in which the salaries of public school teachers and portresses, unpaid for from 15 to 19 years back, were involved was decided by the Supreme Court of Louisiana in favor of the teachers, the high court ordering that the salaries be paid. Chief Justice Nicholls handed down the decision.

The United States Government having notified Spain that it was prepared to pay the $20,000,000 indemnity for the surrender of Spanish sovereignty in the Philippines, and the Spanish Government having signified its readiness to receive the money through the French Ambassador, the Treasury officials at Washington paid the amount on May 1.

A terrible tornado passed across the country, April 27, near the line of Missouri, causing great destruction of property and loss of life. The destruction of human life is believed to be not less than 100 persons. The prostrating of the telegraph lines makes it difficult to get details, but the indications are that the storm was more than ordinarily severe and terrible in its consequences.

The Secretary of State has notified the American Minister to Nicaragua, who is now at Bluefields, that the Nicaragua Government will not be allowed to collect double duties on goods imported by Americans during the recent rebellion. He has been instructed to inform General Torres, the Nicaraguan governor at Bluefields, that the sums paid under protest must be refunded, and that all attempts to collect duties already paid by Americans must cease.

Governor-General Brooke proposes to bring the matter of the payment of the Cuban troops to a head immediately. He has sent a request to General Maximo Gomez that the latter and the junta of consulting Cuban generals should come at once to a decision as to whether the Cuban muster rolls are to stand as now made up or are to be reduced, as General Gomez has been expecting. If he could consult his own desires, General Brooke would pay $100 per man to such as are entitled to share in the $3,000,000, but General Gomez continues to vouch for 39,930 troops, and payment will be begun without further delay on that basis.

Although the dismemberment of China has for some time been a foregone conclusion, the actual process of dividing it up has been delayed by a failure on the part of the claimants for the spoils to agree upon a basis of division. Russia, Germany, France and Great Britain have been established at various points on the Chinese coast, but there was no agreement as to the respective spheres of influence within which each was to operate without interference from the others. According to the latest European dispatches, the two principal claimants for China's spoils, namely, Great Britain and Russia, have finally reached an agreement as to the parts of China they desire to exploit.

While it is the general expectation among Americans that the Filipino emissaries will return with revised proposals from General Antonio Luna, Major-General Otis is not letting this prospect interfere with his preparations for pushing the war. He has ordered Major-General Lawton to return to Angat, a few miles northwest of Norzagaray, and not to advance aggressively while the negotiations are pending. General MacArthur is apparently acting on the same policy, but he is repairing bridges and strengthening the lines within a quarter of a mile of the enemy. The possibilities of peace are gratifying to a great majority of the army who have regarded the war as an unpleasant duty that must be performed according to American traditions.

Legacy to a Southern College.

By the will of Miss Melissa Baker, of Baltimore City, five thousand dollars has been left to the Randolph-Macon Woman's College at Lynchburg, Va., to be added to its scholarship and aid funds. By the last official report of the U. S. Commissioner of Education this institution is classed in Division A as one of the fourteen leading colleges for women in the U. S., being the only representative of the South on the list. Though the youngest on the roll, it stands in the middle of the list as to resources and numbers.

HAPPINESS.

BY REV. J. L. SCOTT, D. D.

If happy thou dost wish to be,
Come listen while I tell to thee
The thing that thou must do;
To-morrow's cares fling far away,
And live within the present day
Just as it comes to you.

If, backward looking, thou dost see
Some foolish thing once done by thee,
Give heed to what I say;
Don't linger long upon the sight,
But bring to view some object bright,
And try to look that way—

The buried past do not recall,
The future yet is not at all,
Our days we live but one;
So hail the present as a friend,
And speed it on unto the end—
'Tis thus the thing is done.

LOUISVILLE LETTER.

The Church Extension Board held its annual meeting in this city last week, and the session was a very satisfactory one. The financial exhibit was in keeping with that of previous years, and the Board is very much gratified with the admirable work being done by its efficient secretary, Dr. P. H. Whisner. His selection was providential, and the General Conference could not have made a wiser choice. Painstaking, diligent, careful, and judicious, no man could so well have filled the place left vacant by our lamented Dr. Morton. Most of the pulpits of the city were filled last Sunday by the Bishops. Bishop Candler preached a great sermon in the Walnut Street Church to my congregation in the morning, and Bishop Granbery delighted my people with one of his pure gospel sermons at night. We all regretted Bishop's Keener's absence, and our sympathies and prayers are with him in the sorrows that have come to him.

On Sunday, Sam Jones began a three weeks' meeting in Louisville, from which we hope for and expect great results. He will be assisted by George Stuart, who will arrive on Thursday. A large tent, with a seating capacity of between four and five thousand, has been erected in an eligible location, and last night there were very many more present than could be seated. If any city in this country needs such a stirring up as Sam Jones can give it, it is our Kentucky metropolis. The one thousand saloons of Louisville are open twenty-four hours every day and seven days in the week, while the Sunday theaters are the curse of our young men. The efforts of the pastors and churches of the city to stem this tide of iniquity have so far been fruitless, and if Bro. Jones can rouse public sentiment on the question, and start a reformation that will restrain the liquor traffic and promote the observance of the Sabbath, his coming will be a great blessing.

A number of the leading churches of this city—none of whom are Methodist, I am glad to say—have distillers and wholesale whisky dealers among their prominent members. A recent revival in the largest Baptist Church in Louisville, of which Dr. Eaton, editor of the Baptist Recorder, is pastor, roused the consciences of the members to such an extent that they called a church meeting and passed a resolution that the distillers and whisky dealers who hold membership in that church must either quit their business within twelve months or withdraw from the church. Henry Watterson, editor of the Courier-Journal, came out in a long double-leaded editorial, denouncing the action of the church, and claiming that whisky selling was a legitimate business, and by no means debarred a man from being a Christian! So you can have some conception of the sentiment in this city and State when the leading newspaper takes such a position.

Louisville Methodism is, however, earnest and aggressive, and our position on this and kindred questions is well known. While we have had no great revival in any of our churches this year, protracted services have been held in all of them, with good results. There have been several hundred conversions and additions, and we trust that by the close of the year we will be able to report a large increase. Very considerable material progress has been made this year, and, in fact, I know of no city where Southern Methodism is making more advance in church and parsonage building. The new Broadway Church, a handsome stone edifice, was completed last year; the Marcus Lindsey Memorial Church, a beautiful building in the northeastern part of the city, is nearing completion; the Fourth Avenue congregation will soon begin work on a new church, which, when completed, will be one of the handsomest in the city; and plans are consummated for the erection of a new church, to be called the Rivers' Memorial, in the southeastern section of the city. Work is also about to begin on a ten-thousand-dollar addition to our Methodist Orphans' Home, which is the property of the two Conferences in Kentucky. Last year three new parsonages were built in the city, and a district parsonage was bought, and the plans are about consummated for the purchase of a parsonage for the West Broadway Church, which will give a parsonage to every church in Louisville. Louisville Methodism has thirteen churches, with a total membership of 4,673.

An interesting meeting in Louisville next week will be the Southern Baptist Convention, which will have about a thousand delegates in attendance. This is the largest annual gathering of any religious body in the South, and in addition to the delegates, attracts a large number of visitors. Besides the associational delegates, there is one delegate for every $250 given for missions. The Whitsitt controversy will, doubtless, come up again, and while Dr. Whitsitt has resigned his presidency of the seminary, many of his friends are opposed to the acceptancy of his resignation.

On the seventh and eighth of June we are to have a great meeting of Kentucky Methodists in Louisville in the interests of the Twentieth Century Movement. Bishops Galloway and Hendrix will be present, as will also several of our connectional men, and we hope to have our preachers and laymen greatly stirred on the educational question. We have already inaugurated a vigorous campaign, and expect to realize great results. The Louisville Educational Board has called on our Conference to raise $62,500, with which to fully equip the institutions we already have, and possibly to establish others. We have a Vanderbilt Training-school at Elkton, which is a splendid plant, and one of the best academies in the South. The Louisville Conference is one of the patronizing Conferences of the Vanderbilt University, and this school is correlated with that institution. Logan Female College, at Russellville, is also the property of our Conference, and is a finely-equipped and flourishing school. The Kentucky Wesleyan College, at Winchester, is the property of the Kentucky Conference, and under the efficient presidency of Dr. E. H. Pearce is doing admirable work.

The NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE has been a visitor to my home so long that I would feel very lonely without it. In every issue I find many familiar names, and it recalls every week the friends and associations of my boyhood and youth. How sweet are the memories of the past, and how strong the chains which bind us to them!

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Brookhaven District Conference of the Mississippi Annual Conference of the M. E. Church, South, convened in Brookhaven, Miss., on the morning of April 27, 1899; Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, D. D., P. E., in the chair. Robt. Selby was elected secretary. Committees were appointed to report on important matters pertaining to the welfare of the church in the district, and some strong resolutions were adopted, one of which deserves special mention, viz: that with regard to the United States Senator-elect, Roberts, from Utah. It was the unanimous opinion of the Conference that we should make a special appeal to our representatives in Congress to do their utmost to prevent Mr. Roberts being allowed a seat in this great representative body in the United States.

All the interests of the church were jealously and zealously looked into, and with a result that was, in the main, gratifying. Of course, we have not achieved what we desired, but progress is being made in almost every department of work.

Every pastor except one—Rev. J. A. B. Jones—was present, and there was a more general interest manifested on the part of the pastors and delegates in all questions than it has been my pleasure to note in an experience of twelve years. It is proper to state that Bro. Jones' absence was due to the fact that he was in the midst of a revival.

Dr. Featherstun made a good impression upon the Conference, and particularly so as desiring to get at the "bottom of things."

Friday morning, at 11 o'clock, we had with us Rev. H. G. Hawkins, Conference Secretary of Education, who delivered a timely address on Christian education, with special reference to the Twentieth Century Fund. It was predicted that Bro. Hawkins will make a capital secretary of this increasingly important issue of our great church. Dr. Featherstun followed in a strong, practical presentation of the question as it relates to the Brookhaven district.

Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, Bro. Peebles, of McComb, delivered a strong sermon on baptism. Bro. Peebles' sermon was preached by request of the pastor, T. W. Adams, and notwithstanding he preached one hour and twenty minutes, the congregation did not in the least become weary.

Mrs. Featherstun presented the interests of the Woman's Foreign and Home Mission Societies.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: A. C. McNair, S. E. Carruth, H. G. Godbold and J. S. Felder, with J. T. Sudduth and D. B. Hennington as alternates.

All the local preachers in the district had their license renewed, and G. W. Hively was recommended for deacon's orders. John Henry Grice, of Tyro, and Luther W. Felder, of Topisaw, were licensed to preach. Rev. T. H. King, of Adams, was recommended for readmission on trial into the Annual Conference.

Resolutions of thanks for the hospitality of the people of Brookhaven were introduced by V. V. Boone and W. M. Williams, and unanimously adopted.

Bro. Adams, pastor, was careful to see that every member of the Conference had the best home, and, sure enough, we all approved of his assignments.

Tylertown was elected as the place for holding the Conference next year.

The Conference adjourned Saturday afternoon, April 30, with the benediction by the presiding elder.

The following preachers filled the pulpit during the Conference, and to the edification of the congregations: C. A. Powell, J. M. Morse, J. S. Parker, I. L. Peebles, J. D. Ellis, and L. E. Alford.

On the Sabbath, Dr. Featherstun preached in the Methodist Church at 11 o'clock to a large congregation on Christian education. Rev. V. V. Boone occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian Church. In the afternoon there was an Epworth League rally in the church and college chapel, and addresses were made by Dr. Featherstun and Robt. Selby. The writer preached to a very fine congregation in the Methodist Church at 8 o'clock.

Brookhaven is a growing town, and T. W. Adams, the popular pastor, in his indomitable energy, is in favor of the church keeping pace with the material advancement of the town, and to this end he is laboring.

There was a sad vacancy in the proceedings and social feature of the Conference in the absence of one of the noblest and truest men in Mississippi Methodism—Rev. J. W. Chambers, president of Whitworth—on account of illness. His cheerful, hearty laugh and happy spirit was missed by those who know him so well and appreciate him so much. It is to be hoped, and was fervently prayed for, that he will speedily recover from his illness and resume his loved employ. The college, under his administration, is doing a magnificent work for the future of Methodism.

ABOUT PREACHING.

Bishop Hendrix, in the March-April number of The Methodist Review, has some such wise and pertinent remarks on the manner and style of the preacher that I will ask you to reproduce them in your columns. The bearing and tones of some speakers impress one for good as much as any words which might be spoken, while those of others have just the contrary effect. Stephen's countenance, as he "looked up stead fastly into heaven," was a sermon Saul could never forget, and, doubtless, helped to prepare him to meet Jesus by the way. Grimaces, antics, and fierce, foul and slangy denunciations in the pulpit are enough to make devils laugh and angels weep. Surely many of us ought to profit by such words as the following:

"The year that King Uzziah died there was given the vision of the Lord of hosts, whose name is henceforth to be spoken with such frequency and deepest reverence by the lips that were touched with holy fire. Is it any marvel that Isaiah's style should be so faultless when every faculty which can minister to clearness of thought and purity of language had been so fully consecrated? Through speech man's reason finds expression. All his imperial imagination and the strength of his reflective powers must find blossom and fruit in his words. The incense of his heart is waved from the censer of his lips. Men did not need to be told that Isaiah had seen the glory of the Lord, and had been searched through and through by 'the eyes of his glory,' when his words were from that epochal vision reverent with holy memories of the worship of the seraphim. We can not conceive of so noble a manhood and such consecrated genius stooping to the use of the vulgar dialect of slang. Even his most withering denunciations of sin are chaste with the pure flame of righteous indignation becoming an archangel himself. As the two-edged sword which proceeded out of the mouth of Him whom John saw on Patmos was sharp with pure speech, so always are the chosen words which the Holy Ghost uses, piercing to the dividing asunder of the joints and marrow, and proving a discerner of the very thoughts and intents of the heart. Moses, David, Isaiah, Paul—who can doubt that these men had indeed seen God high and lifted up? Their lips were pure with a coal from the altar. Michael had no railing words even for Satan, and thus showed himself accustomed to the language of the court of heaven. Let every minister who presumes to represent that court see to it that his language does not betray him. Of whatever kingdom Billingsgate may be the language, it is not of the court whose speech Isaiah had heard when he saw the Lord sitting upon a throne high and lifted up. The minister whose lips are not clean has not yet received his commission, or has lost it! If he sets the example, he must not wonder that he dwells 'among a people of unclean lips.' It has been the history of many a language that its purity was done more than all else to the vigor and elegance of speech of its great preachers, whether Luther or Wyclif, whether Barrow or Jeremy Taylor. Woe betide the day when the sensational and vulgar style of the pulpit shall repel self-respecting people from the house of God! It is the badge of inferiority in any pulpit, and a confession of the meagerness of the preacher's resources. Besides, it discounts the intelligence of his hearers, as if they were capable only of listening to negro minstrelsy, and not to a symphony or an oratorio. No less of Isaiah than of his Lord could it be said, 'He shall not cry, nor lift up, nor cause his voice to be heard in the street.' The shrill cry of a dervish, more like the cry of a wild beast than the human voice, may be employed to attract attention by one content with the gaping crowd which a dervish is accustomed to draw; but the true preacher, like his Lord, seeks to sow his seed in the intelligence, where it may have depth of earth, and yield a harvest of thirty, sixty, a hundredfold. Isaiah's words, the delight and wonder of the thoughtful mind from John the Baptist, who ceaselessly quoted him to Ambrose and Augustine, to Handel and Tennyson, could never have come from a sensational preacher. Isaiah was the prophet of God, not the smirking, snickering caterer to a mob with itching ears. His words, so fitly spoken as to be like apples of gold in pictures of silver, inspired the translators of our Bible to give them a fitting dress, and have done much to make that translation 'a well of English undefiled.' Elegance of style means simply well-chosen words for the most lucid and forcible expression; and who should cultivate it more conscientiously than the spokesman of God? The Holy Ghost never condescends to speak in the vocabulary of the slums. Let none dare impute ignorance of correct language to the greatest Intelligence in the universe!"

There are preachers who appear to think that our standard of Christ is too much exalted for an ideal, and that by giving up dogma, miracles, the predictive element in prophecy—in a word, all traces of the supernatural—the world would at once embrace the Christian morality and seek to realize the Christian ideal. But, if this is done, how long, we pray thee tell us, will it be before even the Christian morality must go? That the standard professed is so exalted, namely, likeness to Christ, "that instead of attracting the ordinary person to aim at reaching it, it discourages and repels him." This is the last word of unbelief. Christian dogma is unbelievable, and the life that is connected with it can not be lived by the ordinary person. The lesson we learn here is that the supernatural idea involves a supernatural person. Only in the power, strength and help of a once crucified, but now risen and ascended Lord, can the higher life be lived.—Rev. V. E. Huffer.

SOMETHING EACH DAY.

Something ea[illegible]ach
Is not much to give;
And the little gifts of life
Make sweet the days we live.
The world has weary hearts
That we can bless and cheer,
And a smile for every day
Makes sunshine all the year.

Something each day—a deed
Of kindness and of good,
To link in closer bonds
All human brotherhood,
Oh, thus the heavenly will
We may all do while here;
For a good deed every day
Makes blessed all the year.

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

The Holly Springs District and Sunday-school Conference has just closed a delightful session at Pontotoc, Miss. Rev. J. W. Honnoll, P. E., filled the chair brim-full. Rev. J. W. Ramsey did the secretary in fine style. The good people of Pontotoc dispensed abundant and abounding hospitality. The sessions of the Conferences (there were two) were well attended. The interest and attention were perfect. All the preaching done by the brethren of that district was of a high order—sound, strong, earnest, and unctuous. Two sermons were very instructive and edifying—one by Rev. R. M. Davis, and the other by Rev. M. H. Honnoll. Both of these sermons were above the average level of sermons in this day and time. The reports indicated a healthy and growing condition of things in all of the charges. The pastors are all earnest and zealous men, full of industry, and capable of any amount of hard work. They were abounding in hope, faith, and good works. I do not remember ever to have attended a more harmonious, pleasant, and profitable District Conference. The discussions were many, and all on live questions, and some of the speeches were brilliant and strong. The Holly Springs district has a first-class presiding elder, and the charges are served by live and consecrated preachers. The laymen present were true men, and they took an active part in all the proceedings.

It was a matter of general regret that no one was present to represent the claims of "The Twentieth Century Educational Fund," as it deserved to be presented. A speaker caught up on the spur of the moment can not do justice to this great interest. Few men fill themselves full of a subject unless charged with personal responsibility in connection with it. Pontotoc was somewhat inaccessible to those who have qualified themselves for speaking on this great theme. A failure ought not to be allowed to happen in any other case. There is too much at stake. Each district ought to have a man of its own capable and qualified to take the place in cases where the connectional man fails to come.

Rev. W. S. Lagrone came over for one hour to represent the Orphans' Home. He spoke and lifted a collection, and returned to Toccopola to his own District Conference. He brought with him the genial pastor of Oxford, Rev. R. M. Standifer, who grows in grace and good looks.

The love-feast was a feast of love indeed. It was uplifting.

After a sweet sermon by Rev. M. D. Fly, Sunday night, the sacrament was administered by Rev. J. W. Honnoll.

Rev. F. A. Whitson was a visitor, and at home and happy among his former parishioners.

This scribe went down to rest, and to see his old friends of other days.

It was delightful to be at a District Conference free from responsibility, with nothing in the world to do, and at liberty to enjoy the preaching and the association of the preachers and life-long friends.

I am at home rested, refreshed, and ready for work. GILDEROY.

May 1, 1899.

P. S.—The secretary will report the proceedings in his own way.

HOLLY SPRINGS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Holly Springs District Conference has just closed. It was presided over by Rev. J. W. Honnoll. This scribe served as secretary. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. R. M. Davis.

There was a dearth of connectional men, but Revs. W. S. Lagrone and R. M. Standifer were with us for a short while. The former represented the Orphans' Home.

Notwithstanding the absence of connectional officers, the large audiences were edified by excellent sermons by Revs. D. L. Cogburn, M. D. Fly, R. E. Duke, Jas. Porter, and M. H. Honnoll.

Special mention must be made of Rev. R. G. Porter. The people enjoyed the visit and preaching of "Gilderoy."

We had any amount of singing, praying, and preaching. The Conference was one of the most delightful sessions we have had in this district for some time. It was indeed a delightful occasion, and we all were made to "sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus."

We were glad to have the brethren with us. They were benedictions to our homes and our town. May God bless each of them!

"THE PASTOR AND THE EVANGELIST."

MR. EDITOR: Under the above heading Rev. W. D. Bass has an article in your issue of April 27, which I wish to notice briefly. Does Bro. Bass think he can pooh-pooh the action of the preachers of the Durant district out of the minds of the people by a sneer at "an aspiring young brother who thinks he has solved the problem?" Over against this silly sneer I posit the names of the following brethren who participated in the discussion of the evangelist question and voted for the adoption of the paper to which Bro. Bass so seriously objects: W. T. J. Sullivan, D. W. Babb, G. W. Bachman, T. G. Freeman, A. T. Buck. These brethren are almost as venerable for age, experience and wisdom as Bro. Bass, evangelist though he be. The particular point to which Bro. Bass objects is the statement that "the chief glory" of a certain class of evangelists is "the pelf that is in it for them."

Now, Mr. Editor, in the discussion before the "Pastoral and Theological Institute of the Durant District" the methods of one particular evangelist were reviewed on the basis of well-authenticated statements as to matters of fact. As Bro. Bass is thoroughly familiar with the daily life of that particular evangelist, I think it eminently proper that he be allowed to answer the following pertinent questions:

1. Is it not true that the evangelist above referred to received $265 for three weeks' work on Rural Hill circuit in 1896, while the pastor only received $264.25 for twelve months' work? The fourth Quarterly Conference Record for 1896 says, Yes.

2. Is it true that this same evangelist persuaded the pastor at McCool, the same year, to allow him to hold a meeting at that place, and toward the end of the week grew (to say the least) impatient with the people for not paying him what he wanted, and told them publicly that they were "not welcome to his preaching?" A very good and trusted man says, Yes.

3. In that same and other meetings did not this same evangelist threaten the people by saying that he would pray a calamity upon them if they didn't "pay up," and relate instances in which he had done the like? Many good people say, Yes.

4. Did not that same evangelist say to Mr. John Dempsey in Winston county, whose wife was seriously ill with chronic affliction, that if he would pay $20 to the meeting, his wife would get well, and this when he was well assured that she could never be relieved till death from her sufferings? This man and many others say, Yes.

5. Does not this same evangelist abuse many good communities, and offend many good people, and belittle their "work in the Lord"? This is the general consent where I have enquired.

Now, Mr. Editor, if Bro. Bass can answer these and similar questions to the satisfaction of the church, it is in order for him to do so.

W. L. ANDERSON.

PERSONAL REMINISCENCES OF REV. ROBT. B. DOWNER.

About the year 1847 we moved across the river to Algiers. Rev. Crypian Gridley was pastor of the Methodist Church. During a love-feast occasion he threw his gospel net out; so far it caught only two minnows. For a long time I had desired to be a church member; but in those days but little was done to stimulate the action of children to take such action; so, when Bro. Gridley said, "If anybody would like to join the church, make it known by taking his hand," I said to myself: "This is my chance; I am nine years old, and am somebody, if but a little boy, and if he only meant grown folks, I will but be told so when I try and am rejected." Frank Daniels, a few years my senior, was the other minnow caught that day. As I have been informed, he is a superannuated Sunday-school superintendent of Algiers Church, and I a minister of the Mississippi Conference.

When about fourteen years of age, in jumping from a moving, close-coupled buggy, my right knee was caught between the wheels and dislocated. Six months' rest, and it was restored to use. Shortly after getting rid of my crutches, in jumping from a cart, the left ankle was fractured. This accident was followed by typhoid fever and white swelling, and for two years I was a helpless invalid.

I often wondered why I had to suffer as I did, when God's will was my will in everything of an active character. A Presbyterian minister visited me one day and placed in my hands a little book whose title read, "Forty Years Bed-Ridden." It gave account of God's marvelous, sustaining power, given to a helpless, rheumatic woman, oblivious of self, longing to save souls. Its reading extinguished my murmuring spirit, and prepared me for a life-long suffering of God's will. When convalescing, and able to move about the room to a slight degree, one morning my father took me out in the buggy for an airing. I was able to drive, and before reaching home, father remembered that he had a financial engagement that could not be met, if he did not at once go down town. I consented to his absence, and while driving along alone, a drunken drayman, with his dray, collided with my buggy, causing me to be violently thrown to the ground, causing dislocation of right hip. This injury brought me to death's door. Friends, so sure that I was dying, reported me dead. Again my mother's faith said: "No, I would not die. I have God's promise of hearing him preach the gospel." Sister M. J. Deacon, a Methodist Band friend, said: "Sister Downer, you are wrong. God is calling Robert to rest, and you are retaining him by your prayers." Mother replied: "I have God's promise, and it will be fulfilled." Slowly I emerged from the portals of death, with a maimed limb that will never be mended until I get to heaven, and while in this vale of tears, needs the assistance of a crutch and cane.

In 1855 we moved to Forest Home, Pike county, Miss., now Whites Town, on the Illinois Central railroad, 104 miles north of New Orleans.

About 1857 my father persuaded me to believe that I could never be a preacher, crippled as I was, and if I would consent, he would furnish the money and set me up in business in New Orleans. I accepted the offer, and it took but about two months to cure me of the love of money, and home I went again to study for the ministry. My former New Orleans pastors, H. N. McTyeire and Linus Parker, kept me supplied with many valuable volumes of theological character, and encouraged me to prepare myself for God's service. Coming to Mississippi, my mother soon found much to do for Christ.

Topisaw Camp Meeting, before the war, was on the old style. The tenters had servants and an abundance of provisions, and dispensed open hospitality to all who came. Mother sent invitations yearly to her Methodist friends in New Orleans to come to our home, and then, in ox wagon, ride over some fourteen miles to Topisaw. Bro. McTyeire (afterwards Bishop McTyeire), Mrs. Deacon, Harriett Brown, S. S. Equen and daughters Fanny, Annette and Jane, were thus brought in contact with Mississippi Methodism, and rendered valuable service by song and prayer at these meetings.

The Influence of Recent International Events on the Church of the Future.

(Read before Pastoral and Theological Institute of Durant district, and requested for publication.)

From the very nature of this proposition it is one rather of faith than of knowledge. But with unquestioning faith in the ultimate success of the divine plans, and in the virtual triumph of divinely guided humanity, we may aptly interpret the present and forecast the future by the past. And now, standing on this exalted pedestal—the climax of the nineteenth century—and with one foot already well into the vestibule of the more exalted chamber of twentieth-century thought, power, and progress, we may profitably halt and review the facts and surroundings.

Backward we glance down the foot-path of the centuries, through the Christian era, and still back—what do we behold? Prominent among other great facts to the devout student of history—all history is sacred history—are the facts that increased dominion means increased responsibility, and increased labor means increased development and vitality. Amplitude of space contributes to growth, and this, in turn, to weight and cumbrousness; this, finally, to toughness of fiber and beauty and symmetry of form, while friction yields brightness of surface, polish and keenness of edge. All these contribute to the conclusion that whatever of unpleasantness or of added obligation the passing decade has imposed upon us, they will yield "the peaceable fruits of righteousness to those who are exercised thereby."

The religious principle in nations and in churches, as with individuals, knows no limit to development while growth and progress continue. These, however, are necessary even for life. And as with the individual, so the State and Church, magnificent achievement and a high state of vitality can only obtain in the face of formidable opposition. The church certainly may always find such in combating "a multitude of evils;" but so common is the habit of meeting the mild form of this malady that the church pays light attention, unless induced to exert her energies in the event of imminent pending peril. Beauty and excellence are discernable only by contrast, and are the results of great activity. Waves roll highest when the wind bears down strongest. If anyone would like to settle the problem, "Why don't God kill the devil?" let him apply this principle. The most complete and active state of commercial interconrse exists in latitudes where food and comfort are scarcest and hardest to procure. Greatest nations are born of the chrysalis of iron-handed and stony-hearted tyranny, and most striking specimens of human greatness arise out of most adverse environment. Secnrest storm-houses are built where material is most destitute, and most elaborate preparations for Winter are where time is briefest and the mercury stands lowest. All these encourage us to feel assured of the salutary influence of recent international events on the Christian church of the future.

The persecutions of Christians at Jerusalem sent the apostles everywhere preaching the gospel, thus both developing the apostles and spreading Christianity abroad. The disintegrated oligarchy of Romanism provoked Luther to fling his ink-horn at the devil, and aroused a line of reformers, heaven-inspired and hell-opposed, whose adamantine characters are the albion monuments of crystalized glory all over the wide fields of Christendom to-day. Their songs and prayers, lives and sermons are given to the world in "thoughts that breathe and words that burn." They at once filled the chasm between Christ and the world, and erected a porch-way into the great house of twentieth century religious enlargement.

In America, were there deep and thick forests, swollen streams, high mountains and savage hordes to encounter? With the difficult obstacle arose the "saddle-bags brigade," invincible in the face of danger and death. All have succumbed before the "invincibles," who shook the foundations of everything except the immutable Throne by which they stand forever. The vexing slavery question, settling like a dismal shadow of sin athwart the heart and conscience of the church, became the cleaving wedge by which two great ecclesiastical trees have sprung from the same seedling.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE WINONA DISTRICT W. F. M. AND H. M. SOCIETIES, APRIL 15, 1899.

The societies met at Indianola, in the M. E. Church, in a joint session at 11 A. M. Bro. Sanders, preacher in charge at that place, held a consecration service in order that every delegate could be fully prepared to perform the work they had come to do. Each one expressed themselves as being anxious to press onward in the evangelization of darkened countries. The meeting then adjourned by benediction, the W. F. M. to meet at 2 P. M. The meeting was called to order by Mrs. Ben L. Jones reading Psalm xci, after which all joined in singing Hymn No. 121. The president then read an interesting and instructive paper on the needs in foreign fields, especially in Cuba. Reports of delegates were then in order. Winona Auxiliary reported having raised during the year ('98) $392.60; Carrollton, $45.95; Winona Juveniles, $31.97; Carrollton Juveniles, $31.20; Acona, $34.75; Acona Juveniles, $7.65; McNutt, $18.15; McNutt Juveniles, $6.65; Black Hawk, $18.85; Black Hawk Juveniles, $10.50; Greenwood, $49.30; Sunny Side, $25.10; Sunny Side Juveniles, $2; Indianola, $16.85; Sheil Mound, $15; total, $706.52. Balance of report as follows: Number of Advocates taken in the district, 52; number of Little Workers taken in the district, 57; number of adult members, 105; number of juvenile members, 118; 1 day school is supported, 1 bed furnished in hospital, 3 scholarships supported, 1 Bible woman supported, 18 life members, 5 honorary life members. After the reports an interesting letter was read from Laredo, Texas, giving a partial report from the district Bible woman, Dolores Rio, stating the many disadvantages she has to contend with in order to teach the Bible to the Mexicans. Hymn No. 128 was then sung. The president appointed Mesdames Sherbore, Allen and Hanks a Committee on Resolutions. Bros. Ritchie and Sanders were present. They rendered great assistance by their hearty co-operation.

The business session adjourned to meet at 7:30 P. M. in a joint session with the H. M. A meeting of the W. F. M. and H. M. was held. The Minutes of the previous meetings were read and approved, after which a much-appreciated report was read from the president of the W. F. M., which was enjoyed by all present. Several very fine papers were read on the progress and spread of the mission work, after which the committee made their report, which was received. Collection was then taken. McNutt was decided on as the place to hold the next district meeting, April, 1900. The meeting adjourned by benediction.

April 16 Mr. Ritchie preached at 11 A. M. a very fine sermon on F. M. and H. M. work. All present seemed much strengthened in zeal for the cause of God's work. At 2 P. M. the president held a children's meeting, which resulted in organizing a juvenile society with nine members, named the Mary Jones Juvenile. Adjourned with benediction.

MRS. BEN L. JONES, Pres.

MRS. PITTS, Sec.

April 15, 4 P. M., Miss Mary Sweatman, the Winona district secretary, not being present, the district meeting of the H. M. was called to order by Mrs. Walter Trotter. After devotional exercises the presiding officer read the district secretary's report, telling of the work done by the H. M.'s in Mexico, Texas, and Florida. Report of delegates was then made, which was as follows: Winona reported having raised during the year of 1898: Winona Auxiliary, $102 70; Carrollton, $97; McNutt, $54.40; Indianola, $33.30; Vaiden, $180; Vaiden Juveniles, $6.65; total, $474.35, after which Mrs. Sims was appointed Committee on Platform Courtesies. Bros. Ritchie and Sanders were introduced to the body. Bro. Sanders read an article on the needs and suffering in Cuba, after which a memorial service was held in honor of our beloved secretary of the annual convention of the H. M., Mrs. Featherstone. Many beautiful tributes were spoken of her noble traits of character.

The body adjourned to meet at 7:30 P. M in a joint session with the W. F. M., Bro. Sanders pronouncing the benediction.

The Christian Life.

USE WHAT YOU HAVE.

What is in thine hand? A broom? Use it for God. The broom of the domestic servant may be as truly used for God as was the sceptre of David or Solomon.

What is in thine hand? A trowel, a hammer, an ax, a chisel, or some other mechanical tool? Use it for God. Jesus Christ gave dignity to labor; the sweat-heads of honest toil stood on his brow.

What is in thine hand? A pen? A pen is mightier than the sword. The pen of Shakespeare, of Longfellow, of Tennyson, of Whittier; Oh, matchless instrument! A pen in the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe stabbed slavery to the heart. A pen in the hand of George Kennan to tell the story of darkest Russia is mightier than the sword of the Czar of all the Russias. Have you a pen? Use it for God. Perhaps it is a typewriter. Touch the keys; make sweet music which shall echo around the globe.

What is in thy hand? Wealth? Consecrate it now to God.

What is in thy mouth? A tongue of eloquence? Use it for God. The tongue is the mightiest instrument that God ever made.

What is in thine hand? A kindly grasp? Give that to some sad soul.

Let us consecrate everything to him. The office, the plow, the pen, the needle, the tongue, the hands, the feet and the heart for Jesus. When the pierced hand of Jesus Christ is laid on the printing press, on wealth, on learning, on beauty, on culture, on every gift and grace in every relation in life, then the splendor of the millennial dawn will color the eastern sky with its crimson and gold.—R. S. McArthur, D. D.

THE CHRISTIAN IN ACTIVE LIFE.

Men are asking everywhere this question: "Is it possible for a man to be engaged in the activities of our modern life, and yet be a Christian? Is it possible for a man to be a broker, a shopkeeper, a lawyer, a mechanic—is it possible for a man to be engaged in a business of to-day, and yet love his God and his fellowman as himself?"

I do not know what transformations these dear businesses of yours have got to undergo before they shall be true and ideal homes for the child of God; but I do know that upon Christian merchants and Christian brokers and Christian lawyers and Christian men in business to-day there rests an awful and a beautiful responsibility to prove, if you can prove it, that these things are capable of being made divine; to prove that a man can do the work which you have been doing this morning, and will do this afternoon, and yet shall love his God and his fellow-man as himself. If he can not, what business have you to be doing them? If he can, what business have you to be doing them so poorly, so carnally, so unspiritually, that men look on them, and shake their heads with doubt? It belongs to Christ in man first to prove that man may be a Christian, and yet do business; and in the second place, to show how a man, as he becomes a greater Christian, shall purify and lift the business he does, and make it the worthy occupation of the Son of God.—Bishop Phillips Brooks.

Whenever you meet with a morose, gloomy Christian, you may rest assured that there is something wrong either with his life or with his liver; his health is bad, or his religion is out of order. Heir to all the sunshine in this world, heir to every promise in this dear old Book, heir to a prescience that notes the sparrow when it falls, and to the providence which counts the very hairs of his head, he is heir also to all the glories that are yet to be revealed. With all this within him, beneath him, about him, above him, how can a child of God repine? As one has said, "Every day should be a note of joy, every week a bar of music, every month a line of melody, every year a completed stanza, and life itself one sweet, long, beautiful psalm, a prelude to the anthem sung above."—Rev. J. R. Campbell, D. D.

"He That is Warm Thinks All So."

Thousands are "cold" in that they do not understand the glow of health. This implies disordered kidneys, liver, bowels, blood or brain. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes "warm" because it gives all who take it perfect health.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL LEAKAGE.

BY A. F. GODAT.

(Concluded.)

(Read before the Louisiana State Sunday-school Convention in Carondelet Street Church, in March, '99.)

Letters and cards to the absent ones are also good. Next to a personal visit, I think a good, well-written letter, written with a pen, and specially addressed to the scholar, will do most good. Avoid, as much as lieth in you, printed postal cards, type-written circulars, etc. They are as nice as machine-made valentines. Much can be done by the superintendent and other general officers of the school. The superintendent should note the attendance of the various classes, and at once bring to the notice of the teacher any falling off, assisting, in all ways possible, the teacher in his or her difficultics.

Faithfulness should be commended, and rewarded both privately and publicly. This does not necessarily involve the question of prizes. Many of the best Sunday-school leaders owe much of their success in having large schools to the judicious use of substantial rewards; others, equally successful, get along without them. Let everyone be persuaded in his own mind.

Let the scholars feel their importance to the school—that their presence is appreciated and enjoyed, their absence noted and felt. Let one of the mottoes of the school be, "Christ expects every-one to do his duty." Impress upon all the necessity of individual faithfulness. If there is only one person present, you be that one. If but one scholar is prepared with the lesson, you be that scholar. Whoever may be false, you be true. Above all, let us keep fully before us the object and aim of our work. John gives as the reason for writing his Gospel, "That ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that, believing, ye might have life through his name." The reason for the existence of the Sabbath-school can be put into no more fitting language. Why should we study the Bible?—why learn of Christ? Indeed, what doth it profit us even to know he is the Son of God, if so, believing, we have not life through him? You, who are before me to-day, are in the Sunday-school. Many of you have been there for years. Whatever leaks there may have been in the Sunday-schools with which you have been connected, you have not escaped through them. Why? Because you have yielded to the claims of Jesus; you have life through his name, and are trying to please him, who pleased not himself, by working this part of his field. Study the motives which drew you there, the principles which keep you there, and it seems but fair to assume that if these are but inculcated into others, a like result will follow.

I have jotted down these few thoughts upon the problem before me. I don't claim to have solved it, in theory or in practice. I don't stand before you as one who can say, "I have accomplished the end," and tell you how I did it. Some leaks I may have stopped. Perhaps the leakage would have been greater but for the efforts I have put forth. Maybe so. No one fails completely who honestly, though feebly, strives. We can not tell which effort will prosper. I know a young teacher, so young and inexperienced as to scarcely merit the name, who taught in a now almost-forgotten mission school. One of his scholars is now a loved teacher in one of the most successful schools in that city. He had another class for which he did far more, to which he gave time, enthusiasm, study and prayer. Not one is in the church or Sunday-school to-day. I know a teacher, a godly Christian man, who did all he knew for his class. His life was good; he knew his Bible; he taught it. One of the boys is a brewery drummer; another is a good, respectable man, out of Christ; another a leader and worker in the church and in the school. Why these different results? He did his duty by all alike.

We catch the enthusiasm of this convention; we feel its glow, and go back to our works. Superintendents, full of zeal, will go back, maybe, to dull and unenthusiastic teachers. Some teachers in advance of his school will go back full of the things learned here to an unsympathetic superintendent. What is to be done? Take with you the lesson of individual faithfulness. If you can't wheel your school into line, remember that its unit is, after all, your class, and in that you are supreme, and can do what you will.

HOLLY SPRINGS DISTRICT PREACHERS' MEETING.

The Holly Springs Preachers' Meeting will convene at Sylvestria, six miles north of Holly Springs, on the first Tuesday in July, at 9 A. M.; will continue Tuesday and Wednesday.

On Thursday we will hold the District Missionary Institute, to which all missionary workers are invited, especially workers in the Woman's Missionary Society. We will discuss the following subjects at the Preachers' Meeting, and during these two days we will arrange for Missionary Day:

The Standards of Methodism—J. W. Ramsey and W. G. Burk.

Can the Heathen Be Saved without the Gospel?—M. D. Fly and A. W. Langley.

Should We Rebaptize Those Dissatisfied with Their Baptisms?—M. H. Honnoll and Jas. Porter.

Pastoral Work—D. L. Cogdell and E. C. Sullivan.

Length of Sermons and Preliminary Services—J. W. Price and R. E. Duke.

Does Regeneration Remove Depravity?—R. M. Davis and J. A. Poe.

Why Should We Support Missions?—B. C. Gray and J. R. Willson.

"He who has carefully prepared himself is always ready," is an admirable sententious remark of the Boston "Bonquet." Mr. Whipple, an intimate personal friend of Daniel Webster, said: "When I was once walking on the beach at Newport with Mr. Webster, I asked him how it was possible for him to make so elaborate and powerful a reply to Mr. Hayne, when he had no time for preparation. 'No time for preparation!' exclaimed Mr. Webster. 'Let me tell you. Years before, when I was a young lawyer, with few clients to interrupt the tranquility of my office, I set myself to the careful and exhaustive study of the Constitution of the United States. I raised every question which I thought could be raised, and sought to settle it in my own mind. Among the questions which I considered was this one which Mr. Hayne raised in the debate. I gave long and careful study to it, and fixed my own opinions. When, therefore, this issue was suddenly forced on me, I had only to recall the arguments and conclusions of many years ago, and my speech was ready.'"

There was the secret of the great man's fame. By diligently improving his spare moments in a thorough study and mastery of that great instrument, he won the applause of the whole country, and was worthily named "the Expounder of the Constitution."

Dr. Lyman Abbott, in speaking of the growth of agnosticism, thus pictures the state of the country under the prevalence of the sort of opinions which many people believe the pastor of Plymouth Church helps a great deal more than he hinders:

"Imagine the whole American people left without belief in God or the future, with nothing in life beyond the present and all relics of faith gone. What would happen? In the first place, the institutions of religion would be swept away; the Sabbath would be merely a holiday, not even invested with the sacredness of the Fourth of July; the Bible gone with Sunday; the pulpit a platform; the sermon a lecture; music a concert and prayer an aspiration. With the Bible and the church, the great fundamental principles of right and wrong would go, too. In their place we would have empirical rules, and conscience would have empirical rules, and conscience would degenerate into a skillful guess as to rules of conduct."

Malignant censoriousness does not reach the height of its effrontery until it professes to be animated solely by the desire to promote the glory of God and the welfare of the church. When it comes to that point, it is ready for anything. We should prefer to fall into the hands of the most thorough-going worldling that ever lived rather than into the hands of a Christian who thinks himself in duty bound to spoil our reputation.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

FROM THE WORK.

MELVILLE, ROSEDALE, AND BIG CANE CHARGE.

We have just closed a good meeting here at Melville. Bro. G. D. Anders, of Columbia, came to me Monday, April 21, and remained to the close of the meeting, the following Sunday night. The membership was greatly revived, and we all start with a new impetus heavenward. There were two additions by profession of faith, both of whom were young men of promise. Bro. Anders is a strong preacher, and full of the Holy Ghost, and is just the man to help a fellow out of the bog. I wish he had the chance to do for other brethren what he has done for me in my work. One fruit of the meeting will be a handsome and roomy parsonage here at Melville. Bro. Anders has enthused the people here with a desire to work and bear fruit unto salvation. Before Conference I expect, by the grace of God, to have the best circuit in the district.

J. W. LEE.

Melville, La., May 2, 1899.

Rev. J. H. Bass, Webb, Miss., May 3, 1899: "I have been at work very hard since Conference. We were kindly received by this charge, and we find many of the people to be true and kind. We have built a comfortable four-room parsonage, finished up the church at Tutwiler, and paid about forty per cent. of the old debt on the church-building at Webb; also have insured the entire property at Webb. The very small amount we owe on the parsonage is assumed. If we can raise the balance due on the church-house at Webb, it will be dedicated to God by Rev. W. S. Shipman, presiding elder of this district, the second Sunday in June, at 11 o'clock. All former pastors are invited, especially Rev. B. B. Sullivan, who was the main factor in its erection. We have organized a Sunday-school at Webb, which, under the leadership of Dr. Harris and others, is doing splendid work. We found a good Sunday-school at Cherry Hill, and it continues in fine order. The good people at that place and Dublin sent us a fine lot of eatables in the way of a pounding. A better people than they are can not be found in the Delta. Everything, so far as we can learn, is moving along splendidly on the charge. Our protracted meeting at Webb begins the second Sunday in June. Rev. W. D. Bass will be with us, and, of course, we are looking for a great time. My people and I are perfectly delighted with our presiding elder, Bro. Shipman. He is fully competent to fill the place."

Rev. Thos. J. Martin, April 27, 1899: "The second Quarterly Conference for this (the Lancsville) charge, Louisiana Conference, is a thing of the past. The day was wet and cold; very cloudy and constantly drizzling rain. The attendance was unusually large, considering the weather. Bro. Crews, our efficient presiding elder, was on hand, and preached an instructive sermon, and held the Quarterly Conference immediately after. Sunday following was a better day, and the congregation was large and attentive, and Bro. Crews preached us another able sermon, as he usually does. The people of Grand Bayou had looked forward to the occasion with no little degree of interest. Friday before was announced as our fast day, and our members urged to observe it, and some did so. The church-yard was cleaned off, and a prayer meeting at eleven o'clock, for the divine presence with us at the Quarterly Conference, was led by our beloved C. F. Staples, P. C., whose reports show an advance of the interests of the church. He has been in labors abundant in organizing Sabbath-schools, prayer meetings, and class meetings. He has visited from house to house over most of this large work. The indications are for a revival throughout the charge. I regret to have to state that Bro. Staples has been in bed quite sick since Saturday. He was taken Friday evening, but attended his Quarterly Conference, and read his reports. His attending physician says he has symptoms of slow fever, but hopes symptoms will pass off, and that he will be able to be up soon. Let the brethren pray for his immediate recovery. His work will go on while he is sick. He is being well cared for. The ADVOCATE is good as usual, and I trust the patronage of the paper will largely increase under your liberal offer."

"A Ten Pound Boy."

Many women seem to have been denied the precious gift of motherhood because of some weakened condition of the special organism which makes motherhood possible; but in the great majority of cases such a difficulty is not by any means incurable. In thousands of instances Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, by restoring the natural, healthy condition of the organs distinctly feminine has been the means of conferring upon childless women the one inestimable blessing.

A Georgia clergyman, Rev. G. H. Akridge, of Pelham, Mitchell Co., Ga., in a letter written to Dr. Pierce, says: "We had been married six years without offspring, when my wife commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I then wrote to you for advice, and your instructions were to give 'Golden Medical Discovery' alternately with the 'Favorite Prescription.' This we did. The result is restoration of my wife to good health and a ten pound boy. In honor of the world-famed Dr. Pierce, I have named him Pierce. 'Favorite Prescription' is certainly the medicine for invalid women."

The vast experience and skill which Dr. Pierce has acquired during his thirty years' practice as chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N.Y., has made his name known and his medicines recognized as standard remedies in every civilized country on the globe. His great thousand-page illustrated book, the "People's Common Sense Medical Adviser" has had the greatest sale of any medical work in any language. A free edition has been published and a paper-bound copy will be sent to any family absolutely without charge except the mere cost of mailing which is 21 one-cent stamps. Send these with your address to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N.Y., or if preferred send 31 stamps for a heavier cloth-bound copy.

A man or woman who neglects constipation suffers from slow poisoning. Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. All medicine dealers.

Best Edition of the World's Best Books

—THE—

"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangment for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to May, 1900. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Send for circular. Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

Still, in this comfort rest—
His power, his wisdom and his love
In bright and homeless concord move:
He'll do the thing that's best.

LET ALL HELP.

While we do not doubt for a moment that the church will succeed in raising the full amount of the Twentieth Century Thank-offering Fund called for by the General Conference, the movement will fail of the best results unless the rank and file of our membership are made to catch its spirit, and are induced to contribute according to ability. A number of large offerings have already been reported, and we have great reason to rejoice that the rich are thus manifesting in a most substantial way their deep interest in this grand enterprise of the church. Moreover, we believe that these are but an earnest of still larger and more numerous donations to this fund on the part of the wealthy; but should even the bulk of the amount asked for be quickly forthcoming from such a source, there would still be the most imperative reason for appealing to the membership at large in the interest of this forward movement in education.

While some few of the rich, as we have seen, are doing nobly, we believe that the larger portion of the fund to be raised must come from the purses of the people of moderate means and the offerings of the poor. It is not expected or desired that a few wealthy men shall relieve the rest of our membership of the duty and privilege of contributing to the success of this undertaking. There is need of enlisting the aid and sympathy of every member, not only that every dollar of the million and a half may be raised, but also that the church may be aroused to the importance of her educational work and the grandeur of her opportunities. The movement contemplates the securing of an offering from every member, and in proportion as this is accomplished will be the benefit to the church. The help of all is needed, and must be solicited. Nothing less than diligent instruction as to the aim of the movement, accompanied by the most persistent canvassing, will accomplish in each charge the desired result. No doubt many who are not able to send their sons and daughters off to college will, on that ground, think themselves excused from contributing to this educational fund, fancying that the money thus withheld will be of greater benefit to their own children. Yet, if they will only reflect a little, they can hardly help perceiving that the dollar, or other amount, which they could easily give to the Twentieth Century Fund, but which they are tempted to withhold out of consideration to their own children's needs, would scarcely be a drop in the bucket, as far as helping to educate them is concerned. On the other hand, if generosity prevails, and a dollar, or some other small sum, is given as a thank-offering, though by itself it may avail little, yet, along with the offerings of thousands of other members of moderate means, it will help to make a sum of magnificent proportions and mighty in usefulness. Just as grand and lofty buildings are built out of countless small bricks and stones, so this grand educational monument, to speak, if raised to completion, must be constructed out of numberless financial bricks furnished principally by people of small means. Each member of our Zion is asked to contribute at least one brick for the walls of the splendid educational structure which we propose to rear, and which is to bless succeeding ages. Many will contribute more than one, but let us, one and all, see to it that our names appear upon the honor roll. Let it not once be imagined that small offerings will be despised. There is place and opportunity both for the widow's mite and the gifts of the millionaire. But only by self-denial and the hearty co-operation of all can we hope to make this movement a grand financial and spiritual success.

We rejoice to note that our brethren across the sea, in their efforts in behalf of the Twentieth Century Fund, have struck a responsive chord in the hearts of their membership, and are receiving liberal gifts from domestic servants and others of lowly station. The April number of the New Century Education calls attention to the fact that one small farmer in the Cork district (in Ireland) has given a heifer to the fund, and intends to feed it till 1901. Another farmer in the same region, it is said, has presented a fine flock of young lambs. If a like interest can be aroused in Southern Methodism among our yeomanry and among people of small means, we shall accomplish far greater things than many have dared to dream.

It will be an easy matter to contribute to this fund, provided we make up our minds to do so, and go intelligently about finding something. "Where there is a will there is a way," even for the most impecunious. In not a few directions is there room for self-denial and economy for the sake of the Lord's cause; but, alas! how few are willing to put God and the church first in their plans!

The following from one of our exchanges contains some excellent suggestions anent this matter: "On Saturday preceding Easter a milliner asked a Methodist lady to take a $5 50 hat home to wear on Sunday to see how she liked it. On Sunday her pastor preached a powerful sermon on 'A Christian's Use and Abuse of Money.' As the sermon proceeded, the hat gradually increased in weight until it really became burdensome. The sermon closed with a collection for foreign missions, to which the poor woman gave $2 50. The next morning she took the hat back to the milliner and purchased a better and more durable one for $3, and much more in consonance with her limited circumstances and Christian character. If all our good sisters would govern themselves accordingly regarding dress, and all our brethren would so govern themselves in regard to tobacco and cigars, we could very easily raise $5,000 000 for Christian education, and each man and woman be richer, healthier, happier and holier when the new century dawns. How these vanities and filthy, poisonous appetites are robbing us as well as God and humanity!"

A BRUTAL OUTRAGE.

On account of the meagreness of our information on the subject, we have hitherto refrained from any comment upon the assault made some time since upon Rev. H. P. Gibbs, of the North Mississippi Conference, a short time before his death. The light has at last been turned on. The light comes, however, not from the papers of Water Valley, where the assault occurred, or from the Associated Press reports in the great dailies, but from a paper in Columbus, Miss. The Columbus Commercial, in its issue of April 30, has a three-column article, which gives the facts in the case, and utters words of condemnation of the contemptible and cowardly outrage, which will meet the hearty approval of good citizens everywhere. The facts, briefly summarized, are as follows: As pastor of Main Street Church, Water Valley, Bro. Gibbs was necessarily brought into close relationship with the operatives of a manufacturing establishment, the Yokona Mills. In this way he became acquainted with the daily life of these people, many of whom are exceedingly poor. Feeling it to be his duty to enlighten the public concerning the condition of his people, he published in the Headlight a series of articles on the subject. He did not deal in personalities or vituperative epithets. He simply told "a plain, unvarnished tale" concerning the poverty, wretchedness and morals of these poor people, with a view to the amelioration of their condition. For this he was assaulted by the secretary of the Yokona Mills, and a near relative of his. The assault occurred in open daylight on the principal business street of the city. Bro. Gibbs was sick at the time, having been in bed for some days previous, and this being his first subsequent appearance on the streets. In a few days afterward he became worse, and died on the twenty-third, just twenty days after the brutal assault. Those who had the best opportunity to know the facts in the case believe that this assault was a factor in bringing about his untimely death.

This assault occurred April 3; yet up to this hour, so far as we know, no mention has been made of it in the great dailies. Why this silence? An affair of this sort is usually a sweet morsel for the newspaper reporter. It would seem that conscienceless capital in some instances has power, not only to oppress the poor, and to strike down a minister of the gospel who lifts his voice in protest against that oppression, but even to muzzle the press.

We commend to the consideration of our readers the following words of the Columbus Commercial: "When the coward, who fears not God nor regards his fellow-man, can, without fear of public opinion, attack a minister of the gospel while in his own conveyance upon a public street at account of this most remarkable tending to his own private affairs, and without any personal provocation, save that the minister, in the discharge of his Christian duty, criticised injustice and wrong heaped upon the poor, the unfortunate and the oppressed, the spirit of moral manhood is at a point to give alarm to all good citizens. . . . His suffering and untimely death raises a question that will not allow peace again until it is answered. Shall the cause of God and humanity be subordinated to the power of money and corporate greed? We are sadly mistaken if the preachers of the State are awed into subjection and lying, hypocritical lives by the fate of poor Gibbs."

P. S.—Since the above was in type, the Headlight has arrived with an account entirely corroborative of that summarized above.

A LIBEL SUIT.

We clip the following news item from the New Orleans Picayune of the 6th:

Mr. E. B. Stahlman, the attorney who collected the celebrated Methodist war claim, has brought suit for $50,000 for libel against Rev. W. B. Palmore, D. D., editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate. Dr. Palmore has written several caustic editorials on Mr. Stahlman and on others connected with him in the collection of the claim. Mr. Stahlman has employed the best legal talent in the State, and will make a vigorous fight. It is understood that other suits of a similar nature will be brought against editors and individuals who have indulged in like assaults on Mr. Stahlman.

MISSIONARY APPROPRIATIONS.

The following are the missionary appropriations for the ensuing year:

China Mission, $27,162; Korea Mission, $7,650; Japan Mission, $31,714; Central Mexico Mission, $27,127; Mexican Border Mission Conference, $13,850; Northwestern Mexican Mission Conference, $12,650; Indian Mission Conference, $10,948; Brazil Mission, $3,400; Cuban Mission, $5,000.

A permit was granted to the Bishops to raise a sum not exceeding $7,000 to supplement the work there. Bishop Candler, who is in charge of this field, was granted authority to raise $50,000 to build a church in Havana and to establish two additional missions.

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

In the May Critic a new series of articles on Thackeray's connection with Punch is begun.

In the May Cosmopolitan, Miss Annie Leach contributes an article on "Science in the Model Kitchen," which is interesting to housekeepers. Photographs of the present-day development in electric cooking are given with the article, besides the interiors of the kitchens of many noted houses. Postmaster-General Charles Emory Smith writes on "Great Problems in Organization" for the series which the Cosmopolitan is now giving.

We are in receipt of a booklet entitled, "Michigan, a Summer-Resort State." The publication is a beautiful directory of Michigan's Summer-resort localities, with a description of localities, routes, hotels, mineral springs, and mineral baths. As the work is official, it should be a valuable guide to the finding of a place to spend the Summer months among pleasant and healthful surroundings, away from the cares of business.

The American Monthly Review of Reviews, of May, devotes considerable space to a survey of recent developments in American cities. The editor comments on the re-election of Mayor Carter Harrison in Chicago, on Mayor Jones' remarkable triumph in Toledo, on the Detroit project for municipal ownership of the street railways, and on the general situation in Boston, San Francisco, Minneapolis, Cleveland, Denver, St. Louis, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, and New York.

The leading article in Appletons' Popular Science Monthly, for May, is a description of the best trails to and from the Klondike gold fields. The article is not only full of valuable information and suggestions, but very entertaining reading. A number of good illustrations add much to its interest. Prof. Ira Remsen, of Johns Hopkins, contributes an article on "Liquid Air," giving a simple and clear, but accurate account of this most remarkable achievement of modern physics. The "Birds of the West Indies" are described and pictured by Dr. Oswald in his second chapter on the physical geography of those islands. Cesare Lombroso, the famous Italian anthropologist, contributes an extremely interesting article, entitled, "Insane Characters in Fiction and the Drama."

The Open Court, for May, has a paper on "The Philosopher's Philosophy," by Prof. Levy-Bruhl, of Sorbonne. "The Evolution of Speech" is by Th. Ribot, editor of the Revue Philosophique.

In McClure's Magazine, for May, a new and fuller view of Admiral Dewey and his way of dealing with affairs in the Philippines is given in Oscar King Davis' "Stories of Admiral Dewey." The special literary features of the number are an excellent short story by Kipling, "The Flag of Their Country;" a series of poems of the gold trail, by Hamlin Garland; and, particularly, the opening installment of a novel of American life, "The Gentleman from Indiana," by a new writer, Mr. Booth Tarkington. Other notable things in the number are a paper by Charles Dana Gibson relating personal experiences in Egypt, and illustrated with his own drawings; and Miss Tarbell's collection of new anecdotes and reminiscences, exhibiting Lincoln's personal relations and dealings with the commanders of the army, from McClellan to Grant.

FROM BRO. LAGRONE.

Just before going to press, we received the following from Rev. W. S. Lagrone, pastor of Wood Street Church, Water Valley:

In answer to the numerous enquiries, and for the satisfaction of all those who are interested in the results of the cowardly assault on Rev. H. P. Gibbs, in this city, April 3, we assure you it is not going by default. We have the ablest counsel in the State, and our silence is not only wise, but it is counseled.

Bro. Gibbs and his character and his cause will be fully vindicated. Tell the friends to be patient and prayerful. God and the right will prevail. W. S. LAGRONE.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY THE GRENADA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Whereas, By the limitation of the law of the church, this year will close the present period of service of the presiding elder of this district; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the District Conference, that we recognize in Bro. H. C. Morehead a faithful, diligent, self-denying, successful presiding elder.

Resolved, We appreciate his zeal and devotion to our Lord and Master, and the demonstration he has made among us of his fidelity to every interest of our beloved Methodism. He has been a painstaking and wise administrator of law, and the church has prospered under his care with the co-operation of his brethren.

Resolved, We pray the blessing of our Father in heaven on him, his family, and his work.

R. W. JONES,
R. M. STANDIFER.

Men can not rise higher than their own standard. A dwarfed, shrunken, withered soul can not imagine a heart that gladly spends and is spent for others. He can only see his own image. "It can not be so, because if I had been in his place, I would not have put to hazard life, limb, gold; therefore, he didn't." An opinion on noble conduct dropped into the ear automatically weighs "him."—Richmond Advocate.

NOTES.

Rev. E. S. Lewis is in the midst of a prosperous pastorate at Brooksville, Miss.

Rev. C. C. Miller made an appreciated call at the ADVOCATE office a few days since.

We had the pleasure of a few words last Saturday with Dr. I. W. Cooper, who passed through the city en route to Hattiesburg to assist Rev. B. F. Jones in a revival meeting.

Through a note from Rev. T. B. Martin we learn that the illness of Bro. Staples proved to be measles. He is doing well.

We regret to learn that Rev. J. J. Kelley, pastor of our church at Slidell, La., has been in bed with fever several days.

On account of his wife's health, Rev. K. S. Enochs has removed to Vicksburg, Miss., which will be his postoffice for a time.

On account of his wife's health, Rev. T. H. Porter, of Coldwater, Miss., has gone to Lavernia, Texas, where he will remain for some time.

At the Preachers' Meeting, last Monday week, the reports from the city pastors showed that twenty-one persons had been received on profession of faith and by letter during the month of April.

The Committee on Location of the General Conference, after considering representations from St Louis, Atlanta, Chattanooga, Charleston, Houston, and Dallas, made choice of Dallas as the place for holding the General Conference of 1902.

The contract has been let for the rebuilding of Galloway College, Searcy, Ark. J. H. Hinman, superintendent of public schools of Pine Bluff, has been elected president, and Rev. J. R. Cason, pastor of one of our churches in the same city, has been elected financial agent.

The College of Bishops has appointed Dr. E. E. Hoss as fraternal delegate to the General Conference of the M. E. Church, which meets next year in Chicago. Bishop Hendrix has been appointed as fraternal delegate to the British Wesleyan Conference, which meets in London in 1900.

East Feliciana parish, in which Centenary College is located, is in the midst of a hot local-option fight, with the chances largely in favor of "no license." It goes without saying that the Methodist vote will be on the side of temperance. No loyal Methodist will cast a ballot for the opening of dram-shops.

A petition for a local-option election has been presented to the Board of Supervisors of Hinds county with a large number of signatures; but careful scrutiny reveals the fact that a large percentage of the petitioners are not legal voters. It is hoped that enough names can be stricken off to defeat the petition.

At the annual meeting of the Book Committee, held on the fourth, a resolution was introduced calling for the resignation of the Book Agents. After full discussion the resolution was defeated by a vote of twelve to one. The committee decided to publish a statement, to be sent to the United States Senate, with regard to the war claim.

Rev. W. L. Linfield writes: "On the eighteenth of April, Bro. B. F. Jones, pastor at Hattiesburg, sent checks to pay in full the assessments on his charge for foreign and domestic missions. This is the first charge in the Conference to pay the domestic fund in full, and the first to pay both in full. Would that others would follow this good example!"

Rev. J. A. Bowen writes: "Good revival. Fifty conversions to date, and that many will join our church. The membership is greatly revived. Revs. P. E. Duncan, M. E. Tumlin, R. A. Burroughs, R. M. Standifer, R. A. Meek, Eugene Johnson and A. P. Leech rendered us very valuable aid. Our people love and honor them. We thank God for spiritual blessings and good health."

The annual meeting of the Louisiana State Press Association was held last week in Jackson. A banquet was given them at the State Lunatic Asylum. A formal reception was given in the chapel of Centenary College, which was elaborately and artistically decorated for the occasion. Dr. I. W. Cooper delivered an address of welcome, which was exceedingly appropriate, and which was much enjoyed by the large audience. The affair made an impression upon "the press gang," which seems likely to be serviceable to Centenary.

SEASHORE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Seashore District Conference met at Biloxi, Miss., April 27, 1899, Rev. W. W. Simmons, P. E., in the chair. There was a good, though not a full attendance of preachers and laymen.

The Conference was opened by a few remarks from Bro. Simmons, expressing the hope that the spirit of love would prevail in all discussions, and that all might receive a spiritual blessing. The interests of the church were looked into with care, and the reports indicated a good spiritual condition in nearly all of the charges.

The afternoon session of the first day was devoted to the question of Sunday-schools and Epworth Leagues. The Sunday-schools are well officered and doing fine work. Not many Epworth Leagues, but the few are moving on nicely and looking forward to better things.

A Missionary Institute was held the afternoon and night of the second day, and the missionary work of our church was ably represented. Two papers were read—one by Rev. N. B. Harmon in reference to the work of the Woman's Home Mission Society, the other by Rev. J. P. Drake relative to the work of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. Revs. B. F. Jones and W. H. Huntley addressed the Conference on the subjects of Domestic and Foreign Missions, respectively. Rev. W. H. LaPrade, D. D., made a flying visit to the Conference, and delivered an able address on the subject of the Twentieth Century Fund. The Methodist Orphans' Home was represented by Rev. J. P. Drake.

Special committees were appointed on Temperance, Sabbath Observance, and Missions.

W. L. Hightower was recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial; R. L. Webb and W. L. Blackwell for deacon's orders.

License of local preachers were renewed as follows: W. C. Biberon, R. G. Williams, J. H. Havens, Samuel Fleurry, John Fleurry, Jas. King, W. W. Brown, M. R Jones, W. L. Hightower, H. B. Gillmore.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: A. G. Cowart, A J. Clark, T. M Evans, J. A. McLeod. Alternates: J. P. Cartor, J. L. Jordan.

The religious services were full of interest from first to last. Bros. Dawson, Lewis, Jones, McKeown and Huff did the preaching. A few of the brethren remained over Sunday, and the various pulpits of the city were thrown open to us. The services at the Methodist Church were especially interesting. Sermon, 11 A. M., by Bro. Simmons. Communion service and Experience Meeting, 3 P. M Sermon, 7:30 P. M., by Bro. Drake.

The Conference was a most pleasant and helpful one throughout. The entertainment given by the good people of Biloxi could not be surpassed. Bro. Forsyth was untiring in his efforts to make it pleasant for us. The spirit of brotherly love prevailed, and the brethren doubtless returned to their homes refreshed in body and mind and greatly blessed in spirit.

Gulf Port was chosen as the place of meeting for next Conference.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The shadows of gloom and sorrow are hanging heavily over our Conference. Death has recently claimed another of our best-loved and most efficient fellow-laborers, Rev. H. P. Gibbs. This event brings an irreparable loss to us in this life of service, but it has secured to him the eternal gain of reward and rest in heaven. He was a noble specimen of unblemished Christian character, and of unswerving fidelity to duty in the cause of God, and for the good of poor and oppressed humanity. He rests from his labors, but his works will follow him.

Revs. J. S. Oakley and B. F. Phillips are still seriously afflicted, and unable to do their work; also Rev. T. W. Lewis is sick, and in Memphis for rest and medical treatment. The prayers of the church are ascending daily that these beloved brethren may have divine comfort in their afflictions, and soon be restored to health and their "loved employ."

A day and night recently spent in our Orphans' Home, at Water Valley, gave reassurance of the good work being done there by Bro. and Sister Burton and their assistants. Nothing seems to be left undone that will afford support, comfort and cheerfulness to the "little ones" in their charge. What a beautiful sight to behold when those fifty children, from two to fifteen years of age, are all seated at four tables in one dining-room, in all quietness and order; then to see them—all who are large enough—in the school-room with Sister Leech, their teacher, one-half of the day, and at work, or playing together, the other half. With all, and in every place, there are evidences of tender care, wise discipline, and mutual love.

This worthy institution should have liberal support from the Methodists in Mississippi. The right of way should be given to its worthy manager, Rev. M. L. Burton, in every church; and where he can not go in due time, the preachers should lay the cause before their people.

I spent the fourth Sunday in April at Mt. Zion, Abbeville circuit, with Pastor Langley and his people. Preached two sermons, ate a good dinner on the ground, and put in some good Sunday-school work, after which I returned to Oxford, where I had been invited by Bro. Standifer to preach at night; but, being considerably fatigued, I begged off, and heard him deliver an encouraging sermon to a good congregation.

After a few days of pleasant stay, and some official work done in Oxford, on Wednesday, April 26, I traveled, in company with several jovial preachers and lay brethren, twenty-one miles to Tocoopola, the seat of the Grenada District Conference, which body convened Thursday morning, and continued until Sunday night. As the secretary will furnish the proceedings for publication, I forbear any statements, only to say that we had a profitable meeting and an enjoyable time. The great regret was that so few of the preachers and laymen of the district were present to participate in the blessings of the occasion.

Monday our company returned to Oxford. Ample conveyances were furnished us both ways by the good people of Toccopola. The Lord reward them abundantly for their kindness and hospitalities.

Monday night I ran down to Grenada, and next day home, where I am resting and preparing for our manifold district meeting at Carrollton next week. We are expecting a great occasion, and hope to have the presence of the editor of our Conference organ, with other church celebrities.

Children's Day is near at hand. Let everybody get ready, attend, and participate in it. Make it a day of gladness and blessing to the children, and an occasion that they will cherish in memory so long as they live.

DELHI DISTRICT.

I have not much of importance to write from this district; but a recent letter from a dear and honored friend on my last charge contains these words: "I have not seen a line in the ADVOCATE from Bro. Harper, and he a 'beloved.' He is too busy or too modest to air his doings; but his old friends would be glad to read something from him." So, in response to that suggestion, I send some items.

Some of the brethren write often, and some not so often. I belong to the latter class, and seldom appear in print except to report a meeting where precious, immortal souls are saved.

And though we can not report marvelous things from my district, yet all the preachers are wide awake, and about their Master's business, hoping, praying and working for large results, and we hope to come up to Conference not empty-handed, but bringing our sheaves with us. The pastors of the district are a class of faithful, godly men, and, no doubt, will do much this year for the salvation of souls and the glory of God.

I am just recovering from a protracted illness; have been confined to my home, and part of the time to my bed, for six weeks, but hope soon to resume my "loved employ." I am living in Monroe, in a rented house, in a delightful community. Rev. T. S. Randle and family live just across the street from us, and on the same block with us is dear old Bro. Hatton, a superannuated preacher of the M. E. Church, with whom I have taken sweet counsel in days gone by, he being a resident of Monroe ten years ago, when I was on this district; and not very far from us is the handsome new parsonage where reside Bro. Pierce and family. So Monroe is rich in preachers, and some of the good people here have shown their appreciation in a very substantial way. Their liberality hath abounded, not only to the pastor, but to the superannuate and the presiding elder as well; so, while we leave friends, we go to more, and "all things work together for good to them that love God."

Bro. Pierce is struggling under the double burden of a church debt and finishing of the new church, which, when completed, will be a "thing of beauty."

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS WEAK?

Have You Bladder or Uric Acid Trouble?

You May Be Afflicted and Not Know It.

By Special Arrangement, Every "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" Reader, to Prove for Themselves the Wonderful Merits of SWAMP-ROOT, the Great Kidney Remedy, May Have a Sample Bottle Sent Absolutely FREE by Mail.

People are apt to believe that kidney disease is rather a rare disease, but recent discoveries have proved that it is a most common trouble indeed.

And the proof of this is, that most diseases, perhaps 85 per cent., are caused in the beginning by disorders of the kidneys.

You can't be sick if your blood is pure, free from kidney-poison and disease-breeding germs. Your kidneys should keep it so. That's what they are there for. And as long as they are well they perform their duties with thoroughness and dispatch.

You are well when your kidneys are.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, will make your kidneys well when they are sick.

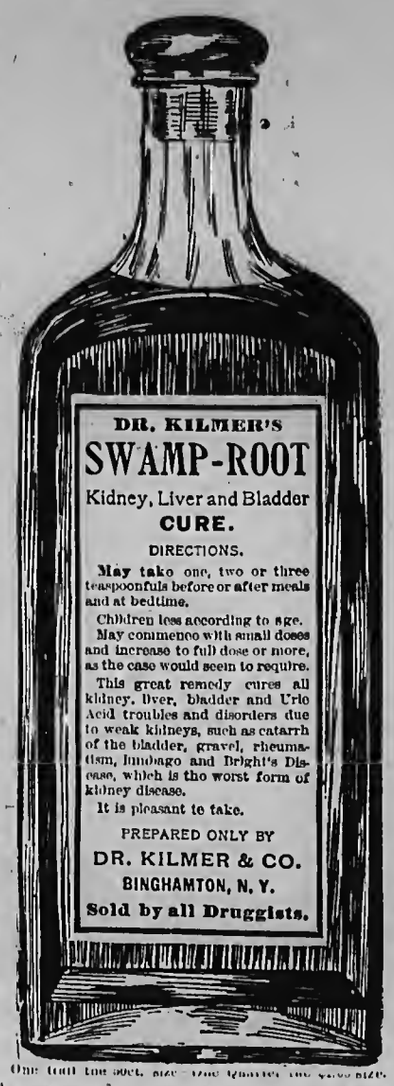
Kidney trouble often comes from overwork or over-exertion. From exposure to cold and other weakening influences, from lifting or a strain, from over-eating or drinking. All these things weaken your kidneys and poisonous germs begin to creep into your blood.

It is at just such times that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is needed.

When your kidneys are not doing their work, you have backache, headache, sediment in the urine, scalding irritation in passing it, obliged to go often during the day and to get up many times at night, dizziness, or irregular heart, bladder or uric acid troubles, rheumatism, neuralgia, sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability, sallow complexion, bloating, dropsy, tired feeling, loss of energy and ambition.

Swamp-Root is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of untiring effort and research by the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, Dr. Kilmer, and has truly wonderful restorative and healing action on the kidneys and bladder.

The best proof of this is a trial,



DR. KILMER'S
SWAMP-ROOT
Kidney, Liver and Bladder
CURE.
DIRECTIONS.
May take one, two or three teaspoonfuls before or after meals and at bedtime.
Children less according to age.
May commence with small doses and increase to full dose or more, as the case would seem to require.
This great remedy cures all kidney, liver, bladder and Uric Acid troubles and disorders due to weak kidneys, such as catarrh of the bladder, gravel, rheumatism, lumbago and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney disease.
It is pleasant to take.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent or one-dollar sizes at the drug stores. Don't make any mistake, but make a note of the name, SWAMP-ROOT, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and remember it is prepared only by Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

This is indeed a most valuable work, written especially for Sabbath school and Bible class teachers, scholars, and all who feel the need, as it is believed many do, of a convenient and comprehensive volume to which they can at any time turn for information to aid them in understanding and defending the Word of God. It has been prepared to serve in this direction as a manual, to which recourse can be had with confidence and comfort, for explanations which might be found elsewhere, but only after research involving great expenditure of time and means. The author is a man of learning and talent, and has written an eloquent volume. All who read the book will be delighted with it. Read what is said of it by the religious press of the country.

OUR $1 OFFER.

Much has been said about reducing the subscription price of the ADVOCATE. The only way in which a reduction can be brought about is by an increase in the number of subscribers. In order to facilitate this result, we make the following offer: Until further notice we will take new subscriptions at the rate of $1 for eight months. When seven thousand five hundred new names have been sent in at this rate with the cash, we will extend the time four months longer, thus reducing the price to $1 per annum. A BOY'S BELIEF.

It isn't much fun a-living,
If grandpa says what's true;
That this is the jolliest time of life
That I'm a-passing through.
I'm afraid he can't remember,
It's been so awful long;
I'm sure if he could recollect,
He'd know that he was wrong.

Did he ever have, I wonder,
A sister just like mine,
Who'd take his skates or take his kite,
Or tangle up his twine?
Did he ever chop the kindling,
Or fetch in coal and wood,
Or offer to turn the wringer?
If he did, he was awful good.

In Summer it's "Weed the garden,"
In Winter it's "Shovel the snow"!
For there isn't a single season
But has its work, you know.
And then, when a fellow's tired,
And hope he may just sit still,
It's "Bring me a pail of water, son,
From the spring at the foot of the hill."

How can grandpa remember
A fellow's grief or joy?
'Tween you and me, I don't believe
He ever was a boy.
Is this the jolliest time of life?
Believe it I never can;
Nor that it's as nice to be a boy
As a really grown-up man.

—Harper's Young People.

COMMON SENSE A GUIDE TO SUCCESS.

Perhaps there is no other quality which is of such inestimable value to a young man or young woman who is trying to get on in the world as common sense, which enables one to weigh and balance opposing arguments, adjust conflicting circumstances, and draw wise conclusions.

A man may possess a ponderous brain, may have great ability, may be, in fact, a genius, and may succeed, to a certain extent, without what we may call common or horse sense; he may write learned essays upon abstruse and difficult subjects; he may delve into science, and leave the world precious legacies of knowledge; he may be a profound scholar, an omnivorous reader, and a great gatherer of facts and observations; but his work will always lack something necessary for its full completeness, and he will always be, to some extent, at a disadvantage in life, if he lacks that element which enables him to make the best use of his knowledge, and to utilize to the utmost the results of his investigation.

People who lack common sense are not practical, no matter how profound their knowledge, or how broad their culture. On the other hand, a man with common sense is always master of the situation; he knows what to do in an emergency, and how to turn himself when in a tight place; he knows men, how to manage them, and how to use them; in short, he has tact. He knows how to adjust himself to circumstances; he gets hold of the right thing and seizes it by the right handle; he seems to have an intuition, an instinct, which shows him how to do things as they ought to be done.

The merchant with tact studies his business and his customers as an artist studies his canvas. He knows what will please his patrons; he knows the difference between city and country demands; he studies the art of displaying goods to the best possible advantage; he dresses his show-windows in good taste, and rearranges them often; he knows how to attract buyers, and studies the art of selling; he knows the great superiority of attractive and good-mannered clerks; he appreciates the value of courtesy, cleanliness, and attractiveness; he knows that a pleased customer is the best advertisement; he knows how to present goods in the most attractive way; his great object is to please those who trade with him, not to force upon them goods which they do not need, or do not want. All these things are Greek to a merchant without tact; he doesn't see the value of all this nonsense.

The man with sense appreciates the importance of always knowing exactly how he stands, of accurate bookkeeping, and of frequent stock-taking. He guards his credit as he does his honor; he is prompt to the very moment of meeting his obligations; he never lets his paper go to protest; he is exact and systematic in his methods; his employees know their places and keep them.

Common sense always stands firm, in spite of false pride, which may demand a larger and finer store, or a more beautiful home. No matter how brilliantly hope may gild the future, common sense sticks to what it can afford; despondency may paint dark pictures and predict hard times and poor business, but common sense keeps on the even tenor of its way, and still buys what is necessary.

Common sense is always progressive, yet prudent; always conservative, yet wisely so. It enables a physician to understand his patient. He does not alarm him by telling him of unfavorable symptoms, but tries to conserve all his energies for combating the disease. It enables him to understand human nature, and to take advantage of circumstances in every position in life.

Nothing will take the place of this common sense. A man may have a college or university training and still utterly lack it. Capital is not a substitute; many of our great merchants have begun without it, while many have been utter failures who began with it.

A man of common sense, though he may be ignorant of books, and possibly unable to write his own name, has a certain instinct which tells him what is in demand, what will sell, when and what to buy, and how much. No matter how much you may try to overpersuade him, he knows what he wants, and will buy no more, no less. Common sense is absolutely indispensable to men who have to do with practical affairs.

This mother-wit, practical intelligence, tact, and behavior, good judgment, or however we may define it, seems to be born with one. Although it is susceptible of improvement by cultivation, yet those born without it never seem able to create it.

A large part of the failures in mercantile life are due to lack of common sense. A man doesn't know how, when, or what to buy, doesn't know how to take advantage of the market; he piles up goods which he can not sell, until they are out of style or shop-worn, instead of selling them at what he can get for them, and keeping his stock fresh and clean.

People without tact seem to be utterly at sea when brought face to face with the transaction of business. They are never business-like in anything they do. They don't know how to financier, are never able to learn the principles of economy and thrift, and rarely accumulate fortunes. A good many of them live from hand to mouth. Their sense of the proportion and fitness of things seems to be entirely deficient. They seem without ability to adjust themselves to new conditions.

I have known professors of great reputation who could scarcely conduct the most ordinary business transaction, and scarcely knew how to draw a check, write a promissory note, or make a draft.

By keeping one's eyes open, by cultivating one's powers of observation, by exercising one's natural judgment, all of which may be done without interference with or detraction from his occupation, whatever it may be, he may continually and largely add to that most serviceable of all qualities, common sense, and, consequently, to his own well-being.—Success.

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT,

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living

Hygiene.

PERSPIRATION POISONOUS.

The perspiration from the skin, like the expired air from the lungs, has long been known to be poisonous. The extent to which it is poisonous has been shown before the French Biological Society in Paris, by M. Arloing, who found, when making normal injections of perspiration into the veins, and also of prepared extracts of the same, that when the strength of the injection approached fifteen centigrams per kilogram in the case of the dog and twenty-five centigrams per kilogram in the case of the rabbit, death almost always occurred, generally within three days, though sometimes not for some weeks, when it followed upon a state of profound cachexia. The injection of one-sixth, one-quarter or one-third of a lethal dose led, according to his observation, to immediate and proportional effects. The toxicity varied with the environment of the subject which furnished the perspiration, as well as with the mode of preparation of the extract. The perspiration secreted during arduous muscular toil is richer in poisonous principles than that secreted during the ordinary conditions of life, the degree of extra malignancy amounting to twenty-five or thirty per cent. All things being equal, perspiration obtained by artificial means of sudation, as in the Turkish bath, present a minimum of power and harm, but perspiration obtained from a subject who has suffered from retention of the secretion due to cold is still more poisonous.

The question may be asked, If the perspiration is poisonous, why are we not injured by it when it accumulates on the skin? Because it is not taken back into the system from the skin; if it was, it would do harm. When, as in a cold, the skin does not act well, the kidneys, to a certain extent, take up its work, and this relieves the body from the poison of the perspiration. Were this not the case, its effects would soon be fatal. We know this well enough without experimentation on animals. When the skin is burned over any considerable part of the body, perspiration can not go on, and the person dies partly as a result of the retained secretions. During the reign of one of the Popes, in some religious ceremony, a child was covered with gold leaf to represent the Holy Child, but the retained secretion poisoned and killed it.

These facts teach us that the health of the external covering of the body is most important, and this proves that cleanliness and bathing are beneficial to establish its activity as perfectly as possible.—The Journal of Hygiene.

Be reverent. Young people are full of joy and good cheer. They look on the bright side of life and feel lightly the responsibilities common to men. They are apt to indulge in levity, or at least be forgetful of where they are. But in times of worship be reverent. The attitude may move some to righteousness. Be reverent.—St. Louis Advocate.

HOLMES—Mrs. MARY J. HOLMES was born Tennessee, Sept. 2, 1830. When a child she ame with her father, Mr. Josiah Butterorth, to live at Keachie, DeSoto parish, La. On Nov. 15 1864 Mary Butterworth was arried in Mansfield, La., to Mr. John olmes. After a short married life her husand died, leaving his wife, with two small hildren and several step-children, to mourn is loss. During a long widowhood Mrs. olmes proved herself a loving and faithful other, guiding her household as a consistent hristian. She was devoted to her church—
E Church, South—and up to the time of er death found intense pleasure in reading hurch literature, especially the Advocates. he ruling desire of her life was to train her hildren according to the rules and regulaions established in the household by her hristian husband. God grant that in good me they may all be gathered, an unbroken amily, about the great white throne!

Mrs. Holmes died Jan. 7, 1899, at the home f her daughter, Mrs. T. L. Aycock, in Bossier arish, La., and was laid to rest in the family emetery at Belle Flower, DeSoto parish.

In many respects Mrs. Holmes was a remarkable woman—firm, gentle, loving, and orable, always practicing the Christian virues, until she reached a degree of perfection arely attained. As friend, neighbor, sister nd mother, she was universally beloved.

While in usual health she was stricken with aralysis, which slowly and surely crocheted n the citadel of life for ten days, when the ummons came, "It is enough; come up igher."

Her whole life was a preparation for eterity, and her spirit passed away gently as she ell to sleep in her Savior's arms. The tenler and affectionate ministrations of her stalwart stepsons, as well as her own children, uring her last illness was a noble tribute to he mother's worth.

To deplore her loss, she leaves an only aughter (Mrs. Jessie Aycock), an only son Mr. Blanton R. Holmes, of New Orleans), and wide circle of relatives and friends. Their oss is her eternal gain. The eye of faith can ierce beyond the tomb and see that "the rave is but the covered way" which leads rom gloom to glory.

"She liveth in our broken hearts,
Her image on each shivered part,
Her life to us a living chart."

FRANKLIN—JAMES WINTER FRANKLIN, on of Rev. J. M. Franklin, of the Louisiana Conference, was born in Ft. Jesaup, La., Aug. 1880, and departed this life Jan. 20, 1899, at range, La. He professed religion and joined he Methodist Church in October, 1894. His eligious life was attended with battles, sometimes attended with victory, and sometimes failure, but through it all he stuck to his hurch and his God.

"Jim," as we all called him, was an extraordinary young man. He was bright, very attentive to business, and there was a peculiar ig-heartedness about him that drew one to im, and made you love him. He seemed to orget himself, and his whole soul seamed to e absorbed in the interest of others. He was ne of the most loyal young man I ever met. His last illness was short, and he seamed to know that his end was near. He said to his unt, at whose house he died, that he did not ear death, and when the end came he was not onscious, but quietly passed away. He has eft many friends, who feel a sad loss. A multitude followed his remains to Ft. Jesaup, and aid him away. Many are the friends who ympathize with the father, mother, and family. "Blessed are the dead who die in the ord."

ALLEN—Departed this life Dec. 18, 1898, Bro. WM. J. ALLEN, of Avoyelles parish, a devoted husband, loving father, and sincere friend. Born in Chester county, S. C., Sept. 18, 1820 he left there for Mississippi in 1817, and was married Feb. 18 1857, to Miss Palmelia A. Morgan, who bore him seven children. He came to Louisiana in '67, where, a year later, his wife died. He married, a second time, Miss Mary A. Steward, of Avoyelles parish, who survives him, and is the mother of Geo. M. and Wm. Steward Allen. Three of his first wife's children are living: Mrs. G. W. Tupperville, Mrs. Wm. Cheatham, and Jno. R. Allen.

Mr. Allen joined the M. E. Church, South, when quite young, and remained true to her institutions until his death.

I knew him quite intimately in my boyhood. He was my father's nearest neighbor. His was a warm and tender heart, and my earliest recollections of him are associated with his many kindnesses to the sick and afflicted. He justly deserved the love of those with whom he was associated. Having known him so long and intimately, I can truly share the grief of his loved ones. C. O. WIKE.

CALHOUN—JOHN CALHOUN was born April 26, 1880, and died Jan. 14, 1899. He was reared by Christian parents and surrounded by Christian influences. He united with the church in 1893. His life as a member of the church was beautifully consistent up to the last. I never heard anyone say aught against him, nor did I ever know of his doing anything wrong. He enjoyed religion, and was regular in his attendance on the means of grace. He was a very bright Christian. His death was very triumphant. He was told that he could not live, and that he might say anything he wished. He requested all to meet him in heaven, and then read a chapter in Hebrews, and sang several hymns, and had the doctor to pray. For some time before death came he was delirious, but even in this condition he repeated passages of Scripture, and sang and shouted. The night before he died he repeated the twenty-third Psalm. His last words were praises. Truly Christ had taken away the sting of death, which is sin. Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints. We shall meet again.

W. J. DAWSON.

COCHRAN—HENRY C. COCHRAN was born in 1836, and died March 18, 1899.

In the death of Bro. Cochran the Methodist Church at Salem (near Leaf River) loses a useful member. As a Sunday-school superintendent, he was faithful to duty, riding on horseback eight miles to the church-house to open and conduct the exercises of the Sunday-school. He was regular in attendance on preaching services. As a steward, he was careful to look after the interests of his preacher. The writer, as his pastor, visited him during his last illness, and in conversation found him perfectly resigned to the will of God. His throat being paralyzed several days before his death, he could not speak, and we have no words of his to record as his dying testimony, but his faithful religious life continuously for a number of years remains to bear testimony of his hope. He leaves a wife, son, and several daughters to mourn his death. To them we offer our sincere sympathy, and pray that the Holy Spirit may be near to comfort them in the sad hours of their bereavement.

H. B. VANDENBURG.

Leakesville, Miss.

LEE—Mrs. EMMA LEE (nee Craft) was born Jan. 21, 1861, and died at her home near Dennis Mills, Feb. 25 1899. She was married to John E. Lee, Sept. 16, 1876, and to them were born twelve children—nine boys and three girls—and eleven, with the husband, survive her.

Sister Lee joined the M. E. Church, South, about eight years ago, but was deprived of attending upon the ordinances of God as often as she desired, on account of living at such a long distance from the church. She told this writer a few days before she died that she was not satisfied with her spiritual condition, and wanted me to pray for her, that she might find that peace that passeth all understanding. I read, sang and prayed for her, and pointed her to Jesus, who was ready to save. I left her feeling much better (this was on Friday). I visited her the following Sunday evening, and found her rejoicing in the full assurance that she was a child of God, and on the next Saturday she passed away in peace.

May God bless the bereaved husband and children, and may they be faithful to the end is my prayer.

DEAFNESS CAN NOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

NAPOLEON LOST THE BATTLE OF LEIPSIC because of a fit of indigestion. One dose of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL would have given him instant relief, and the fate of the kingdoms of Europe been decided differently. It is really marvelous how quickly a colicky pain will vanish when a teaspoonful of Mul-on-ol in a wine-glass of hot water is taken. Try it; you will never suffer from colic.

Look not mournfully into the past; it comes not back. Wisely improve the present; it is thine. Go forth to meet the shadowy future without fear, and with a manly heart.—Longfellow.

A Great Combine

Trusts and Combines in many lines of production, and controlling the output of many factories, have recently been formed, some Capitalized at Millions and other similar organizations are projected. It is not our purpose to discuss here the influence of these trusts, whether beneficial to public interests or otherwise; but we wish to announce to our readers that which is not prejudicial to any interests, but which, on the contrary, is directly in favor of every reader of this paper.

HERE IS THE PLAN

A splendid illustrated MONTHLY, devoted to the cause of Methodism throughout this broad land and called THE AMERICAN ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE, is published in St. Louis, with offices in New York and Chicago. It is the peer of the best of the popular magazines in illustration, literature, and typographical excellence, and is designed to be to the Methodist membership of about six millions in America, what the popular secular magazine is to the general reading public. The Magazine is not a competitor of any of the other Church periodicals; it is general in its scope. It is the ONLY ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE PUBLISHED MONTHLY IN THE UNITED STATES, and occupies a field distinctly its own. Its aims and purposes are of the highest. Its ideals are: THE PUREST IN LITERATURE, THE HIGHEST IN ART, THE NOBLEST IN METHODISM. It is a worthy exponent of the great Church it so ably represents.

Some Opinions of Representative Methodists, North and South.

"The American Illustrated Methodist Magazine should be welcomed by the whole Methodist family. Many a number will contain articles worth ten times the subscription price."
—Bishop Charles C. McCabe.

"Fair, sweet-toned, appetizing."
—Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.

"Our common Methodism is to be congratulated on this valuable accession to our periodical treasures. I hope every Christian will have this beautiful Magazine."
—Bishop John P. Hurst.

"It takes rank with the best for its varied and rich table of contents. A valuable auxiliary to our Epworth League work."
—Bishop E. R. Hendrix.

"A periodical absolutely ordinary in the field it occupies. It is a joy to the eye, the mind and the heart. It ought to find a place at once in every family circle in the land."
—Bishop W. A. Candler.

"A gem among the monthlies of our land."
—T. Berry Smith,
Central College, Fayette, Mo.

W. T. Harris, of Washington, D. C., United States Commissioner of Education, has this to say of a recent number: "It is one of the most remarkable magazine numbers that I have seen for a long time, and I beg leave to enclose two dollars for two regular subscriptions. I congratulate you."

The Press, Denominational and Secular, Speak in Highest Terms.

"A future of gratifying success and large usefulness is assured it."
—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"The contributions compare well with those of any other Magazine of the day and its illustrations are excelled by none."
—Pittsburg (Pa.) Daily News.

"Interesting and attractive, not only to Methodists but also to the general reading public, for the matter which fills the pages is of a character broader than the title would indicate."
—Columbus (O.) Dispatch.

"The prospectus of the Magazine indicates that there is an abundant feast of good things in store for its readers; but the Magazine itself is better than any prospectus."
—The Pittsburg (Pa.) Times.

"The scholarship of the Magazine is insured by the editorship of Revs. James W. Lee and Nightall Luccock, who are known and loved in St. Louis and throughout the West."
—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"It compares favorably with the best of them, and is a brilliant success from the beginning."
—Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.

"We most heartily commend it to our peoples as a high-grade periodical, worthy to take its place in every Methodist home."
—New Orleans Christian Advocate.

"It will aim to advocate and magnify the things which world-wide Methodism holds in common, and especially to be a factor in the cultivation of fraternal relations between the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South."
—Central Christian Advocate.

"The letter press is superb, the illustrations first-class and the reading matter thoroughly instructive, entertaining and edifying."
—Pennsylvania Methodist.

"A triumph of literary talent and mechanical art."
—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

"We welcome it, relish it and recommend it."
—Western Christian Advocate.

"It takes high rank with the best periodical literature of the day."
—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

"We cannot but give to the Magazine our best wishes, and hope for it great success."
—Texas Christian Advocate.

To these might be added hundreds of testimonials from Church officials, pastors and laymen, North and South, all praising the Magazine for its intrinsic worth and its lofty purpose.

"THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF METHODISM," which is being published serially in the Magazine, is a feature of marked interest, and is alone worth the subscription price; but the History is only one of the many interesting and artistic features of each number.

Every Methodist family should be a subscriber. Its price is so small all can afford it, but in combination with this paper an opportunity is offered to secure both publications for little more than the cost of one alone.

The subscription price of THE AMERICAN ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE is $1.00 a year; the subscription price of this paper is $2.00 a year. We will supply BOTH one year for $2.65 in advance.

This is our GREAT COMBINE—a TRUST organized solely in the interests of our readers, and which they are invited to join. Do not delay.

THIS OFFER WILL EXPIRE JUNE 1.

Take notice that in order to get the benefit of this offer you must first pay all arrearages. In order to ascertain the amount of your arrearage, look at the label on your paper and count the months from the date there given to May, '99. Then send 16⅔ cents for each month. Add to this $2.65.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The population of Jerusalem has been rapidly increasing of late, and is now about 45,000; of these, 28,000 are Jews.

A favorably reported bill granting municipal suffrage to women has been rejected by the Connecticut House, 103 to 63.

During the past year the exports of watches from Switzerland amounted in value to over $13,000,000. The watches went to almost all parts of the civilized world.

The annual reunion of Confederate veterans will be held this week, at Charleston, where, on the twelfth of April, thirty-eight years ago, was fired the first gun of the war between the States.

The stevedores of Havana have struck for higher pay, and the business of loading and unloading ships was almost at a standstill until 400 Chinese were employed to take the places of the men who had refused to work. The Cubans endeavored to prevent the Chinese from working, but were driven away by the American soldiers.

The Navy Department has selected a successor to Admiral Dewey to command the Asiatic station. Orders have been issued detaching Rear Admiral Watson from command of the Mare Island Navy Yard, and ordering him to report to Admiral Dewey at Manila, to relieve that officer when he feels that he can be spared there.

The Sudan is being rapidly covered with a network of telegraphs. It is expected that the telegraph will be 1000 miles south of Khartoum at the end of the year. This means the practical joining up with Uganda, and as Mr. Rhodes' telegraph is approaching Tanganyika, the transcontinental telegraph may be expected to be finished early next year.

The Fair opened in this city on May 8, and is a finer show than any anticipated. The jubilee parade and review by the governor proved stirring sights, and gave the people a welcome opportunity to honor the volunteers. A number of addresses mark the Exposition's start, but the enterprise displayed speaks for itself. President McKinley and the cruiser "New Orleans" sent greetings by telegraph.

At a meeting of the Episcopal ministers of Kansas City a resolution protesting against the recent christening of a baby orang-outang at a local zoo was adopted. The resolution denounces the act as a "travesty of the Christian sacrament of baptism." It is said that a similar resolution will be presented at the next meeting of the Ministers' Alliance, which includes in its membership all the evangelical ministers of the city.

The special court of inquiry appointed by the War Department ostensibly to investigate the charges made by General Miles against the embalmed beef and the rotten meat in cans supplied to the army has accomplished its task. The court finds that the statements made by General Miles were not borne out by the facts adduced by the inquiry, as nothing was developed which tended to show that the meat was either unwholesome, or embalmed, or deleterious to the health of the troops.

While the insurgents have so far been successful in eluding the American columns, another effort has been inaugurated in this direction by Generals MacArthur and Lawton, which will result, the authorities hope, in the capture or destruction of a strong wing of the insurgent army. To this end a military movement is now in progress which contemplates the surrounding of a large section of the enemy believed to be encamped to the westward of San Fernando.

The surrender of Aguinaldo is believed to be close at hand. President Schurman, of the American Philippines Commission, who has never been optimistic on the problem, has cabled to the President the belief of the commission that Aguinaldo is ready to surrender. He informed the President of a new plea for peace, made by the Tagalo representatives. Aguinaldo offers to surrender, but he makes, through his representatives, a plea for certain assurances. The conditions call for no sacrifice of principle. They involve no compromise on the main question of recognition of United States authority. They are of minor consequence, so far as this government is concerned. In them, however, Aguinaldo apparently sees partial relief from the abject humiliation of unconditional surrender. The American commission is inclined to deal fairly with the Filipinos, but does not wish to assume responsibility for the concessions asked. Therefore, President Schurman cabled asking instructions.

I make this request: Let each claimant who has changed place of residence in the last two years send me a postal card giving their present address.

You Can't Get Rested,

Because That Tired Feeling is not the result of exertion. It is due to the unhealthy condition of your blood. This vital fluid should give nourishment to every organ, nerve and muscle. But it can not do this unless it is rich and pure. That is what you want to cure That Tired Feeling—pure, rich blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla will help you "get rested." It will give you pure, rich blood; give you vigor and vitality, and brace you up so that you may feel well all through the coming Summer. If you have never tried Hood's Sarsaparilla, do so now, and see how it energizes and vitalizes your whole system.

We praise thee, we bless thee,
Our Father and our Lord;
To thee we lift our joyful songs
To-day with one accord.

We praise thee, we bless thee,
For the sound of children's feet,
And for the ripple of their mirth
That makes this old earth sweet.

We praise thee, we bless thee,
For peace in all our coasts;
For the old who stand beside the land;
For the young, in sturdy hosts.

We praise thee, we bless thee,
For the wealth of golden sheaves,
And for the songs of families
Beneath their sheltering eaves.

We praise thee, we bless thee,
For many a prayer denied,
For losses and for crosses sent
To keep us at thy side.

We praise thee, we bless thee,
For friends beyond the strife;
For those who lie the gate of death
Have found the endless life.

We praise thee, we bless thee,
For the gift of thy dear Son,
And for the household of thy saints
In earth and heaven, one.

BOARD OF MISSIONS.

The session of the Board of Missions, just held, May 3-5, were of more than usual interest. Some of the items contributing to this interest were, first, reports from the mission fields. These exhibited advance in all departments of work. Those engaged in evangelistic service tell of special evidences of the presence and power of the Holy Spirit. These have been manifested particularly in China and Brazil. A larger number of conversions (undoubted in their character) than usual, and the deepening and broadening of the spiritual life of the native membership, are among the evidences adduced. Some of the accounts are indeed wonderful, reminding one of primitive Christianity and early Methodism, and ought to set on fire the zeal of the church at home. The statistics show an increase of more than five per cent. in the membership. This, in view of a reported decrease at home, ought to stir us up to prayerful thought and honest heart-searching. Certainly the moiety of our giving that goes to foreign fields is not spent in vain. God is true to his promise, "There shall be a handful of corn in the earth, on the top of the mountains; the fruit thereof shall shake like Lebanon."

Our school work in China has been rearranged, and now only lacks enlarged quarters, better facilities, and increased teaching force, to make it the power that it ought to be in confirming and perpetuating our evangelical planting. Of first-class students there is no lack. China is expecting to reap largely from our Twentieth Century Educational Fund. May she not be disappointed!

Our medical work is still growing in favor and efficiency, but sorely needs to be reinforced. No class of missionaries have freer or more fruitful access to the heathen than our pious, consecrated, qualified physicians.

In Brazil arrangements have been made to put Granbery College into new and better quarters. This, however, involves the purchase of suitable property at a considerable outlay. At present the Board is only able to provide for the interest on this sum. The principal—$10,000—ought to be arranged for at an early day. Who among our wealthy, money-making laymen will honor God by turning this amount into his treasury to meet this urgent demand? Surely all the large gifts to our Twentieth Century Educational Fund ought not to be swallowed up by our home institutions. This school is for the express purpose of training native preachers and teachers—a work that must be done, else our work so well begun will be hopelessly hampered and circumscribed. Oh, when will the church awake to see the opportunity and feel its responsibility!

The work in Cuba has opened auspiciously, and the prospects are that within a short time we will have a pastor and a teacher at the most prominent points in each of the provinces in the island. The appropriation of $12,000, including specials, was deemed sufficient to cover present needs.

Second. The reports from the church at home, while not so inspiring, were, nevertheless, hopeful. Notwithstanding the large falling off of collections reported up to Jan. 1, such was the prompt and liberal response made to the call of the secretaries that the Board was able to appropriate a sum slightly in advance of that appropriated last year. This enables us to conserve in its entirety our present force in all the fields, to add at least one missionary to each of several fields, and to take care of the new work enterprised in Cuba.

We begin the new year with firmer confidence in God, with increased faith in the fidelity and liberality of the church, and with better assurance of the efficiency of our system of evangelism as an instrument in giving the gospel to every creature.

Let us pray for a larger baptism of the Holy Spirit at home and abroad, and let us make a fuller consecration of ourselves and our all to the work whereunto we are called.

Among the things done at the late meeting of the Board of Missions the following preamble and resolutions were offered and adopted:

Whereas, In the earnest appeals of Bishops Wilson, Galloway and Dunn can before a joint meeting of the Boards of Missions and Education our attention was thoughtfully and forcefully called to the vital relations of our education work in foreign fields to the permanent success of our missionary operations; And, whereas, We are officially informed that about $75 000 will be necessary to properly equip our institutions in those fields; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we respectfully request the Board of Education to incorporate this interest in their plans and provisions for the Twentieth Century Fund, and that we request the Annual Conferences to provide for the appropriation of a due proportion of the funds collected by them to this object.

Resolved, That we commend this matter to the attention and generosity of our people at large.

(Signed) JOHN H. MCLEAN,
P. H. WHISNER.

On motion of Dr. Gross Alexander the secretaries were required to furnish a copy of this paper to each of our church papers, with the request that it be given prominent place in an early issue; also that a copy be sent to the secretary of each of the Annual Conference Boards of Education.

In pursuance of this action we send the above on its mission, praying that it may accomplish the end whereunto it is sent.

Truly, W. R LAMBUTH,
J. H PRITCHETT.

THE OXFORD FEMALE COLLEGE.

It is well known by those who have been in any way connected with our female educational work in the North Mississippi Conference that for the past five years I have advocated progress and advancement, and have left no stone unturned for larger and better facilities at Grenada. Having manifestly outgrown our capacity, a renewal of this effort to meet our need was made in January last by a special meeting of our trustees and preachers and laymen convenient to Grenada. In this advisory council I gave a full statement of the needs of our institution, and the practical impossibility of raising funds from the church at large to put up new buildings, and asked that the people of Grenada make these improvements. Due emphasis was placed upon the necessity of action at this time in view of the Twentieth Century Movement to equip and endow our colleges. In the face of all these facts—the evident possibility of doing something handsome for our institution here by means of the Twentieth Century Fund—I was met with the positive statement that Grenada could do nothing. When this meeting was called no thought was entertained of transferring the school to Oxford. Soon after this meeting, however, by invitation I visited and examined the vacant school plant at Oxford. I found the property there very valuable, clearly worth twice as much as ours at Grenada, and with nearly twice the capacity. In the years '96-'7 over $15 000 in improvements and additions to the original property having been expended, the plant I found to be in first-class condition. At the lowest estimate, it would take $10,000 outlay to make our Grenada property equal to the Oxford school plant as it now stands. This property had to be sold to satisfy a trust deed held on it for these improvements. On investigation, it was found that the plant was held by the trustees at $15,000, the amount recently expended on improvements, and that it could not be secured by us at that price on a mere option to wait over indefinitely. After due and mature consideration the pastor of our church at Oxford, the Rev. R. M. Standifer, and I secured the property for $11,000 from the party holding the trust deed, the people of Oxford agreeing to pay $5,000 of that amount, thereby bringing into our possession a school plant, well located on a ten-acre campus, in a town recognized as an educational centre, with buildings in first-class condition, furnished with school and boarding fixtures, and with capacity for not less than one hundred boarding pupils.

It is proper to add that ample time and opportunity has been given to the people of Grenada, even since the question of removal was first agitated, to say nothing of urgent requests previously made, but they have never responded with a definite guarantee of any amount for new buildings or repairs.

All benefit that a female college can possibly bring to the town in which it is located has been given to the people of Grenada. For the past five years—the period of my administration—everything that the student body and college family has consumed has been bought in Grenada, except the uniform for the past two years, and these were bought elsewhere because Grenada could not furnish them. I have had all my catalogues and other printing furnished by Grenada. It is very much to be doubted whether there is another school man in the State that has done as much for the town in which his school is located.

I have not the slightest disposition in my mind or heart to do this good people even a seeming injustice. For these years I have lived peacefully and happily in their midst, and have learned to love many of them and to esteem them all. I have had nothing at all in view but to conserve the interest of the education of our girls in the North Mississippi Conference, which has largely been committed to my hands. Lest an injustice might be seemingly done to Grenada, my plan is, as stated to the Board of Trustees, to turn over the property to the town, or its original owners, for $6,000, the amount the church originally paid for it, and give them all the other improvements. It will be remembered that the church bought the property and paid for it all that it was worth at the time, and besides improving it from year to year, has given them a school for seventeen years. It can not be shown that the establishment of our Conference female college at Oxford will be an injustice to Grenada, as ample return has been given for whatever outlay has been made.

I will open a college for girls and young ladies at Oxford, Miss., next September for the North Mississippi Conference and for the church, and I propose to make it equal to any in our connection.

As I review the whole situation from beginning to end, I can not see how that I could have done otherwise than to take the steps I have taken. It is useless for me to say that I have not considered my personal profit, as those who are acquainted with all the facts can well testify. My sole aim is to further the interest of the female educational work of our church, and I fully believe that the church and that the North Mississippi Conference will sustain my action and appreciate what I have done.

J. W. MALONE.

ON THE ROUND.

MR. EDITOR: Since my last report I have gotten fairly into the second round, and the scenes and associations of the places visited remind me forcibly of the flight of time. My first circuit embraced two points, and I am sure that I did not feel my importance nearly so much as presiding elder as I did while pastor of Sharon circuit, though I devoutly hope that I have grown both in grace and in knowledge during these twenty, and more, years.

At old Madisonville, now a part of the Madison circuit, I met only a half-dozen familiar faces, though a very decidedly larger congregation. The old church has been replaced by a neat, attractive building, and shows that some care is had for its protection and neatness. Bro. Geo. W. Galloway still leads our forces at that point. An influx of good, substantial Western people add life and zeal to the work. Would that we could secure scores of such families for every community. Here we found an Epworth League ready to take hold of any work suggested by the pastor. Having raised the assessment for Bishops at the first Quarterly Conference at the request of the pastor, we presented the other causes, and secured more than was asked of this church for all causes. Pastor Hawkins is working to remove every obstacle, so that he may devote the latter part of the year to the Twentieth Century Fund.

While in this community I was reminded of a little girl who suggested the wisdom of planning for the Master's work. Just before leaving for the session of our Conference little Georgia Smith—yes, that was her name—handed me $2.50 for foreign missions, and when I expressed my surprise at such a contribution, she explained the plan by pointing out an old speckled hen—"Susanna Wesley," as she called her. Susanna had raised one brood, all of which were sold, and, with proceeds from eggs laid, had netted this sum, thus demonstrating the wisdom of system.

From this point I spent a week with Bro. McLaurin in Canton, and preached twice a day. Good congregations encouraged us at every service, but beyond this very little visible effect. Our Baptist brethren had just closed a ten days' meeting, and with similar results. Whether the dominating influence of the open saloon is explanatory of such a condition, I do not say; but it is a lamentable fact that this is the only point on the district where they exist, and the most difficult point to interest the men in religious work. Pastor McLaurin is adding weekly to his auditors, and is most highly esteemed.

Lone Pine. This is the name of a church on the Sharon circuit, located in a thickly set grove of oaks. Our pastors of twenty years ago will recall a small, two-story California building of 15x20 feet used for grange, school and preaching purposes, close by our lone pine. The school-house still stands, but near by the Methodists and Baptists have each erected cozy, attractive churches.

A more quiet and appropriate place to build a house to the Lord has never appeared to me. Here in the Quarterly Conference we met several familiar faces, some evidencing long service for the Master; others who were more boys when last we met, but now carrying the burdens laid down by their fathers. A well-attended, delightful Conference. The faithful pastor, whom we would call a father in Israel, but fear to wound his youthful spirit, was on hand with a heart full of good cheer for all. He was appointed to preach his semi centennial sermon last year, but declined to advertise his age. "Everybody loves Bro. Williams," said a thoughtful brother. The financial reports were only fairly good, but there is hope for a better time when the Fall comes on. Bro. Williams is working diligently at the Twentieth Century Fund. Here we found Bros. Foster, Thompson, Cheek, Joyner, and other names honored in Methodist history in this section.

A visit to Sister Magruder, mother to Mrs. Dr. Sullivan and Mrs. Dr. Hunnicutt, was refreshing. Full of hope and faith, she has nearly reached the ninetieth milestone—a life well spent, and now ready to enter into the higher joys of her Lord. How much Methodism and Christianity have gotten out of that life and home the Master alone can know.

Bros. Jones and Bailey, of Jackson, are preaching to full houses. Here are two noble bands of Leaguers actively at work.

The Woman's Home Mission Society of Capitol Street are making efforts for the building of a parsonage, and are meeting with much success.

Jackson is interested at this writing in the building of the electric railway, and agitated over a petition for an election for open saloons. It is now doubtful if the petitioners will have the requisite one-third signatures, and should it so prove, the Prohibitionists are sanguine of success at the polls.

Bro. J. W. Brown, on the Terry work, has had quite a spell of fever, but is now improving. T. B. H.

A TEST.

The movement to raise a million and a half of money for education comes to us, as a church, as a test of our faith in God. Money is not the prime object, but the faith of the church in the divine promises, and the recognition of our stewardship, will be fully exposed, that all men may know just where we stand. If the church has God's means, and is withholding it, then God can not bless us, but he comes in this movement, gives us an opportunity, and calls unto us to honor him with our substance. It is a time for everyone to read and ponder the parable of the talents, and go out trading for the Lord, that he may "receive his own with usury" at this time of his coming, to demand an account of our stewardship. Will we meet the demand, and, honoring God, receive a blessing?—or will we be unbelieving and unfaithful in "the unrighteous mammon," so that he can not trust to us "the true riches"?

Ye rich men, ponder the question, and out of your abundance give much; and ye poor men, of your little give what you can, so that, as a church, we may enter the coming century with broader views, higher aims, and more aggressive processes, and rejoice as we receive the spiritual outpouring according to the promise of the Lord, whom we honor and serve. The conditions demand a lengthening of our cords and the digging of our ditches, in order to convey a stream of Christian culture, consecrated thought, to the refreshing of the people who sit in darkness and thirst for the streams of living water. God has honored us as a church by increase of ability, that we may honor him with our increase. Will we do it and grow like the cedars of Lebanon, or fail and wither as the flower of the field? Lord, help us to answer with "good measure, shaken down and running over."

"MAGNETIC HEALING."

BY MRS L. C. SADLER.

In reading the article in this week's ADVOCATE on "Magnetic Healing," it occurred to the writer that a few lines on this subject might help some one to come to a decision as to whether it is right or wrong for a Christian to take up this branch of healing or of "Christian science," so called.

Some time ago my attention was called to this subject by reading Professor Wettmer's magazine, called "Magnetic Healing," which a friend had sent. The argument was made that it was a good thing, and wholly in accord with biblical teaching, and all made so beautiful, and bolstered up with scriptural quotations enough to deceive "the very elect," if "the very elect" were foolish enough to be caught in the net laid for them.

In putting some pertinent questions to the Professor in reference to his method of healing, all the strong points of his book were reiterated and emphasized, and made so very plain and simple, that one felt a little self-condemned that they had displayed any Thomas-trait at all. Nevertheless, that trait was strongly entrenched, and upon a little further inquiry the bottom facts in the case came to light.

A prominent minister of Nevada, Mo., and a well-known bank of the same place, pronounced the "magnetic healing" more of a money making scheme than anything else. The so-called cures are a mixture of "faith-cure, spiritualism, fanaticism and humbug." They have a school of "Magnetic Healing," and will teach any one how to heal all "the ills that flesh is heir to" without any medicine.

If any of the readers of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE are interested in "Magnetic Healing" and have any money to throw away, an easy way to get rid of it would be to take a course of lessons in "Magnetic Healing," which would entitle them to a diploma at "Endor."

Not work alone will bring success in life; it is intelligent, well-directed, patient, persevering effort which tells in the long run. We must know, first of all, what we want to make of our lives; then we must be willing to spend our entire life-time, if necessary, in working for its accomplishment, not waiting. We must realize that every moment counts, that every effort tells; and if we have set our hearts upon that which is highest and best, it is worth everything it costs. If Columbus had sat down and waited for some one to offer him money and men and ships for his contemplated voyage in quest of the unknown land, America would yet have been a wilderness, or some one else had the glory of its discovery.—Exchange.

It is of the highest moment that we walk consistently. The men of the world will do many things which they would condemn, and very properly, too, in us. They expect us to walk by a higher rule, because we profess to do so. If you would not inflame their prejudices, you must remember your high calling. If you do so, they will say of you, as was said of Daniel, they "could find no matter against him, except in the law of his God."—Robert Hall.

Don't brood over the past, nor dream of the future, but seize the instant and get your lesson from the hour.—Exchange.

HOW WILL IT BE?

How will it be when the day is done,
And the field of the world we are called to leave
In the shadow of nature's sinking sun?
Shall we go as readers to joy, or grieve?
Shall we sing of hope in the harvest yield,
Garnered by us from the world's wide field?

Or wail many a sigh, if we remain,
Spared ourselves, for the little wrought—
Shall we look back to the golden grain
Untasted which we might have brought?
Joy we have as has been the strife
In the gracing of fruit for eternal life.

Toiled much fruit in the better land,
Safely housed from the storms of time,
Gathered and brought by a loving hand,
Will stand a pledge for a life sublime—
Linger and reap as the sun glides low,
The day is ending—it soon must go.

GRENADA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The session of the Grenada District Conference convened Thursday, April 27, 1899, in the town of Toccopola, Miss., with the Rev. H. C. Morehead, P. E. in the chair.

The session was of more than usual interest. We were sorely bereaved in the loss of Bro. H. P. Gibbs and Bro. A. J. Jones. These brethren had been called to their reward on high. Only about half of the preachers of the district were present, and not many lay members; but the citizens gave fine attendance from the first session throughout the Conference, both to the public worship and business sessions of the Conference. It was the best attended District Conference I have seen in ten years on the part of the community.

Thursday was given to the Sunday-school interest. Several stirring speeches were made, and some excellent papers were read on the different phases of the Sunday-school work.

Friday was given to the spiritual interests of the church, with special reference to missionary territory. A resolution was passed asking the Annual Conference to look after this special territory.

Friday night Bro. W. S. Lagrone preached, and then presented the cause of the "Mississippi Methodist Orphanage Home," located at Water Valley, and in the bounds of this district. Bro. Lagrone spoke in high praise of the condition and management of the Home; also of the manager, Bro M L Burton, as being the man for the place. A collection was taken; also the preachers and some friends raised money, specially, for a memorial bed in honor of the late Rev. H P. Gibbs.

The election of delegates to the Annual Conference resulted in the election of the following-named brethren on first ballot: R W. Jones, G. D. Shands, B. F. Saunders, and W. M. Dubard.

Three bright young men were recommended for admission on trial to the Annual Conference at the next session: G. S. Morehead, D. M. Gean, and H. D. Estes. Only one was licensed to preach: Bro. J. A. McKee.

Bro. G. W. Bachman was with us, and magnified his office in giving the people an opportunity to supply themselves with the best books and literature in the land. He sold several Bibles, and furnished the church with a good supply of song books, and sold a variety of good books. There is no telling the good this brother is doing in this work.

A resolution was adopted expressing commendation and appreciation of the work of Bro. Morehead, as this year closes his present period of service here by limitation of the law. The resolution will appear separate, and Bro. Morehead well deserves all that is stated in the resolution. He has been untiring in his work.

Saturday night was set specially for an educational service. Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan preached a sermon on Christian education that is a credit to our Conference and an honor to the man, and can not fail to do good.

The whole session of the Conference was spiritual and helpful.

Bro. Geddie, the pastor at Toccopola, and his people have endeared themselves to the brethren by their kindness and abounding hospitality.

The next District Conference goes to Oakland. W. M. YOUNG, Ass't Secretary.

SARDIS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Sardis District Conference was held at Courtland, Miss, April 27 to 30, 1899. The afternoon of the day before was given to the good women of the district who labor with us in the gospel, and Mrs. T. C. Wier, district secretary of the W. F. M. S. of the North Mississippi Annual Conference, held their district meeting. There was a good attendance and an interesting meeting. The forenoon of the opening day was occupied by the women in the interest of the Home Mission work, and presided over by Miss Julia Jones, of Arkabutla, Miss. This was a very interesting meeting. The reports showed much interest in this most important work. There were several preachers present, and all were invited to enjoy the freedom of speech, which opportunity was used by some to make confession to man's inferiority and woman's superiority in the particular matter of missionary work. All agreed that we should "help these women."

The District Conference proper opened at 2 o'clock P. M, April 27; Rev. T. C. Wier, P. E, in the chair, and Rev. Ben P. Jaco was called to the secretary's table. There was only one pastor absent, and nearly every charge was represented by one, or more, laymen. The sessions of the Conference and preaching were all interesting and profitable. All the interests of the church were looked after with much care, and important facts were developed that will be helpful in an advance movement of the cause of Christ. The good people at Courtland are to be congratulated upon the completion of so elegant a church, which they have furnished with beautiful seats, pulpit, and carpet. They now propose to build a new parsonage. Happy must be the King who rules among such a loyal people. Greater attention to the work of Sunday-schools and Epworth Leagues is asked for, and looking to this end, it was decided to hold a special Conference in the interest of these at Senatobia, Miss, embracing the second Wednesday and Thursday in July, 1899. The abounding hospitality received by those attending the Conference will be long remembered, and secure a most hearty response whenever Courtland asks for our return. BEN P. JACO, Sec.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

The pastors and local preachers of the Brookhaven district met in the Methodist Church at Brookhaven, Miss., April 26, at 9 o'clock, to hold a Missionary Institute. This was the day before the meeting of the District Conference. Quite a number of delegates to the Conference were also present. The devotional exercises were conducted by the presiding elder, after which Jno. D. Ellis was elected secretary.

The following subjects were announced by the presiding elder for discussion: "Our Obligation to Give the Gospel to the Heathen," "The Doors Lately Opened before Us," "How to Get Our Collections in Full."

Rev. Robt. Selby led the discussion in an earnest and well-prepared speech on "Our Obligation to Give the Gospel to the Heathen."

Revs. I. L. Peebles, C. A. Powell, T. W. Adams, H. W. Featherstun and W. M. Williams followed in discussion of the same subject. The obligation to carry the gospel to the heathen was shown to grow out of the relation of the church to Christ.

The second item in the program, "The Doors Lately Opened before Us," was led by Rev. I. L. Peebles. Rev. Robt. Selby followed in the discussion.

The discussion of the third item, "How to Get Our Collections in Full," was led by Rev. C. A. Powell. One of the sources of failure was attributed to the low state of piety of the individual member. The remedy suggested is an appeal to the individual conscience.

Bro. Powell's address was followed by Revs. I. L. Peebles, W. W. Morse, W. M. Williams, C. H. Ellis, and T. W. Adams, in which many wise and practical suggestions were made. The discussion was closed by the presiding elder, in which he recapitulated the salient points with wise and additional suggestions.

PERSONAL REMINISCENCES OF REV. ROBT. B. DOWNER.

Rev. Jno. G. Jones and Jno. Lusk were two of the presiding elders that I knew in those days. Bro. Jones gave many special sermons on the doctrine of entire sanctification as a second work of grace received by faith. "The Guide to Holiness," published in New York, had been a visitor at our home for many years. Nobody thought it heretical or disloyal to profess what some are pleased to call "the second blessing." At the camp meeting, held in 1858, many sought and found this precious work of the Holy Spirit. I knew the theory, and was well posted as to requirements, but did not possess this state of grace. I longed for it, and when the invitation was extended to all to seek it, I was found at the altar as a seeker. There began a close inspection. Did God have control of my entire being? I answered, "Yes"—that is, all but one thing: Willingness, just as I was, to enter upon the work of an itinerant minister. I argued that my education was not completed; no Quarterly Conference would grant me license to preach, and if so unwise as to grant license, they would not recommend me to the Annual Conference for admission on trial; but, if they did, I could not go to Conference in my disabled condition, but, if I did get to Conference, I would be rejected.

Oh, the pleas I made to have God fix me up like other men, or release me from the call and give me the blessing!

Well, the contest was not ended in a day. It seemed so strange with God's supremacy in everything else about me, and yet exact what to me seemed a harsh additional demand, "Be a minister of the gospel now, even if required to crawl upon my knees to reach appointments."

Finally I yielded, and said, "Lord, open the way, and I am ready for service or sacrifice."

Oh, such an envelopment of the divine fullness that swept down upon my hungry soul! I do not remember shouting aloud, but if I did, no special note was made of it by others; but liberty, peace, joy in the Holy Ghost, and love for souls, filled my cup to overflowing.

At once I asked the Quarterly Conference, then in session, for license and recommendation to Conference for admission on trial, and, without a dissenting voice, my requests were granted. I felt awed and overwhelmed with responsibility. Did God really need and want my feeble service? Well, the die was cast, and I must enter every open door presented. It would yet be a few months till Conference assembled. To Woodville was a long distance for a well man to ride to. Then I had no horse, or money to buy with, and if I had a horse, how could I ride upon his back? I felt that these difficulties were insurmountable, and I would never leave my mother alone.

One day I experimented upon the people of Johnson's Station, to see if I could preach, and as no one laughed or ridiculed the effort in my presence, I thought, perhaps, I might be able to edify plain country people on some backwoods circuit. For awhile I had no disturbing thoughts about Conference or the future; but, as time rolled on, I began to experience some unrest, and the duty of preparation was before me. Prepare what? Why, buy a pair of saddle-bags. Oh, yes; I have money sufficient, and can do that. The bags were bought. These bags surely looked like a tangible beginning for an itinerant, but they are handy for any countryman to have.

There was a specific day in the calendar that required me to start to Dr. V. J. Wrotens' house, as he was a lay delegate to Conference, and was to accompany me to Woodville. On awakening that morning, I found my best clothes hanging on the back of a chair, and saddle-bags handy. I dressed, packed saddle-bags, and came down stairs with bags on my shoulder. After morning prayers, breakfast was next on our daily program. After breakfast—ah, I felt sure the Lord would have to release me. I said to mother: "Mother, here I am—dressed, saddle-bags packed, breakfast ended, and I am now ready to start, and the Lord has failed. I have no horse." She replied: "How do you know? Have you been outside to see?" I replied: "No, I am sure of it." Softly she replied: "Suppose you go out on the gallery and see." Well, I did, and there stood saddled my mother's only horse, awaiting its new owner. I broke down, overcome by emotion. "O mother, that's your horse." "No, my son; it's the Lord's, and now at your service." "But, mother, now that I have the horse, I can't mount him from the ground." She calmly replied: "There is a horse-block." "But, mother, I don't know that I can ride if able to mount his back." Her answer was, "Try." Well, there was nothing else for me to do but surrender. Bidding her what I thought was a final farewell, I went to the horse-block, and found I could not ride a-straddle like a man, but could sidewise like a woman, and off I started for Conference, or heaven; I knew not which.

The Influence of Recent International Events on the Church of the Future.

(Read before Pastoral and Theological Institute of Durant district, and requested for publication.)

To-day we face conditions in some particulars uncommon to any previous period of history, while in many respects ours is not unlike many noted crises of preceding times. Not only in the M. E. Church, South, but in all the Methodist Churches on the globe and throughout evangelical Christendom, there is a lapse into somewhat indifferent attitude toward the world of sinners unsaved. The shameful figure showing a $10,000 falling away of missionary collections in 1898, and the humiliating statement that a real decrease in membership has occurred in our beloved Zion, with like shortages all along the line, and corresponding effeminacy in other denominations, indicate the dire need of a divine awakening in all departments and all quarters.

Then look at the immediate results of our new territorial acquisition. Some ten millions more of immortal souls to provide with spiritual ministrations, with our own vitality running low. Some will get frightened and faint-heart because of this seeming disparity. But fear not; it is only seeming. Already the dependence of the churches on divine guidance and power is bearing fruit; and even now many consecrated pastors and people are calling out in anguish of soul, "O Lord, give us a Holy-Ghost revival!" Humility is the stepping stone to exaltation. The stoutest wagons are built nearest the ground, and the most formidable iron-clads are most completely submerged from view.

The most inspiring of all facts is that man is not left to grapple with the ponderous problems of the age all alone. While weak humanity is God's readiest instrumentality in all earthly operations, yet monarchs, nations, navies, and official functionaries are often controlled by a "special providence" to serve both God and man, in conjunction with the invisible Providence ordinarily understood—"the divinity which shapes all our ends, rough hew them as we may."

Witness the "five epochal events of the year 1898," all of world-wide significance. They are: "The war for the liberation of Cuba, the near approachment of America and England, the Czar's protest against standing armies, the passing out of the old regime in China, and placing of the capstone to the edifice of British dominion in Africa." "Any one of the five," says the Missionary Review of the World, "was sufficient to give the year a unique position among the passing decades." This one year's record stands for more than the happenings of many entire centuries. It chronicles greater advances for the kingdom of righteousness, and changes which make mightily for the weal of the entire human family on a vaster scale than any previous century of human history. Its annals show how marvelously God is moving on among the nations in their quickened and quickening march. "The forces which co-operate," says the same authority, "are increasing both in number and cogency, and the rate of progress is constantly quickening. Now, changes which once required generations are wrought within the limits of a decade. The last half of the century far surpasses the first in supplying the tokens that the final triumph of the gospel is drawing nigh." Verily, I believe that Almighty God is rapidly marshalling the available forces for the final conquest of the world for the heavenly kingdom!

I submit that I believe the most important of the five events, above referred to, to be the invitation of the Czar to the nations of the earth to a Peace Conference, which shall consider the question of disarmament. This has been promptly followed by "one hundred and forty-five religious denominations," according to Bishop Hendrix, uniting in a petition to the governments of the world in favor of arbitration and disarmament. This wonderful document is now before the government at Washington.

Thus rapidly are removing the obstacles to Christian progress. Nations claiming allegiance to the Prince of Peace, and exerting their subtlest arts to maintain a domineering military supremacy, will soon be a thing of the past, dark ages of the world.

DO PROTESTANT MISSIONS ENCOURAGE GOOD CITIZENSHIP?

BY MISS GENEVIEVE COCHRAN, MERIDIAN.

On our own consciences lies the obligation to war against the corruption of the faith, and to tear away the bandages with which the church seeks to cover the eyes of her children, and to let the light from the cross of Christ shine into their minds and hearts, for Romanism teaches nothing of the truth; it gives no light—on the contrary, it hides the truth, for it forbids the God-given privilege of reading the Sacred Scriptures. It even punishes the hungry soul whom it finds searching these Scriptures, allowing its subjects neither to read nor to think upon matters of theology. The church demands its bidding to be done; that the soul be handed over to it in blind and ignorant confidence that the church can take all care for it. Faith in the infallibility of the Pope, the worship of Mary, auricular confession, priestly ablution—all such gross departures from the simplicity of the gospel, such perversions of the teachings of Christ as inculcated by priests, many depraved, ignorant, and tyrannical. The homes and daily life among the masses indicate a condition that must appeal to a Christian people. No Bible or any other book to drive away ignorance and superstition; hardness and apparent hopelessness on every hand; nothing to give cheer and sunshine; a miserable crucifix on the bare wall, faded pictures of traditional saints, and floating before the houses flags bearing the images of various saints to which the inmates look for protection from certain ills and evils.

The wife of the rural Brazilian is sallow and sad; hopelessness and dejection is stamped upon features that seem never to have known a smile. The children in these homes live as their parents live, ignorant of the Bible as their parents are, and leave the same legacy of soul-slavery and superstition to their children as was left to them. Thus, from generation to generation, such is Romanism and its work—the religion to bring South America to Christ. Such it is essentially in Mexico and elsewhere, where, with its mask off, it reveals its true nature.

How different the result of Protestant evangelization! Conversion is God's perpetual miracle. There are transformations in the lives of men that can not be counterfeited. Reformation of outward conduct may be, and not due to any work of grace, but the regeneration which changes not only outward habits, but the inward nature, transforming affinities and affections, moral preferences into abhorrence. Such is this re-creation, God's everlasting sign; and it is a glorious testimony of the power of regeneration through Christ that under the very death-shade of superstition and ignorance there are made such striking examples of regeneration, of spiritual consecration, of fruitful Christian lives.

What but the spirit and love of Christ could create so beautiful and lustrous a life as lived that noble Japanese, who, as a child, threw off the fetters of an empty faith, and lifted up his soul for the true strength of the Christian religion. Joseph Neesima's life had wrought in it, as in the Crusader's cloak, the red sign of the cross, and, like Joseph in Egypt, risen up to be the savior of his people. Nothing but the hand of death arrested his work for their salvation. The pride, honor, and foremost apostle of Christian Japan, he was followed to his resting-place by representatives from all the Empire, government officials, and even Buddhist priests, anxious to do honor to him who, before he had lived fifty years, had made a mark upon the Empire such as no other man had ever left for good.

The most noted woman chief of the Hawaiian Islands, Kapiiolani, was a dark-minded, superstitious, intemperate, repulsive woman until she was visited and taught by the missionaries, and finally, when the gospel touched her heart, this degraded daughter of heathen kings was soon found at the place of prayer, dignified, devout and meek, resolute and courageous. She received the messengers of the Lord at her house with the courteous cordiality of Lydia, and with them planned for the improvement of her own people in condition and character, and, fully inspired with the zeal and heroism of a reformer, without counting costs to herself, sought every means to transform the morals and religion of her country. When she died in 1841, had no other gem for the crown of the Great Conqueror been dug up from Hawaiian soil, the conversion of this woman would have sufficed to prove that the gospel is, as truly as in apostolic days, God's power unto salvation.

Mrs. W. H. Wall, of North Miss. Conference
Conference Officers of Mississippi Conference
Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, of Louisiana Conference

On last Wednesday and Thursday the District Conference of the W. F. M. S. and H. M. Society of Sardis district held their annual district meeting in Courtland, Miss. Our presiding elder, Dr. T. C. Wier, kindly gave us a day and night before the district work of the brethren began.

Your humble servant was elected secretary of both meetings, and although she was worked pretty hard, enjoyed the sessions more than she has done before. The good people of Courtland entertained us with great cordiality and hospitality, and all felt at home.

Sister Wier, as district secretary in foreign work, presided with dignity and ease. In her report she gave a concise and interesting account of her work. She had only three auxiliaries unrepresented in the whole district. Two of these sent written reports. She makes a faithful district secretary. Sorry we will have to give her up after this year.

Miss Julia Jones, as district secretary of Home Missions, presided with as much composure and grace as if she were an old soldier of the cross. We are proud of our young and consecrated district secretary. She teaches school all the week, and gives her Saturdays and Sundays to God's service. Her annual report was full of zeal, and showed she had been at work.

Miss Lizzie Streater's letter, telling us of her work as city missionary in Kansas City, was read at night, after a beautiful welcome address and response. Her letter so enthused our hearts that Bro. G. moved that we take up a collection and send it all to Miss Lizzie for her work.

A touching story on "Snippy Department" of our work was touchingly read; title, "God's Box."

The brethren were so helpful and encouraging to us it made our hearts rejoice, and will stimulate us to still greater efforts another year.

Bro. W. said he had heard so many good talks and pieces read, had worked with us and enjoyed our sessions so much, and then his Conference, too, so much, that he hardly knew whether he was one of the "sisteren" or "brethren!"

The presence of "Our Father" was with us, and we all felt happy.

We organized a H. M. S. there, which is going forward, and build a new parsonage soon.

The new little church at Courtland is "a gem." It is finished and furnished in perfect taste. A large memorial window in front, erected by the presiding elders and pastors who had preached there in days gone by, is beautiful.

But I am digressing from the work. Miss Julia had a delegate from every society in her district but one. A good representation!

Meeting closed with a Methodist collection, one-half of which was given to W. F. M. S.

The District Conference will meet next year in Hernando.

FROM THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL BOARD OF MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

All the members of the Board who attended the Sunday-school Convention at Lumberton recently, know that arrangements were made to conduct a column in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. We had been informed that the editor had previously agreed to allow us that much space in the paper; but on communicating with him about the matter, it was learned that he had agreed to publish only occasional articles from the Board. This accounts for the fact that no contribution from the one who was elected to have charge of the column has appeared. "Occasional articles" will be furnished now and then, giving the public some information about the Sunday-school work within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference. The attention of all is directed to the following:

(1) The Executive Committee are now ready to receive invitations from schools for the next Annual Convention, to be held in April next year. Schools in the eastern part of the State need not apply, as the first two conventions were held in Meridian and Lumberton—both in that section of the State. Madison and Brandon both want the convention. Let us hear from others right away. Send invitations to myself or Rev. W. T. Griffin, of Mayersville, Miss.

(2) All pastors and superintendents are urged to hold Children's Day in every Sunday-school in the Conference. The Board is trying to help every needy school, and to stimulate others to more active and better work by furnishing our Sunday-school periodicals, maps, charts, Bibles, hymn-books, etc., at half price. We also propose to duplicate any amount up to $25 raised to buy Sunday-school libraries. A great many schools have responded to the proposition, and the Board has already made an account at the Publishing House of nearly $200. The fund raised on "Children's Day" is our only source of revenue, and unless the Sunday-schools throughout the Conference observe this day and send in a liberal contribution, the Board will have to call a halt in its work and fail to accomplish the good we hope to realize. Observe "Children's Day" at the earliest date possible and send the amount collected to W. T. Griffin, of Mayersville, who will forward same to Thomas Mount, treasurer of Board, who is temporarily residing in New Orleans.

(3) At the request of Rev. W. H. Huntley, we give the names of the officers of the Mississippi Conference Sunday-school Convention, who were elected at the recent meeting in Lumberton.

Rev. B. F. Lewis, president; Rev. W. T. Griffin, vice president; Miss Annie Mellen, secretary; D. Scarborough, recording and corresponding secretary; Thomas Mount, treasurer. Samuel Grant, vice president, Vicksburg district; I. C. Enochs, vice president, Jackson district; Adrian Trimble, vice president, Natchez district; C. A. Redding, vice president, Brookhaven district; D. S. Harman, vice president, Forest district; Heard Ledyard, vice president, Meridian district; R. A. Magruder, vice president, Seashore district.

(4) The following are the members of the Sunday-school Board of Mississippi Conference:

W. T. Griffin, president, Mayersville, Miss.; D. Scarborough, secretary, Forest, Miss.; Thomas Mount, treasurer, Vicksburg, Miss.; A. T. Bell, Shubuta, Miss.; H. B. Trevillian, Columbia, Miss.; J. W. Crisler Woodville, Miss.; W. W. Morse, Auburn, Miss.; A. Trimble, Natchez, Miss; W. A. Gunning, Jackson, Miss.; R. A. Magruder, Hattiesburg, Miss.; W. H. Hawkins, Meridian, Miss.; G. B. Harper, Hickory, Miss.; S. Hilbert, McComb City, Miss.; J. D. Ellis, Mt. Carmel, Miss.

(5) We hope that the leaflets published by request of the Sunday-school Convention, and now being distributed by the Sunday-school Board, will be carefully read by everybody who may receive one. They were not published for nothing, and unless read and heeded by the people, it will be a waste of money to the Board and a loss of time to those by whom they were prepared.

(6) We suggest that pastors hold circuit Sunday-school Conventions some time during the year, to last two days—Saturday and Sunday. Let a suitable program, including an appropriate sermon by the pastor on Sunday at 11 A. M., be arranged early enough to give all time to prepare for the occasion. Rev. H. G. Hawkins brought the suggestion to our mind by announcing that he intends holding such a meeting on his charge at an early day. We are persuaded to believe that if every pastor in the Conference would follow his example, great good would be the result.

Let every preacher, teacher, Sunday-school superintendent and all who are interested in this important work of the church work, plan and pray that our Sunday-schools may become more effective, and the people more deeply and universally interested in the cause.

D. SCARBOROUGH,
Sec. of S. S. Board.

FAITH HEALING.

It is not the purpose of this writer to discuss the question of faith healing exhaustively, but only to mention what is involved in the universal custom of praying for the recovery of the sick. The practice is either founded upon belief of the efficacy of prayer for the recovery of the sick, or else it is solemn mockery. Nor does it relieve the situation to say, "We pray God's blessing upon the means used for the cure of disease," for his blessing is something additional to the efficacy of the natural means employed, or else it is nothing at all, and in that case prayer is both foolish and impious. Fear of drifting into what is called by some "fanaticism" may end in the denial of this supernatural altogether.

If, then, we mean, when we pray God's blessing upon the means employed, that he give to such means an efficacy they do not naturally have, we must expect the direct and immediate interposition of the divine power to effect the cure. But if we do not believe such interposition possible, there is no ground for prayer. And, further, prayer for such a purpose implies faith in God's power to effect the cure with the means, or without means, or against the tendency of means prescribed through mistake to aggravate and render disease incurable. If faith enables us to turn the case over to the Great Physician, our modesty should secure us against the temptation to dictate the means of cure. Wholesale denunciation of the doctrine of faith-cure does not harmonize with the practice of prayer for the recovery of the sick.

H. G. W. ELLIS.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. H. G. Hawkins, P. C., Madison, Miss.: "On Aug. 11 and 15, in connection with the third Quarterly Conference of the Madison charge, there is to be held at Pearl River Church a Sunday-school Institute and celebration for Madison circuit. The intention is to have as many of the Sunday-school workers as possible present, especially all the teachers of the four Sunday-schools of the charge. The pastor and the four superintendents were appointed by the second Quarterly Conference to arrange the program. At Madison Station and Madisonville we are raising the collections ordered by the Annual Conference, and expect to have the total from those two places in a few days. The presence of our presiding elder, T. B. Holleman, was very helpful at the second Quarterly Conference, held at Madisonville. Last Sunday an Epworth League was organized at Pecahontas, and it bids fair to prove a useful arm of the work at that place. Rev. Ira F. Hawkins, of New Decatur, Ala., is expected to assist at a meeting in Madison Station in July."

Rev. A. W. Turner, Boyce, La., May 4, 1899: "We are getting along very well on the Boyce and West Alexandria charge. Haven't missed an appointment since Conference. I reached my circuit in time to preach Christmas Day. Congregations are very good at all of our church services. The Board of Stewards made a liberal assessment for preacher in charge, and they are succeeding very well collecting same. We have been pounded twice since Conference, and the last one, Mr. Editor, was the heaviest pounding we have been called on to receive since we entered the itinerancy as a Methodist preacher. But when I tell you that it was the West Alexandria congregation on one hand, and only the preacher in charge and family on the other, you will see at once we acted wisely just to take what came. We have let the contract for a new church in Boyce, and the work has begun. Our Building Committee has been very zealous in their efforts to rebuild, and our people have responded nobly to our calls for help. We expect to have the house completed by Aug. 1, and we will have a very neat, substantial house, worth $1,500. Dr. Whisner notified me yesterday that the General Board had donated $200 for our use. We have applied to the Conference Board for $100, which we hope to get. If so, we will have no debt on our house when finished."

REVIVAL AT KENTWOOD.

We are in the midst of a meeting at Kentwood that bids fair to be far-reaching in influence and soul saving in results. The meeting began Friday last in the handsome and commodious church built by Rev. S. S. Keener two years ago, and will be continued (D. V.) ten days.

Our people at Kentwood have been sorely tried by the blood-thirsty lawlessness and high-handed demoralization that has brought our parish (Tangipahoa) so prominently before the public, but out of these trials the Lord will bring us; yea, he is leading us now, and we shall be stronger—better prepared to trust him—doing his will, anywhere and everywhere he bids us follow.

There were perceptible manifestations of divine power in the services yesterday: two conversions at eleven o'clock service, and the spirit of conviction is so manifest that men who have not been in the church for many years were anxiously listening to the simple preaching of the gospel of our Lord Christ last night. "The field is white unto harvest." The results of the meeting at Amite City were gratifying; the church was greatly blest. Had a number of conversions and accessions—total number received to date, twenty-nine; but this is nothing when we consider that there are hundreds of unsaved men living in hearing of the church bell. The Lord give us the spirit of wisdom, love, and a sound mind.

COLUMBIA CHARGE, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The second Quarterly Conference for this charge was held at Bonnil River last Saturday and Sunday. Dr. J. A. Parker was on hand, and when we arrived at the church we found at least two hundred people, and many of them were expecting a feast from the presence of the Lord; and, let me assure you, they were not disappointed. Bro. Parker was in fine trim, and preached a sermon that resulted in a blessing to preacher and people. He preached five times from Saturday morning until Sunday. His talk Saturday evening, along the line of prayer meeting and Sunday-school work, was timely, and can but result in great good to the church. At the close of the Sunday morning service at least one hundred church members pledged themselves to a better life, and thirty or forty sinners came up to be prayed for; so we can say that the Lord was with us, and we are thankful and happy. I am not one of the men who believe that we could get along as well without the presiding elder.

I spent the last week in April at Melville with Rev. J. W. Lee. I have never spent a more pleasant week anywhere. They turned me loose, and fed me well, and I felt constrained to do my best for them. We closed the meeting with the church greatly revived, and a bright prospect for many conversions. Bro. Lee is happy, and in high favor with his people. Not a word did I hear against him. He and the good people of his charge expect to have a new parsonage in Melville inside of six weeks. When Bro. Lee gets ready to move, any of us would like to take his place. I was domiciled with Bro. Sam Butler, formerly of East Baton Rouge parish. He and his family were dear, good friends of mine when I was their pastor in '87 and '88. It was so home-like to be with them. No Methodist preacher ever had a better home. I came away in love with the Melville people, and with the hope that if I never meet them on earth again, that I will meet them in heaven.

G. D. ANDERS.

May 10, 1899.

What the world needs now, and has needed for a long time, is a people who stand for something and are not afraid for the world to know it.

He that unduly fears man can not truly fear God; and he that lives much in the fear of God will not regard overmuch what man can do to him; the want of faith is the root of all such fear which becomes less and less as faith gathers strength and increases in the soul.—Serle.

Death Sometimes Spares.

A pathetic story of fact is told by an ex-Confederate soldier of one dark night on the skirmish line during the war. When on the instant that his musket was aimed to kill a Union picket the latter, suddenly inspired with a sense of his own defenceless condition, began to sing those beautiful words: "Cover my defenceless head with the shadow of thy wing." The Confederate withheld his hand. He could not fire. The picket's life was saved.

Death sometimes spares the one who seems marked to be his victim. Let no one despair, even in the darkest hour. Many a man who seemed picked out for death by consumption has found respite and safety through the use of that wonderful "Golden Medical Discovery," which Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., invented thirty years ago, and which has brought new life and hope to almost countless thousands of men and women.

Every day brings a multitude of letters to Dr. Pierce, telling gratefully what his medicines and his advice have done to restore health and happiness to homes where hitherto sickness and misery had reigned supreme.

A gentleman living in Stillwater, Washington County, Minnesota, Mr. C. J. McNaney, writes: "In the spring of 1884, I was taken ill with consumption, and after trying everything I could hear of and doctoring all summer my physician said I had consumption, and that my left lung was nearly gone, and that I could live but a short time. About twelve bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery brought me out all right, and I cured myself of two more attacks of the same trouble. I am satisfied that the 'Golden Medical Discovery' will cure consumption if taken in time. I consider it the best medicine in the world for the diseases for which it is recommended."

Best Edition of the World's Best Books

—THE—

"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangment for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$1.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. Good manners (observes Locke) are the blossom of good sense, and, it may be added, of good feeling, too; for if the law of kindness be written in the heart, it will lead to that disinterestedness in little as well as great things—that desire to oblige and attention to the gratification of others, which is the foundation of good manners.—Selected.

MISSIONARY EXPANSION THE DUTY OF THE HOUR.

From every one of onr mission fields come stirring appeals for more missionaries and for a mighty enlargement of onr missionary enterprises. Along with these ringing appeals come also the glad shonts of victory, and the joyous news of wonderfnl spiritnal conqnests, and of the triumphal march of the gospel through the very centers of heathenism. The church has no longer to pray for the removal of barriers; the doors in heathen lands now stand wide open, and the nations hitherto in darkness are loudly and piteously calling to ns for the truth that saves. Will the church respond to these providential calls and heaven-sent opportunities, or will she turn a deaf ear to the cries of the benighted, and sit down in sinful sloth and self-complacency? We have a consecrated and faithful band in the foreign field; but how few they are in comparison with the millions of heathendom! We ought, in the near future, to increase this number tenfold—yea, a hundredfold. Nor will this seem impossible when the church becomes fully aroused to the grandeur and importance of her mission, and gives herself for the world's conquest.

Bishop Wilson, who has just returned from a visit to our mission stations in the East, writing to the Review of Missions a short time ago, stated that, "Reform is the great word in China now from Pekin to Hong Kong," and mentioned that the people there know that reform must and will come. He also declares further that: "They know that our teaching and training alone can prepare them for it, and make it a blessing when it does come. Hence the field is practically ours. Christian literature is circulated as never before through almost the whole Empire and through Chinese agencies. Christian schools are patronized by the best families. In the city of Suchow I am confident that if we had the teachers for them, we could, in two years' time, or less, establish a dozen self-supporting schools."

This is the most encouraging news we have yet heard from that sin-cursed land. How it ought to stir us to action!

The wretchedness and degradation of the masses in China are thus graphically depicted by the Rev. F. S. Brockman, who, last Fall, was sent out as a missionary to the students of the East by the College Y. M. C. A. of America. Writing to the Review of Missions, he says: "It costs less in China to keep a man than to keep a donkey, and if you hire a donkey, you can have a man thrown in to run behind and hurry it along. Three cents a day for food is luxury. An unspeakable sadness comes over one as he looks upon thousands and thousands, a countless crushing throng of beings meant to be in God's image, and with eternal destinies, forced into lives beside which that of a dog or a horse in America would be heaven. Not only is there no danger of overstating it, but there is no hope to give you at home a realization of the degradation of man which an hour here would reveal. Intimately connected with this, and equally evident, is the poverty of the masses. A Chinese city is a sea of hovels. It was a common sight when in Nankin to see people out hunting snails for food, or scouring the fields for fuel; and yet China might be rich. It is said that the dead in China occupy more land than the living."

Bishop Warren A. Candler, after a personal visit to Cuba, and a careful study of the situation there, declares that "it is our nearest, neediest, and ripest mission field." Writing to the Wesleyan Advocate not long since, he said that if our people could realize how near it is, and if they had any comprehension of its urgent needs, we might make Methodism strong there in a very short time, and in a decade evangelize that island. He also goes so far as to say that if the church will give him forty-five men, in a year he will show more Southern Methodists in Cuba than the net increase of Georgia Methodism for two years past. The present is our grand opportunity; now is the time for us to go and possess for the Master this newly-freed and expectant land. Delay is dangerous. As Bishop Candler points out, "The greatest danger is that Protestantism may delay too long to go to the Cubans, and an obstinate irreligion may overcome the faith and destroy the life of the people."

The church member who imagines that he has no part or lot in this grand missionary movement of the church, not only has missed the chief meaning of Christianity, but is in danger of losing his own spiritual life. We can not be true Christians, and be indifferent to the salvation of others. Unless the love of souls burns within us, we may well doubt whether we be in Christ. As the lamented Bishop Haygood once said, "He who does not understand that the gospel is necessary to the heathen does not understand that it is necessary to himself." There is much significance in the fact that Christ's promise to be with his disciples always was coupled with the command to evangelize the world. In proportion as the church discharges this sacred duty will she be filled with the power of God. In proportion as any church lacks in missionary zeal will it lack in revival power. The Rev. A. N. Somerville, of the Free Church of Scotland, gives it as his testimony that "he has scarcely ever known a congregation favored with a minister who took an active part in mission work that was not prosperous."

Yes, there must be expansion in missionary effort, or contraction in spiritual life will surely overtake us. Every true Christian is an expansionist, for he longs to see the "kingdoms of this world made the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ." The honored founder of Methodism was a most pronounced expansionist, for he said, "The world is my parish."

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTION.

It was the privilege of the writer to attend the Ninth International Sunday-school Convention, which met in Atlanta during the closing days of April. The sessions of the Convention, three a day, were held in the Grand Opera House, a splendid building capable of seating probably twenty-five hundred people; and it was none too big. The sight of such a gathering of evangelical Christians, day after day, and night after night, was as great a novelty to one accustomed to the faithful few of New Orleans as were the red hills of Georgia to eyes used to the lowlands of Louisiana.

The arrangements for the reception and entertainment of this host—it is estimated there were 1,500 delegates in attendance—were as perfect as foresight, business sense, and executive ability could make them. The delegates had been asked to send their names and other particulars concerning themselves in advance to the Entertainment Committee, so they could be at once assigned to homes, and their cards of introduction sent them by mail, and they could then proceed immediately from the depot to their place of entertainment. It was our good fortune to be sent, in company with Bro. J. B. Streater, of the Mississippi delegation, to one of the finest homes in the West End of Atlanta, where everything possible was done for our comfort. Our hostess, a charming Baptist lady, remarked that she was glad the committee had sent her Methodists to entertain, as it was so much nicer for the various denominations to exchange courtesies on such occasions. Everyone of the Louisiana delegates—six Methodists and seven Presbyterians—insisted they had been sent to the best home in the city.

Ample provision had been made for music. On the stage was a chorus of some 200 voices under the skilled leadership of Prof. B. C. Davis. The singing was hearty, bright and spiritual; the entire musical program as varied as one could wish. For those who like the old songs, there was, "How firm a foundation," and "Coronation;" among the newer songs there were, "Throw out the life line," "Faith is the victory," and "Onward, Christian Soldiers." There were sacred solos, classic and well-nigh unintelligible, pleasing the cultured and fastidious; sweet and pathetic pieces were sung by those whose enunciation of every word was as clear as the recitation of a good elocutionist, delighting those who like to feel and understand what they are hearing. "Dixie," "The Star-Spangled Banner," and "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," roused the enthusiasm of the Convention to the highest pitch; and, lastly, we must mention the universally appreciated "Palms" played as a cornet solo. No convention should slight the musical portion of the program.

The spiritual feeling was excellent. One could not but feel that the leaders of that host were not only men of brains and ideas, but men of prayer; men who know the Bible, and who know its Author, and who are accustomed to look to God in every time of trouble and difficulty. This was especially noticeable, when the little breeze upon the color question came up the second day. That matter at one time bid fair to give some trouble, but the clear headed, warm-hearted B. F. Jacobs averted the difficulty. The question was referred to the Executive Committee to consider and report on a solution. All day and half the night carefully and prayerfully the committee toiled, striving only to do the right in the sight of God. The next morning they reassembled, and, after again waiting in prayer before God, the solution came. Mr. Jacobs appeared on the stage at the Friday morning session to present the report. None can forget his sweet Christian spirit, as, referring to the difficulty and delicacy of the question, he told how hard they had striven to settle it right, and then asked all to bow in supplication to God, that he would give them a right spirit and a right mind to do and to know God's will in the matter. He then led the Convention in a brief prayer, simple as a child's, and, on closing, a vote was taken, the report adopted, and the incident closed, not to come up again.

And right here we want to say that in the treatment of the delicate matter of the color question, too much can not be said in praise of the moderation of our Northern brethren. One and all, they seemed to feel it was a local question, and, though largely in a majority, and could, therefore, have carried their views with ease, they refrained from any expressions, leaving the entire matter to the brethren of the South. Such trouble as was had was due entirely to the "bumptiousness" of one or two colored delegates and to the indiscretion of two or three over-liberal Southerners.

Nothing, not even the full stenographic reports, can do justice to the addresses. Full of eloquence, facts, figures, methods, sanctified wit, as well as spiritual power, they had to be heard to be fully appreciated. No one, however, who is interested in the Sunday-school cause should fail to get the official reports of the Convention, and read them all.

Friday afternoon was devoted to the Primary Work, and this session was generally commented on as the most interesting of the Convention. The speakers were Mrs. Crafts, Mrs. Semelroth, Miss Minnie Allen, Mrs. Woodworth, Mrs. Bryner, Miss Harlowe, of Wannaker's School; Miss Vella, and Mr. Archibald, of Quebec. The address of the latter was very bright. The reports on Primary Work by the ladies were full, and exceedingly interesting. Mr. Jacobs had said: "Lift your hat reverently when you meet the lady teacher of the primary department. She is the guardian angel of the republic;" and as one listened to them he felt Mr. Jacobs was right. At the close of this meeting one of the delegates said to another, "Now I know why these are called 'Primary Queens.'" "Why," he was asked. "Because they are queens, every inch of them." They were Christians, ladies, everyone sweet, modest, refined, as beautiful without as within.

But time would fail me to tell of the rich address of Dr. John Potts, of Canada; the inimitable C. D. Meigs, of Indiana, never so well described as when he was called a sacred humorist; the happy inaugural of the president, Hon. Hoke Smith; the inspiring account of Decision Day in Philadelphia, by Prof. Hamill—I had almost said, "Our own Hamill;" and, after all, why not "our own?"—the superb speech of Major Halford, pleading for Denver as the place of the next Convention; the many bright, scrappy, felicitous things that were being said all the time, and lastly the vast audience, singing, "God be with you till we meet again." The benediction was pronounced, and the Ninth International Convention, as a concrete thing, was at an end, but its life, its influence will go on, till we all meet at Jesus' feet, not in Denver in 1902, but in the New Jerusalem in eternity.

ALLEN F. GODAT.

FROM THE BISHOPS.

At their recent meeting the College of Bishops adopted the following with reference to the Publishing House War claim:

"In considering what action should be taken by the College of Bishops following the action of the United States Senate in our communication to that body respecting our unwillingness for the church, under conditions reflecting on her honor, to receive of ever so just a claim of our Publishing House, which had been pending for over twenty-five years, we make the following statement:

"We find that the Senate, after full investigation, exonerated the church from all censure, and we transfer to our records their official action, namely:

"'Resolved, That the report of the committee made July eighth, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, be approved, and that no censure should rest upon the M. E. Church, South, for the misstatements and concealments of the Book Agents in connection with the passage of the bill for the payment of the claim referred to in the letter of the Bishops now under consideration; that the injury resulting therefrom affected only the beneficiaries of the fund and not the United States, and the Senate should take no further action in the matter.'

"The Senate having thus declared that the United States Government sustained no injury in the passage of the measure and declined to take any further action in the matter, we have no occasion to make other communication to that body.

"As to the proper administration of the connectional officers the law has specifically charged the Book Committee with that responsibility.

"We deeply deplore any language used by the Book Agents that has been the occasion of humiliation and action among the ministers and laymen of our beloved church. We sympathize with their jealous concern for the good name of the church, believing, as we do, that even so just a claim of the church should be maintained only by methods perfectly candid and righteous.

"We have given much consideration to the communications sent to us under a misapprehension as to our authority. The Bishops have not been members of the Book Committee since 1878, and that body is solely responsible to the General Conference.

"We recognize the distinguished courtesy of the United States Senate in its dealings with the church, and its desire to protect the beneficiaries of the church."

The Seashore Camp Meeting will begin July 12. It is confidently expected that the attendance will be larger than for many years. An extended notice will be given in our next issue, it having reached us too late for this issue. No stone will be left unturned to make the meeting a success from every standpoint.

Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard writes from Mansfield, under date of May 15: "We are in the midst of a gracious meeting. Several have been blessed; The church greatly strengthened. Neighboring pastors, Bowmen and Williams, have rendered me valuable assistance. Bowmen still remains with me preaching in demonstration of the Spirit. We expect Bro. C. P. Smith from Minden this P. M. The meeting will continue."

Dr. I. W. Cooper was present at the Preachers' Meeting on Monday morning, en route home from Hattiesburg, where he spent the last week assisting Pastor Jones in a meeting. He reports the meeting as quite a success. The attendance was large, and quite a number professed conversion. There were several accessions to the church, with more to follow. The Doctor is jubilant over the prospects of Centenary. The indications are that the enrollment during next session will break all previous records.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Jackson, La., EDITOR.

The Sunday newspaper is not popular in England. Very recently a delegation of prominent men waited on a government representative, asking that he use his influence against it. So mote it be!

In this age of Sabbath desecration any need to be reminded of that Scripture which says, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." It is, of course, expected that every Epworth Leaguer will regard this strict command.

The League in Georgia is moving mightily. The State Conference, recently held at Columbus, was an occasion of profit and power. Bishop Candler's speech on Cuba wonderfully impressed the vast audience. The seed sown promises to produce abundant fruit.

Subscribe at once for the Epworth Era. The "International Conference Edition" will be a "thing of beauty." In clubs of ten the paper will be sent every week for twelve months for twenty-five cents.

One thousand dollars, and a man for the foreign field, is the result, in a substantial way, of the recent meeting of the Louisiana Leaguers at Crowley.

If those who are fond of figuring will examine the records, they will find that the League in this—largely Catholic—State is not far behind the foremost in its "work of faith and labor of love." May Heaven's richest blessings rest upon the heroic young Leaguers of Louisiana!

In some parts of Mississippi and Louisiana the friends of whisky are endeavoring to secure "the ordering of an election." Bishop Galloway is sounding his temperance horn in Mississippi. What a power he has been, and still is, in that grand old State! Oh, that we had many more men like him! Every Epworth Leaguer is expected to stand firm for God and home and native land."

Rev. A. C. Crews, General Secretary of the Canadian Epworth Leagues, is visiting in the South. The Leaguers of Louisiana and Mississippi herewith send to him a hearty welcome. Those who visited Toronto in '97 remember this typical Canadian Methodist and his many kindnesses to the "Southern delegates."

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT EPWORTH LEAGUE RALLY.

The Epworth League Rally for Shreveport district was held in First Church, Shreveport, May 3-5. A few Leaguers were kept away on account of sickness in their family; yet it was gratifying to note the attendance of so many clerical and lay delegates and visitors, among the latter being Rev. P. Moncrief, of Ruston, and Rev. J. P. Smith, of Minden, who made several ringing speeches. The Rev. Robert P. Honnell, of Zwolle, was chosen president of the Rally meeting, and Miss Bessie McCutchen secretary, each of whom rendered excellent service. Those to whom numbers had been assigned on the program were well prepared, and not a few of the papers read and the addresses made would have been creditable at a State, or Interstate, or even International Conference of Leaguers, where the magnates mostly shine. Rev. Perry O. Lowrey, upon whom the bulk of preliminary work fell, is to be thanked for the very choice program, which was mainly the result of his good judgment and experience in such things. Where all acquitted themselves so well, it would be unfair to single out the efforts of any as of superior merit; but it is allowable to say of Col. A. C. Mitchell, who, though well on in years, is an active Epworthian, that he was never missing from a meeting, and helped the cause by frequent sage and soulful talks. We ought also to say of the talented and genial pastor of First Church, Dr. W. T. Bolling, that, while he spoke to most every subject, all were highly delighted and mightily helped by his talks, that sparkled with genuine oratory, wisdom, wit, and pathos.

Great good has been done by the Rally, and all signs must fail if the Shreveport district does not make a splendid Epworth League showing at Monroe in December.

Resolutions were passed against Sabbath desecration, and other rampant evils and public sins.

An organization was effected, and a committee to prepare a Constitution and By-laws elected as follows: Revs. H. W. Bowman, P. O. Lowrey, J. B. Williams, and Mrs. Delia Boyd, Miss Mertis McCutchen, and Miss Daisy Lofton.

The Nominating Committee, composed of Jno. T. Sawyer, A. C. Mitchell, H. H. Hammett, Miss Lizzie Paxson, Mrs. Della Boyd, and Miss Bessie McCutchen, reported the following, who, on motion, were unanimously elected as the officers of the District League: Frank R Hicks, president; Mrs. J. P. Ratliff, first vice-president; Miss Ruth Sligh, second vice-president; H. P. Dance, third vice-president; Miss Johnnie Abbott, secretary; Miss Bessie McCutchen, treasurer; and Revs. Perry O. Lowrey and Robt. P. Howell, organizers.

The first regular District Conference of Epworth Leagues for the Shreveport district was fixed for the Fall, exact time and place to be determined by the officers.

COMMENDATION.

To the Members of the Sardis District Conference:

As this is the last official opportunity we will have to express our admiration of the character and labors of our presiding elder, we feel that we would be remiss in duty to ourselves should we let the occasion pass without that expression.

Dr. Wier's labors as presiding elder of Sardis district are rapidly drawing to a close, and it is not only right and meet, but our bounden duty to commend him for the very acceptable manner in which he has performed his arduous labors and the many Christian graces he has displayed in his official visitations. And while we feel that, perhaps, this expression of our regard for him as a man and Christian soldier has been withheld until the closing days of his labors, we assure him that it is none the less sincere, and when the time for separation does come our prayers for a long continuation of usefulness will follow him.

And we here and now, in Conference assembled, consistently and conscientiously commend him to whomsoever in God's providence he may be sent.

C. R BROWN,
A. KENDALL.

Rev. B. P. Jaco was asked to take the chair when the above paper was introduced, and, after a modest response from Dr. Wier, was adopted by a rising vote and requested to be published in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

THE FOREST DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

It was with much pleasure and great profit I attended the Missionary Institute of the Forest district; Bro. T. L Mellon, P. E I went as a visitor; hence had nothing to divert my attention from the full enjoyment of the occasion. The church was hung with a large map of the world, showing the various mission stations occupied by the Christian churches, and smaller maps emphasizing the fields occupied by the M. E. Church, South. A wide range of subjects was embraced in the programme, and each preacher and speaker seemed to have thoroughly informed himself for his part of the work. The Institute lasted three days—Saturday, Sunday, and Monday. The exercises began at 8:30 A. M., each day, with a prayer service for some special phase or difficulty of missionary work. There was preaching on stated subjects at 11 A. M, 4 P. M, and 8 P. M. The intervening hours were filled with interesting papers and spirited discussions. I heard most of these papers, and all the sermons except one, and not one was of an inferior order. All the preachers were present except one or two, who were detained at home from providential causes, and also quite a large number of local preachers.

Two things impressed me forcibly. First: the presiding elder of the Forest district held a Missionary Institute. He did not play at it by calling his preachers together to spend a few hours discussing a few phases of missionary work with which every intelligent layman is familiar. The occasion was magnified by a three days' session. The range of subjects compelled each participant to thoroughly inform himself as to the latest missionary intelligence. They led step by step up to a climax. The presiding elder posted himself on these subjects, and threw life into the discussions by pertinent questions. The sermon on missions, Sunday morning, was not an old one, but the most masterful it has ever been my pleasure to hear.

Second: An enthused presiding elder meant an enthused pastor; an enthused pastor meant an enthused church; an enthused church, large and liberal missionary collections, with a broadening, deepening missionary intelligence and spirit. The beneficial effects of this Missionary Institute can not be fully estimated.

If every presiding elder in Southern Methodism will hold a few Missionary Institutes on the order of this one, there will be no more deficits of $10,000 in our missionary collections, and no more net decreases of 8,000 in memberships. "A church which is absorbed and inspired by missionary activities has little to fear from heresy, or worldliness, or spiritual degeneracy. Christ himself walks in the midst of the golden candlesticks that are lighted with the flame of his own consuming zeal for the souls of men."

B. F. LEWIS.

Brandon, Miss., May 9, 1899.

PREACHERS' MEETING.

The preachers' meeting of the northern part of the Greenville district met at Belen, on the eighth and ninth of May, 1899, all the preachers being present except Rev. J. T. Murrah, Rev. J. E. Cunningham and Rev. J. M. Moose. The programme was taken up at 9:30 A. M., Tuesday morning. Subjects discussed with great interest and enthusiasm. The sermons preached by Rev. J. J. Brooks, Rev. Q. A. Oats and Rev. W. McN. Campbell were listened to with full satisfaction to all.

We hope the brethren throughout the whole Conference will organize their preachers' meetings, believing them to be of great good to all. We need work along this line. It is strength to the poor, hard-worked itinerant.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys: if it stains your linen, it is evidence of kidney trouble: too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail, address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention that you read this generous offer in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

BY ALFORD NEVIN, D. D.

PRICE, $1.50.

This is indeed a most valuable work, written especially for Sabbath-school and Bible class teachers, scholars, and all who feel the need, as it is believed many do, of a convenient and comprehensive volume to which they can at any time turn for information to aid them in understanding and defending the Word of God. It has been prepared to serve in this direction as a manual, to which recourse can be had with confidence and comfort, for explanations which might be found elsewhere, but only after research involving great expenditure of time and means. The author is a man of learning and talent, and has written an eloquent volume. All who read the book will be delighted with it. Read what is said of it by the religious press of the country.

"The work is one of universal merit and contains a vast amount of valuable information."—American Christian Review.

"It is a universal compendium in which may be found explanations of many things and much information."—The Church Union, New York City.

"As an aid to Bible students this is a desirable volume."—The Christian Standard, Cincinnati, O.

THE TONE OF VOICE.

It is not so much what you say,
As the manner in which you say it;
It is not so much the language you use,
As the tones in which you convey it.

"Come here!" I sharply said,
And the baby cowered and wept;
"Come here," I coned, and he looked and smiled
And straight to my lap he crept.

The words may be mild and fair,
And the tones may pierce like a dart;
The words may be soft as the Summer air,
And the tones may break the heart.

Whether you know it or not,
Whether you mean or care,
Gentleness, kindness, love and hate,
Envy and anger are there.

Then would you quarrels avoid,
And in peace and love rejoice,
Keep anger not only out of your words,
But keep it out of your voice.

—Youth's Companion.

WORRY.

"Anxiety," says Blair, "is the poison of human life. It is the parent of many sins, and of more miseries. In a world where everything is doubtful, where you may be disappointed, and be blessed in disappointment—what means this restless stir and commotion of mind? Can your solicitude alter the cause or unravel the intricacy of human events? Can your curiosity pierce through the cloud which the Supreme Being has made impenetrable to mortal eye? To provide against every danger by the employment of the most promising means is the office of wisdom, but at this point wisdom stops."

Says J. Mortimer Granville: "Overwork is barely possible, and seldom or never happens, while the mind is acting in the normal modes of mental exercise. The moment, however, the natural rhythm of work is broken, and discord ensues, the mind is like an engine with the safety valve locked, the steam gauge falsified, the governing apparatus out of gear; a breakdown may occur at any instant. The victim of worry is ever on the verge of catastrophe if he escape; the marvel is not at his strength of intellect, so much as his good fortune. Worry is disorder, however induced; and disorderly work is abhorred by the laws of nature, which leave it wholly without energy."

With what weapons shall the dragon be met? Reason is the first blade which should be used to cut him down. As the old stanza declares—

"For every evil under the sun,
There is a remedy, or there is none.
If there be one, try to find it;
If there be none, never mind it."

Some things, though painful and sometimes disastrous, occasionally benefit. Worry is not one of these. Its utter and never varying uselessness should be dwelt upon and made one of its exterminators.

Early storms destroyed two men's peas. One fretted, the other replanted. The first came to the second, surprised at his growing crop. "I sowed again, while you were fretting. I put off my fretting till I repair the mischief." "Why, then, there's no need to fret at all." "True; that is the reason I put it off." If the energy given to worry were expended in work, much of the worried-about evil would disappear.

"The mind cure," says Granville, "for the malady to which worry gives rise, and from which so many suffer, is not idleness or rest, in the ordinary sense of that term, but orderly and persistent work."

A lady asked me, one day, if I had learned to put H instead of D. I asked her to explain. "Why," said she, "if you put H instead of D, Disappointments become His appointments." Another person explained his habitual cheerfulness by saying that he treated every unavoidable accident as if it were the best thing that could have happened.

Bishrod Whitlocke, Cromwell's envoy to Sweden, was one night so disturbed over the state of his country that he could not sleep. His servant observed it, and said: "Pray, sir, will you give me leave to ask you a question?" "Certainly." "Do you think that God governed the world very well before you came into it?" "Undoubtedly." "And do you think that he will govern the world quite as well when you are out of it?" "Certainly." "Then, pray, sir, excuse me; do you not think you may trust him to govern it as long as you are in it?" No answer could be given, and the great man went to bed and to sleep.—Success.

TWO GENTLEMEN.

One gentleman was little and the other one was large. The large one was very tall and very straight. He wore a suit of fine broadcloth, and in his polished linen shirt-front a great diamond sparkled like a star. His boots were of patent leather, and so bright that you could almost see your face in them. He had on new brown kid-gloves, and carried an elegant silk umbrella with a silver handle, on which was engraved his monogram.

The little one was very short and very crooked, with a hump on one shoulder and a limp in his gait. His clothes were threadbare; his cap was ragged; his shoes had holes in them; his little hands were bare and red with cold. He held a clumsy newspaper bundle in his arms.

The two stood side by side upon the curbstone of a crowded street, waiting for a chance to cross. The little one looked up at the large one with admiration. "What a fine gentleman!" he thought. Suddenly a poorly-clad old woman, carrying a great basket of clothes, came from the opposite direction. As she neared the sidewalk she dodged suddenly to avoid a cart that was passing, and stumbled against the tall gentleman, her basket of clothes knocking out of his grasp the umbrella with the monogram on the silver handle. With an angry glance and a muttered oath he gave her a rough shove to one side, while he stooped to recover the umbrella.

The little one had seen it all. He threw down his newspaper bundle, while with one hand he caught the old woman, and with the other kept her basket from being overturned in the gutter.

"You're a gentleman—that you are!" she said, fervently, putting one of her hands with tenderness on the threadbare coat which covered the poor, misshapen back.

But the tall one did not hear her. He had crossed the street. And the little one was surprised. —Caroline B. Lerow, in Outlook.

BOYS, DON'T DRINK.

A lawyer in Chicago relates that, going home one night from his office, he was accosted by a beggar clad in rags. Looking at him more closely, he asked his name. His suspicions were confirmed. It was an old college friend, the brightest man of his year.

"Give me a dollar for old acquaintance sake," whined Misery, piteously.

"What has happened to you?" said his friend. "You have been in trouble."

"No trouble," he said, "but of my own making. I succeeded well enough for some time, but I went into company and drank hard. Not at first, but I could soon drink as much as any of them. It became a habit. After carousing into the small hours I was not fit for business the next day. One good chance after another I let slip through my being unnerved, until I sank to this."

His friend looked at him pitifully. He said: "You can make a new start out here, and I will help you."

"No," said the other, "I have lost energy and hope. Give me enough to get a meal and a bed. That is all you can do for me."

His friend pleaded with him, but to no purpose. He took him to a restaurant and fed him, and found him a lodging for the night. The next morning he went in to see him, but during the night he had committed suicide. Slain by the liquor that had ruined thousands.—Exchange.

THOUGHT OF HER BOYS.

During the early part of a dinner recently given in Washington, the guest of honor, a young married woman who is the proud mother of two very small boys, suddenly paused, with a startled look, in the midst of an animated conversation with her host, and cried: "There, if I didn't forget those boys again! Have you a telephone in the house, and may I use it?" Her host, says the Argonaut, conducted her to the telephone, and presently she returned. "I do hope you will pardon me," she said; "but, you see, I always have Georgie and Eddie say their prayers to me before they go to sleep. In the hurry of getting off, I forgot it to-night, so I have just called up their nurse. She brought the children to the 'phone, and they have just said their prayers over the wire, so my mind is relieved."—Philadelphia Record.

NAPOLEON AND THE PLOW.

A certain incident connected with the great Napoleon while he was in exile at Elba is commemorated in the island, to this hour, by an inscription affixed to the wall of a peasant's house.

A man named Giaconi was plowing when the famous exile came along one day, and expressed an interest in his work. Napoleon even took the plowshare out of the man's hand, and attempted to guide it himself. But the oxen refused to obey him, overturned the plow, and spoiled the furrow.

The inscription runs thus: "Napoleon the Great, passing by this place in MDCCCXIV, took in the neighboring field a plowshare from the hands of a peasant, and himself tried to plow; but the oxen, rebellious to those hands which yet had guided Europe, headlong fled from the furrow."—Youth's Companion.

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT,

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living

GRAND NATIONAL PRIZE OF 10,000 FRANCS AT PARIS.

What we truly enjoy in each other is likeness, not unlikeness. That is what makes the pleasure of good society. There is no rest save on the common ground. If I meet a man of different tradition, different religion, different race, different language, I am pleased with him for a moment, as I should be with a fairy or an amiable goblin; but he presently bores me, when the surprise of him is over. I find that we have no common ground. The perpetual yearning of our hearts is for intelligent response, and this can come only from our equals, from equality.—W. D. Howells, in November Century.

Happiness does not consist in the possession and enjoyment of wealth. The miser is the type of wretchedness. The hearts of millionaires ache as bitterly as our own. And yet most of us would like to have money and try the experiment. Others have failed, but we might be more fortunate. So the game of self-deception goes on. A competency wisely and temperately enjoyed will yield more true gratification than abounding affluence in the majority of cases. The finest pleasures of life are few, simple and wholesome, and are largely independent of money.—Texas Advocate.

Hygiene.

EATING BEFORE GOING TO BED.

Many persons who remain thin and weakly, in spite of all precautions in regard to diet, etc., owe the fact largely to habitual abstemiousness at night. It is said, very truly, that physiology teaches us that, in sleeping as in waking, there is a perpetual waste going on in the tissues of the body, and it seems but logical that nourishment should be continuous as well. The digestion of food taken at the dinner time, or in the early evening, is finished, as a usual thing, before or by bedtime, yet the activity of the processes of assimilation, etc., progress for hours afterward, and when one retires with an empty stomach, the result of this activity is sleeplessness, and an undue wasting of the system. "All other creatures," says the writer, "outside of man, are governed by a natural instinct, which leads those having a stomach to eat before lying down for the night."—National Druggist.

DIET FOR GROWING CHILDREN.

We all know Punch's famous reply to the query is life worth living—"It depends upon the liver"—and the noon day doughnut or leathery pie is responsible for more of this world's wickedness than is put down in the histories. Not long ago I passed a public school building just as the boys were rushing into the playground for recess. As is usual with many schools a vender stood outside close to the rails, and was instantly besieged by the youngsters and his basket soon bought out. I noted with interest the contents of that basket: Cinnamon bun, flabby, soft and wettish-looking; pretzels, white and unsalted; doughnuts—shades of New England defend us, such doughnuts!—hard as bullets and of most villainously bilious hue.

OUR $1 OFFER.

Much has been said about reducing the subscription price of the ADVOCATE. The only way in which a reduction can be brought about is by an increase in the number of subscribers. In order to facilitate this result, we make the following offer: Until further notice we will take new subscriptions at the rate of $1 for eight months. When seven thousand five hundred new names have been sent in at this rate with the cash, we will extend the time four months longer, thus reducing the price to $1 per annum. When the extension is made, old subscribers will get the benefit as well as new ones, provided they first pay up all arrearages. Of course, no commissions can be given under this offer. Address

BEALL—The subject of this sketch, Mrs. LIZA ANN BEALL, relict of the late George Wood, was born in Noxubee county, Miss., June 21, 1811. She was married to Dr. Wm. T. Beall in Moss Point, Miss., Dec. 12, 1832, and died at 7:15 P. M., Sunday, March 26, 1899, aged sixty-seven years seven months and five days.

The highest encomium which can be passed upon a human being is not to be found in the mournful dirge which wails their absence from the fireside and the home, nor is it to be found in the jubilant doxology which sounds at the public demonstrations of a congregation, however numerous and devout, but to be known by well-attested, consistent conduct, a Christian. Consulting my own heart's testimony, I can say without reserve that Sister Beall was a Christian.

She was a woman of shrinking modesty, naturally and excessively timid, but remarkably courageous in her well-timed expressions of loyalty to her Master; not, indeed, by sounding her professions of sanctity to the world, but by unobtrusively moving about among the poor and needy, the sick and the unfortunate. One of the prominent traits in her well poised Christian character was her denial of self in order to contribute to the comfort of others. All classes and many nationalities have been the beneficiaries of her exuberant kindness and Christian charity. Her home was the preacher's home. The most cordial welcome was always extended, whether she was sick or well. This welcome was not only extended to the Bishop and his cabinet, but to the humblest preacher in the connection. She honored the great, but she paid respect unto the meritorious, regardless of station or garb.

She was a woman of implicit confidence in God and his promises. Her faith was of that genuine kind which satisfied the questionings of an active, inquiring mind. It was to her the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." She understood and treasured up the wonderful disclosures and revealments of this vitalizing agency in making real the things not seen. She believed in God and in his Son, Jesus Christ. Sickness, or pain, nor death, had power to destroy the matchless comfort of her abiding faith. The future life to her, as a consequence, was a glorious reality. On one occasion she proffered to take a message from her husband to some of his loved ones gone before.

Were I to consult my own heart prompting I would write more at length; but I forbear, and commend all those who loved her to the tender mercies of that heavenly Father whom she delighted to serve. C. A. POWELL.

CARMICHAEL—Three out of four have gone home: MALCOM, ELLA, and LOYD YARBROUGH CARMICHAEL. Loyd, the son of Bro. Malcom and Sister Ella Carmichael, was born Feb. 24, 1891; died March 17, 1899. Bro. Malcom, the husband and father, was born Oct. 1, 1862; died March 23, 1899. Sister Ella (nee Rose), wife and mother, was born July 6, 1863; died April 3, 1899.

Thus God has recently taken home three of the family in a little over three weeks, only leaving Lenard, a little boy about five years old; a little girl, Samantha Octava, having preceded them July 25, 1893, having been born Jan. 8, 1888.

On Feb. 25, 1899, I made a pleasant pastoral visit, and we united in prayer after having talked over his past life, which was not satisfactory, religiously, but at the present time being fully determined to do God's will, let come what may.

Bro. Carmichael had not been on good terms with his neighbors; but a month, or more, previous to this time, while at work on his farm, the quickening spirit of conviction was received, and he there left his work and went from house to house begging them for peace, determined to have peace at any hazards, and succeeded in establishing peace, although he had to make some financial sacrifices. He then told them he did not expect to live long. He stated to me that he had done many things that he ought not to have done, and that it took all his manhood and grace that he had to tell what he had undertaken, but that, by the help of God, he was determined to do right. His wife said, while her husband was to blame in many things, others were also to blame, and that her husband had held out faithful so long, and she believed he would continue to do so. His neighbors were profoundly astonished, and said he was in earnest; he was a changed man. To the credit of his neighbors it was said they were as kind to him as they could be to his sickness.

This is the deepest case of conviction that I ever come before my observation. They both died trusting in Jesus. We pray this sad bereavement may bring us all nearer God, and that the little boy left may be useful in the vineyard of the Lord. J. C. ELLIS, P. C.

MATHEWS—Mrs. LOVENIA MATHEWS (nee Barlow) was born Dec. 9, 1836, and died in Jasson, Miss., Feb. 14, 1899. She was first married to Dr. Hugh McLaurin. Two children survive this union: Dr. McLaurin, of Brandywine, and Mrs. Hollingsworth, of Wesson. She was afterward married to Mr. John R. Mathews, who died about one year before his wife. Mr. John R. Mathews is the only living child of this union. She joined the Methodist Church when a child; lived a consistent member until removed by death. Her home, until a short time before her death, was near Pleasant Valley Church. Many a weary itinerant will remember her kindly. Her home was the preacher's home. Kind and thoughtful to everyone, she was by all held in high esteem. I visited her often during her sickness. I found her perfectly resigned, ready to depart and be with the Lord.

Sister Mathews has gone from us, but we love to dwell on her memory. Like the sweet aroma from the flower that fills the air with its fragrance, so from her life influences have gone out that are felt in nobler lives. Her body is dead, but her influence lives. She built wisely and well. Her foundation was Christ the Lord. Not only among her friends, but in her home she exerted an influence for her Lord. All of her children are Christians, following mama as she followed Christ. It seemed that she was just ready to be more useful to the church when she was summoned home.

Weep not, dear ones; God knows best; nothing happens by chance. God will guide you in this sad hour; look to him. We will meet again. May God comfort the family, the Most High graciously lead them until they meet their loved ones! J. M. MONSE.

MARR—Sister MARY JANE MARR, wife of W. T. Marr, and daughter of Ferrel and Lorain Gorman, was born in October, 1835, in Marshall county, Miss.

Sister Marr professed religion in early life at Grub Hill Church. She first joined the Presbyterian Church; later she joined the Southern Methodist Church. She was ever a devoted, consistent, happy Christian. It was not a surprise if in the services she would praise the Lord aloud. Yes, she could shout the old-fashion way. It was an inspiration to see her radiant face and hear her shouts of glory.

She suffered much before death, but was resigned to her Master's will. In her last sickness she often rejoiced in the Savior's love and the prospect of the home of eternal joy, and died praising the Lord in full triumph of the Christian's faith, Feb. 12, 1899, at the home of her son, Bro. Antony Marr, near Grub Hill. They miss her much, but hope to meet her again where parting will be no more, where the husband and many loved ones were ready to welcome her home. J. H. SMITH.

BANKSTON—Mrs. A. D. BANKSTON (nee Oneal) was born in Hinds county, Miss., April 27, 1870 and died at her home near Brownsville, Miss., on March 15, 1899.

Sister Bankston's death came sudden and unexpected to her loved ones. She had been usually well, but was taken suddenly and violently ill, and her husband went hastily for a doctor, and in a very few minutes she died. The cause of her death is not known. This death reminds us of our Savior's warning, "Be ye also ready, for ye know not what hour he shall come."

Sister Bankston had made preperation for this in early life, joining the Methodist Church in 1884. She had lived a beautiful Christian life ever since. She lived that quiet and gentle life that caused everyone to love her. She was the mother of seven loving children, all of which she has preceded to the glory world. We pray God's blessings and tenderest care upon these little ones, and his comfort and guidance upon the greatly afflicted and sorrowing husband. J. G. CAMMACK.

Flora, Miss.

NOLAND—Mrs. ARHENA R. NOLAND, daughter of Bro. and Sister Adams, was born in Avoyelles parish, La., Nov. 1 1874; was married to Mr. W. M. Noland in November, 1889. She joined the M. E. Church, South, at Marine Church under the ministry of Bro. W. T. Woodward, and has been an acceptable member thereof ever since. After a short illness, though suffering intensely, she died March 17, 1899, leaving a bereft husband and five children, and father and mother, with several brothers and sisters. May the comforts of divine grace be with the bereaved!

ROBERT RANDLE, Pastor.

DEAFNESS CAN NOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A Great Combine

Trusts and Combines in many lines of production, and controlling the output of many factories, have recently been formed, some Capitalized at Millions and other similar organizations are projected. It is not our purpose to discuss here the influence of these trusts, whether beneficial to public interests or otherwise; but we wish to announce to our readers that which is not prejudicial to any interests, but which, on the contrary, is directly in favor of every reader of this paper.

HERE IS THE PLAN

A splendid illustrated MONTHLY, devoted to the cause of Methodism throughout this broad land and called THE AMERICAN ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE, is published in St. Louis, with offices in New York and Chicago. It is the peer of the best of the popular magazines in illustration, literature, and typographical excellence, and is designed to be to the Methodist membership of about six millions in America, what the popular secular magazine is to the general reading public. The Magazine is not a competitor of any of the other Church periodicals; it is general in its scope. It is the ONLY ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE PUBLISHED MONTHLY IN THE UNITED STATES, and occupies a field distinctly its own. Its aims and purposes are of the highest. Its ideals are: THE PUREST IN LITERATURE, THE HIGHEST IN ART, THE NOBLEST IN METHODISM. It is a worthy exponent of the great Church it so ably represents.

Some Opinions of Representative Methodists, North and South.

"The American Illustrated Methodist Magazine should be welcomed by the whole Methodist family. Many a number will contain articles worth ten times the subscription price." —Bishop Charles C. McCabe.

"Fair, sweet-toned, appetizing." —Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.

"Our common Methodism is to be congratulated on this valuable accession to our periodical treasures. I hope every Christian will have this beautiful Magazine." —Bishop John F. Hurst.

"It takes rank with the best for its varied and rich table of contents. A valuable auxiliary to our Epworth League work." —Bishop E. R. Hendrix.

"A periodical absolutely solitary in the field it occupies. It is a joy to the eye, the mind and the heart. It ought to find a place at once in every family circle in the land." —Bishop W. A. Candler.

"A gem among the monthlies of our land." —T. Berry Smith, Central College, Fayette, Mo.

W. T. Harris, of Washington, D. C., United States Commissioner of Education, has this to say of a recent number: "It is one of the most remarkable magazine numbers that I have seen for a long time, and I beg leave to enclose two dollars for two regular subscriptions. I congratulate you."

The Press, Denominational and Secular, Speak in Highest Terms.

"A future of gratifying success and large usefulness is assured it." —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"The contributions compare well with those of any other Magazine of the day and its illustrations are excelled by none." —Pittsburg (Pa.) Daily News.

"Interesting and attractive, not only to Methodists but also to the general reading public, for the matter which fills the pages is of a character broader than the title would indicate." —Columbus (O.) Dispatch.

"The prospectus of the Magazine indicates that there is an abundant feast of good things in store for its readers; but the Magazine itself is better than any prospectus." —The Pittsburg (Pa.) Times.

"The scholarship of the Magazine is insured by the editorship of Revs. James W. Lee and Naphtali Luccock, who are known and loved in St. Louis and throughout the West." —St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"It compares favorably with the best of them, and is a brilliant success from the beginning." —Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.

"We most heartily commend it to our people as a high-grade periodical, worthy to take its place in every Methodist home." —New Orleans Christian Advocate.

"It will aim to advocate and magnify the things which world-wide Methodism holds in common, and especially to be a factor in the cultivation of fraternal relations between the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." —Central Christian Advocate.

"The letter press is superb, the illustrations first-class and the reading matter thoroughly instructive, entertaining and edifying." —Pennsylvania Methodist.

"A triumph of literary talent and mechanical art." —St. Louis Christian Advocate.

"We welcome it, relish it and recommend it." —Western Christian Advocate.

"It takes high rank with the best periodical literature of the day." —Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

"We cannot but give to the Magazine our best wishes, and hope for it great success." —Texas Christian Advocate.

To these might be added hundreds of testimonials from Church officials, pastors and laymen, North and South, all praising the Magazine for its intrinsic worth and its lofty purpose.

"THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF METHODISM," which is being published serially in the Magazine, is a feature of marked interest, and is alone worth the subscription price; but the History is only one of the many interesting and artistic features of each number.

Every Methodist family should be a subscriber. Its price is so small all can afford it, but in combination with this paper an opportunity is offered to secure both publications for little more than the cost of one alone.

The subscription price of THE AMERICAN ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE is $1.00 a year; the subscription price of this paper is $2.00 a year. We will supply BOTH one year for $2.65 in advance.

This is our GREAT COMBINE—a TRUST organized solely in the interests of our readers, and which they are invited to join. Do not delay.

THIS OFFER WILL EXPIRE JUNE 1.

Take notice that in order to get the benefit of this offer you must first pay all arrearages. In order to ascertain the amount of your arrearage, look at the label on your paper and count the months from the date there given to May, '99. Then send 16⅔ cents for each month. Add to this $2.65.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The Confederate Veterans, who met in Charleston last week, adjourned on Friday. Lenisville has been selected as the place for the next reunion.

A collision of passenger trains occurred on the Philadelphia and Reading railroad at Exeter, Pa., on May 12, and a great number of people were killed and injured.

The Civil Service Commission recommend the extension of their system to the colonies as the only means of securing a satisfactory class of office holders.

In his dispatch to the War Department General Otis announced that Aguinaldo had sent a messenger to him expressing a wish to send the commission "to arrange terms of peace."

The cruiser "New Orleans" arrived before this city on May 16. A magnificent reception was accorded the vessel upon her arrival. A silver bell and silver service were presented by the citizens of New Orleans to their namesake.

Satisfactory conclusion is expected by administration officials to follow the conference which will be held by the American Philippine Commission with the committee which Aguinaldo proposes to send to Manila.

The recently enacted anti-trust law of Arkansas and the legislation which is now about to be finally enacted by the Texas Legislature are being denounced by the friends of the trusts as radical and shortsighted.

The Chinese Government, in acknowledging the receipt of a communication regarding the Anglo Russian agreement as to spheres of interest in China, expressly declares that the acknowledgement in nowise implies acquiescence.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie, who has accumulated some $100,000,000 or so out of his vast manufacturing of iron and steel, has given out, so it is reported, that he intends to distribute the greatest part of his wealth in public benefactions.

A deputation have waited upon the Secretary of State to the Home Department, in London, protesting against Sunday newspapers. The Home Secretary replied that, though he was in entire sympathy with the deputation, he was afraid the government could do nothing in the premises. He, however, would fully consider the matter.

The Russian demand for a new railroad concession connecting Pekin with Russia's present railway system in Manchuria is exciting the gravest anxiety. The chief Chinese officials are having constant consultations with the dowager empress. The Germans and Japanese are particularly uneasy on the subject of this unexpected move upon the part of the Russians.

Admiral Dewey will leave for the United States as soon as he can arrange his business and give full instructions for the management of the fleet to his successor. The United States cruiser "Olympia," on which Admiral Dewey will make his way home, will sail leisurely, stopping at Mediterranean ports for some time to give the admiral, the officers of the ship and the crew an opportunity for rest. It is expected the voyage will occupy about four months.

An anti-trust bill passed by the Michigan Senate differs in a few particulars from like laws in other States. In prosecutions under the proposed law the character of the trust may be established by proof of its general reputation, without the presentation of any written agreement or contract. Another section provides that any person damaged through the operations of a trust may sue the agent of the offending combination and recover double the amount of damage actually sustained.

It is announced by the Navy Department that Admiral Dewey is soon to return to the United States, and is expected to leave Manila when he has been relieved by Rear Admiral Watson and has completed his duties in connection with the Philippines Commission. As is customary when a flag officer returns from a foreign station, Admiral Dewey will return home in his flagship, the "Olympia," which played so conspicuous a part in the battle of Manila Bay. Now that it is certain that the Admiral is soon to return, the greatest rivalry has sprung up between New York and the Pacific coast cities to secure the honor of first receiving the hero of Manila.

General Gomez has sent a message to Governor-General Brooke that he will do himself the pleasure of calling at headquarters for a further conference regarding the payment of the Cuban troops. The appointment for the interview is the result of a direct inquiry as to what General Gomez intendeot to do in view of the resignation of and non-acceptance of all the Cuban officers nominated by him to represent the several corps in the distribution of the $3,000,000. General Brooke is determined to disregard for the present the reports that reach him from various soarces as to the alleged intention of Gomez to withdraw his co-operation, and thus to throw into confusion the carefully matured plans for distributing the fund.

Rev. W. C. BLACK, D. D., EDITOR AND PUBLISHER. } PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH. { ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

"FARMING OUT" OUR COLLEGES.

Rome, toppling to her fall, showed her weakness by "farming out" her civil functions, and merited the fine scorn of the old satirists. Although Methodism was born and cradled in a university, and has, from the beginning, been a patron of higher education, yet the M. E. Church, South, has manifested lamentable weakness by "farming out" her colleges for girls. The "farming out" of colleges by the church is as vicious as the "farming out" of tax-gathering by the State. When the church "farms out," or leases, one of her colleges to some man, and thus turns over to him her educational work, she runs fearful risk, first, of having sham work done, and, second, of tempting her lessee to dishonesty. These risks are real, and by no means exaggerated in this statement. If he to whom the church "farms out" the college for girls is thoroughly honest and consecrated to the cause of Christ, as was our own H. F. Johnson and a few others—and are some still living—he will do good, honest work, and will build up the college even at his own expense, and send forth graduates who are really educated; but, as every honest educator in our church will attest, many to whom we have thus "farmed out" our colleges for girls pursue a policy that brings money into their own pockets and ruin to the college by sending out girls with diplomas, but without education. No fraud is meaner, none is more direful than this. To induce a girl to believe that she is being educated when she is not, and to lure her unwitting parents to pay for what they do not get, is to perpetrate a wrong that can not be righted, for the poor victim finds out her mistake too late to change her plans, and so her whole life is marred. The sham work is done, the awful fraud is perpetrated, and the life-plans of our best girls are marred by presidents of so-called Methodist colleges, because any other policy means loss to themselves, while this one insures gain, and the church pays no heed to the fraud, but rather encourages him in his policy by applauding his seeming success, gauging his success by the extent of his patronage. Thus the church, by the very system in vogue, becomes the temptress of the men who defraud her, and a party to the fraud of a sham education perpetrated upon her own helpless young daughters. These are strong statements, but they are true. I stand prepared to prove them with a long list of actual cases and an array of competent witnesses. I challenge denial.

This policy of "farming out" colleges for girls has proven so simple, easy and inexpensive to the church, and so remunerative to men with more love of money than conscience, that such so-called colleges have been multiplied until the lessees have been driven to false advertising, meretricious displays, unseemly rate wars with each other, and various "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain" to make "ends meet." That some of these lessees keep themselves free from such unholy devices is a most refreshing truth; but he who does so in these days of numerous colleges—church, State, and private—does it at great loss financially, and at sacrifice of heart and brain-weariness. I know a college president of stalwart integrity who is killing himself trying to keep up an unequal contest where unflinching honesty meets fearful odds.

The church can not be any longer a party to such a vicious policy. She sees this; she is getting to be wide awake to the fact; she says that the policy must be changed; the edict has gone forth that we must have fewer and better colleges for our girls; the Annual Conferences have been notified that they must centralize their educational work for women. It is sensible to do it; sheer honesty demands that it be done at once.

Now, what is the Mississippi Conference getting ready to do in this matter? To-day she owns one-half of one college for boys and four colleges for girls. She does not believe it wise to attempt to own even one whole college for boys, and yet she owns and "farms out" four for girls. The inconsistency is too manifest to be argued. She is going to centralize this work; she must do it; it is the inevitable. When will she do it? This is the question for every member of the Conference to consider well. We are now inaugurating a movement to collect for educational work about $40,000. Twenty per cent. of this—i. e., $8,000—very properly goes to Vanderbilt University. What will we do with the remaining $32,000, or possibly $30,000? Millsaps College, as a matter of course, ought to get, and will get, a large share of it. Will her proportion be one-half? If so, there is left $15,000, possibly $16,000, to go to the educational work for women. What will we do with it? Divide it out between the four struggling girls' colleges that we own, and continue the vicious "farming-out" policy? The church, in ordering the Twentieth Century Thank-offering, did not contemplate any such senseless waste of the fund, and, as a matter of course, we shall not think of such squandering of the Lord's money.

What, then, shall be done? There is but one thing to do: fix upon one of the four as our college for girls, and turn the other three into academies or preparatory schools. The sooner this is done the better for all concerned and for the cause itself. There is nothing to be gained by delay, and much to be lost. I think it probable that steps looking in this direction ought to have been taken at the last session of our Conference, for we could have prosecuted the Twentieth Century Movement this year with more success if all uncertainty on this question had been removed. In the absence of positive action on the part of the Conference we are compelled to prognosticate, and act with a view to what will be done. The question is being asked by those who need to know, "Which one of the four will be the college?" I answer them, "As a matter of course, it will be Whitworth." I base my conclusion upon the following facts:

1. Whitworth College has, according to the reports made to the last Conference, $20,000 more property than all of the others combined; $60,000 more than Edward McGehee, $45,000 more than East Mississippi, ignoring East Mississippi's debt, and $55,000 more than Port Gibson. Her property is worth nearer $80,000 than the $70,000 reported.

2. She is the only one of the four centrally located. East Mississippi is in one corner of the Conference and Edward McGehee is in another, while Port Gibson lies near the border on one side.

3. Her health record can not be equalled by any of the others. Brookhaven has never had a yellow fever epidemic. She is almost as immune as Atlanta.

4. She has a much larger clientele than all of the others combined. For more than thirty years she has reached annually, and without interruption, a large and widely-scattered patronage, and she has sent out 475 graduates, among whom are some of the best-educated women of the South. The loyalty to their worthy alma mater of such a host as this means a vast deal to the life, and especially the forward movement, of a college.

These considerations indicate the supreme unwisdom of any other policy than the one herein prognosticated. A suggestion has been privately made that all of the colleges for girls be sold or turned into preparatory schools, and that Millsaps be made co-educational. The suggestion, which has no sort of authoritative or official sanction, will not be adopted, because, 1. We in the South are not ready for co-education, and were we to adopt such a policy, we would but drive our Methodist girls to other than Methodist colleges; and, 2. Co-education is nowhere wise or safe in any school other than primary, or in the university. This is generally conceded by all who have experimented in co-education.

All of this means that we Methodists of the Mississippi Conference must rally around Whitworth College, improve its plant and endow it and quit farming it out. The Mississippi Conference owns four and one-half colleges, and runs one-half of one. We must quit this policy; we must run, as well as own, a first-class college for girls. Let us quit playing at education. Let us have and run a college for girls, or else let us sell them all out, quit the whole business, and turn over the education of our girls to the State, or to some other denomination. The time to act in this matter has come.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

A KICK, AND WHEREFORE?

On May 2, 1899, Vol. I., No. 1, of a new daily paper made its appearance in one of the interior towns of Louisiana, which contained an extract from Christian Work, giving the following as a matter of news:

RAFFLING FOR SOULS.

Rev. Francis Borton, a missionary in Mexico, writes: Yesterday, in a Roman Catholic Church in Mexico, I read the following notice:

Raffle for Souls—At the last raffle for souls the following numbers obtained the prize:

Ticket 841. The soul of Lawyer James Vasquey is released from purgatory, and ushered into heavenly joys.

Ticket 762. The soul of the aged widow, Francesca de Parson, is forever released from the flames of purgatory.

Another raffle for souls will be held at this same blessed Church of the Redeemer on Jan. 1, at which four bleeding and tortured souls will be released from purgatory to heaven, according to the four highest tickets in this most holy lottery. Tickets, $1. To be had of the father in charge. Will you, for the poor sum of $1, leave your loved ones to burn in purgatory for ages?

Of course, there were certain religionists who could not, or would not, relish such a bit of news as this, and forthwith set up a howl against the paper in question, which brought the publisher to his knees. In the next number but one, an editorial paragraph promised that the paper should be run in the future clear of sectarianism, and solely in the interest of "the city and country."

Whether this apology will "restore the status quo" is more than an observer can now foresee. The extreme sensitiveness of some people when told of their faults is amazing. That the statement is true seems not to be called in question, but tremendous stress is laid on the idea of propriety.

To bleed the people in the superstitious vein has been the policy of the Roman Catholic Church in all the ages. The lancet which goes in for the blood may be desire-to-do-wrong (as in the sale of indulgences) or a desire-to-do-good (as in the "Lottery for Souls"), for truly "for the poor sum of $1" no one would "leave your loved ones to burn in purgatory for ages."

We all know the present condition of the average Mexican—his social and religious status—and we know that in Mexico, as in other places where Catholicism is dominant, 300 or 400 years of subjection to the yoke of papal tyranny has not elevated the people, nor materially changed their idolatrous forms of worship. In Mexico, e. g., the old heathen goddess has been changed into "The Virgin of Guadalupe"—as pure a fiction and as glaring an idol as ever pagan bowed down before. Why not carve an image out of stone, or mould one in gold or iron, or chisel one out of wood, or mould one out of wax or clay, and "bow down to it, and worship it," as well as a merely ideal one? Either take the place of God in the mind of the worshiper, and is alike idolatrous.

In all seriousness, may we not properly inquire whether or not certain ritualistic forms have had something to do with the worship of "images and relics"? In the Bible we are taught to pray to God. In the ritual we have the example of praying to the Son or to the Holy Spirit. In poetry—hymns even—we have examples of supplicating angels. Of the departed saints St. Paul suggests they are "all ministering angels." Mary, Peter, and all the glorified ones are such angels. Why not pray to them, if prayer is to be offered to any angels? The law says, "Worship God," not the Son, nor the Spirit, but "the Father which seeth in secret." If the Spirit leads me to Christ, and through Christ, I approach the Father. Shall I turn my worship to the instruments of my approach, and away from Him to whom I have been thus led?

In my view of this matter of worship it is not a question of honoring the Son, or the Spirit, but a question of dishonoring God. "In the unity of the Godhead" there is but one God. In the individuality of the Godhead "there are three that bear record in heaven." All worship directed to the Father goes also to the "Son and Holy Ghost," for God is the essential head of the "Triune One." This can not be said of the Son, nor of the Spirit. To offer worship to these (worship in the meaning of the Decalogue) seems, therefore, out of place, and supplanting of the Father.

But I have followed my thoughts away from my subject.

What has Romanism done for the masses of her people? Look at conditions in Europe and "the islands of the sea," where she has undisputed sway, and tell me what Catholicism has done to enlighten her people. Nowhere on earth has Romanism so small influence as in England and the United States. (By this I mean those countries where Catholicism is known to exist.) In these countries civilization has marched on and steadily up in spite of the practical suppression of the Holy Scriptures.

Look at Cuba, Porto Rico and Luzon, where Romanism has been richly supported by public taxation; where hundreds of millions have been gathered by authority of Spanish law and turned into the church coffers. All this money-gathering, and gloating over fabulous salaries, and donning of costly apparel at the expense of the half-fed and more poorly-clothed victims, running through a period of 300 or 400 years, has not materially bettered the condition of the oppressed burthen-bearers.

Without national support, with no tableaux in which to estimate values for purposes of taxation, with only the Holy Scriptures as our commission and our defense, in the strength of our God let us lift up these fallen ones.

"OXFORD FEMALE COLLEGE."

In this ADVOCATE, of May 18, Pres. J. W. Malone makes a statement of the course he has taken concerning our Conference school at Grenada, and the organization of one at Oxford. He tells us, "I will open a college for girls and young ladies at Oxford, Miss., next September for the North Mississippi Conference and for the church, and I propose to make it equal to any in our connection."

I can not see how this announcement can be made, for the North Mississippi Conference has no "college" in Oxford, nor any school property of any kind. Nor has this Conference taken any step of any kind whatever to possess, or to establish, or to have any part in a school in Oxford. The Conference will not meet till late in November, and it has no organ through which authorized action can be taken to "open" a Conference school there.

At the session of our Conference, held in Aberdeen in December last, the Board of Education reported in part as follows, referring to our school at Grenada: "This school is constantly increasing in the number of pupils in attendance and in the number of boarders in the college. Your Board believes the time has come when the Board of Trustees should increase the boarding capacity of this college.

"We recommend the re-appointment of Rev. J. W. Malone, A. M., as president.

"We also recommend the appointment of the president, Rev. J. W. Malone, as agent of this college, to do such work and on such terms as may be agreed upon by the Board of Trustees."

This report was adopted, and the Conference also ordered "that the amount heretofore appropriated to Millsaps College be equally divided between that institution and Grenada Female College." Not the least hint is here given of the existence or bestowment of any power beyond the proper management and development of the Grenada school. The property of that school was made the possession of the North Mississippi Conference by legitimate purchase, in which our people paid several thousand dollars, and in consideration of which the Conference obtained and holds a complete title. What our people paid in this transaction was only a fraction of the real value of the property, say four or five thousand dollars, for what had cost forty thousand, and is still put at that figure in our reported statistics. The advantageous location of that property, the excellence and fitness of the large and handsome structure, still intact; the high character of the people of Grenada and vicinity, the ready accessibility of the place by railroad, were inducements to the Conference to seize the great opportunity and make that her permanent school for our daughters. For these years we have gone steadily forward. The school has grown in character, in constituency, in influence and in good service to the Conference. Why should it not be allowed to go on in its hopeful career, rising, though by slow degrees, to the full measure of a real college for young women, endowed, and with an elected faculty, taking its place in that family of schools which is to rise and bless our great church under the wise administration of that new law which gives organized form and power to our work of education?

NOTES OF ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

THE ADVANCING CHURCH.

Never in our history was the church more thoroughly committed to the work of its Leader than now. Throughout every quarter vigorous life is manifested in the great plans which are being deeply laid for a mighty forward swing.

REVIVALS.

The reported loss of 3,800 in membership during the last quadrennial has aroused preachers and people. Plans and prayers are being laid and offered that this reproach may be soon taken away. One of our presiding elders called his preachers together a few weeks ago. They talked and prayed until the holy fire descended and sent them all back to their fields of labor prepared to fight and win for Christ.

Dr. Leftwich has been among us. He held a meeting of two weeks' duration for Bro. W. P. Hart, of St. Francis Street, Mobile, in which the standard of piety was lifted, the church elevated, and a goodly number added to the membership.

Dr. Leftwich is a great teacher. He does not circumnavigate his texts, but goes right in, on, up and out on the mountain-top, with his people with him. The church has a correct definition of evangelist in him.

Our District Conferences are being made central places of spiritual power. Our own Mobile District Conference was historic. Never have I attended a Conference of such spiritual momentum. We closed on the Mount of Transfiguration. We hear pæans of victory from many quarters.

EDUCATION.

The Twentieth Century Fund movement has taken hold of our people. Our Board of Education has planned for two educational rallies—at Birmingham and Montgomery, in which the best talent of the church will appear. The Board has also appointed a representative man to meet each district with light and inspiration. We feel that our portion of the million and a half will be forthcoming. This will place our institutions of learning on ascending ground.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Our State League Conference has just been held in the Gulf City. More than two hundred of the church's young from all portions of the State gathered in this annual convocation. Reports showed growth and inspiration. The signs portend a wide expansion by our next gathering. Dr. DuBose came and saw and conquered. He sees everything and everywhere with one ocular sweep. Surely he is a man of providence.

Bishop Candler closed this Conference with a great speech on Cuba, out of which came light, conviction, and inspiration, and money.

As you know, Mr. Editor, we have suffered great loss from our ministerial ranks during the past year by death. Dr. M. S Andrews, the ecclesiastical statesman; Dr. J. O. Keener, the son of thunder, with five others, passed from cross to crown. We feel our loss. Dr. Keener stood as a chieftain at the head of our leading institution of learning. His speech before the last General Conference was historic. Though the law for which he plead was lost, the principle involved therein lives.

More changes have occurred in the presiding eldership since then than ever before in the same length of time. We had five changes in our Conference. It is found to work well. All of these new men are men of affairs, and will magnify the office. Our own presiding elder, Bro. W. M. Cox, of Mobile district, is one to the manner born. He rises to all expectations. He is firm without austerity, gentle without weakness, and strong without strain.

But ours is a great church. She has the facility of making more great men than any other institution on earth.

IT'S SUMMER-TIME SOMEWHERE.

BY FRANK L. STANTON.

When fall the wintry flakes of frost, it's Summer time somewhere—
Wildes in the valleys—bird songs in the air;
The chilly winds they only blow the lily's lips apart;
It's Summer in the world, my dear, when it's Summer in the heart.

When gray the skies are glooming, it's Summer 'n the dells—
In the merry songs of reapers, in the tinkling of the bells;
The sweet south skies are brightening as with Spring-time's magic art,
But the sweetest season, dearest, is the Summer in the heart.

Still, still the birds are singing, and still the groves are green,
And still the roses redden and the lovely lilies lean;
Love fades not with the season; when Summer days depart
It's Summer still, my dearest, in the Eden of the heart.

TWENTIETH CENTURY FUND.

We are standing upon the borderline of a new century and amid the breaking light of a new era. The pulse of the time beats with feverish celerity, and mighty principles are struggling to the birth, while old theories, customs and notions are perishing by the way. New life, purposes, ideas and broader views are stirring the heart of the nations as never before. The vast and mighty interests of humanity, and the kingdom of God, are rolling in upon us and beating upon the surf of the receding century with tremendous emphasis. The potential forces of wealth, mind and power never, in any previous period, needed wiser direction, a more consolentions and generous devotion to the chief considerations of life. The present is the key to the future—yea, more, it will give color and direction to events yet unborn, and seal like a demon of fate the character and destiny of many movements traveling down the years to come. The new century now opening upon us lays at our feet obligations and responsibilities we can not neglect or spurn without proving recreant to the highest imperatives of the age, and unworthy of the marvelous blessing of God and the heritage of our fathers. The watchword of the civilized world at this time is, "Forward." It takes no skilled student of the times to see that the most prominent characteristic of the age is toward expansion. The marked tendency now is toward enlargement and universality; not expansion in the material and physical merely, but also in the intellectual and nobler ends of life. The flow of the blood is to the extremities. The narrow and the little are no longer centers of hope and desire. Old lines of thought and theory and action which have marked the limits of progress, and held men in narrow inclosures, and separated sect from sect, and party from party, are now being leveled to the ground. Limitations and restrictions are vanishing like the fogs of the early morning, and human action is larger, freer, and nobler. Thought has forced the dungeon of racial prison, and broken the fetters of provincial narrowness, and is set free for a divine destiny. Science and philosophy have escaped from the studio of a few gifted bards, and became the guide and possession of all, without respect to persons. Fields of inquiry and knowledge have been multiplied and enlarged till the thoughts of men widen with the circle of the suns, and yet they are at sea, in a large sense, as to the real meaning, purpose and end of all living. The minds of men are hot and restless, and they are anxiously inquiring, "Who will show us the fixed, the enduring good for which we pant?"

I have laid down the preceding premises to show the nature, extent and all-importance of the opportunity God has thrust upon us. The exigency is upon us; what will we do with it? In the way of the rapid progress and final triumph of this educational movement are only two obstacles worthy of note. The first is ingratitude to God. This fund was put upon the ground of a thank-offering for the marvelous and signal blessing of the Great Head of the church upon her membership, life and enterprises for the past hundred years. Gratitude will yield itself a willing sacrifice to the object of its benefactions. Ingratitude has no soul, no heart, no sensibilities, no eyes, no ears. It is blind and deaf and dumb in a world of beauty, harmony, and good cheer. Ingratitude is as stolid as a corpse, as unyielding as adamant, and as dark as Erebus. Ingratitude receives all you give, gulps down all it can get, and when it is full, like the horse-leech, it cries, "Yet more."

The second obstacle is a false or incorrect idea of Christian education. We are aware of what we have to meet here. Education, as popularly used, is a vague and indefinite term, with no fixed value. There are almost as many notions as to what education is as there are minds. This is an opportune time when millions of minds are directed to the subject to clear away all false ideas and notions, and give a deeper and better understanding of it.

And, after all, the value of the campaign going on in these great Methodist branches stretching around the world will not be measured by the dollars and cents actually taken for this purpose, but by the rooting up of narrow and false views, and giving of broader, deeper and truer ones. The collection of $1 500 000 from 1,500,000 Southern Methodists would be a breakfast spell if our people could see the contingencies and appreciated Christian education. Some consider education of questionable importance. Some think it a relative good, since it gives pecuniary advantages over the less fortunate members of society. Others measure it entirely by its commercial and business value in accumulating dollars and cents. And still there are others who have been dupes of the better enlightened and more gifted that consider it an unmixed evil. All these are false notions. Education, in its real meaning, comprehends all good. It is the seed of all development and progress in the race.

The Influence of Recent International Events on the Church of the Future.

(Read before Pastoral and Theological Institute of Durant district, and requested for publication.)

(Concluded.)

The churches in England and America have not failed to recognize in this a most opportune time for full and fraternal co-operation. Hence there has just been published in England by the "Evangelical Free Churches," "A New Evangelical Catechism," unanimously accepted by the Baptist, Congregationalist, Presbyterian, and Methodist Churches as a platform of religion upon which they can stand in common, and discharge a high and holy service to the world.

Dr. Hoss, in commenting on the catechism, said, "It goes to the very center of the deep things of religion, and marks a real advance in the Christian world."

It emphasizes the points of agreement rather than of difference. Such harmony could not have been effected fifty years ago. In America the fraternal spirit is dominant among the evangelical Protestant Churches. These were very largely represented in July, 1898, at New York, where plans, mutual and co-operative, were agreed upon for the most effectual occupation of the new fields thrown open to these churches by the recent political and military complications and events. "We are co-workers together with God; ye are God's husbandry; ye are God's building." (I. Cor. iii, 9.)

Now, in view of all these facts and conditions, what is the answer to the question?

I reply briefly: One of two results to the Christian church is certain. Either the church, as it is organized to-day, will enlarge her bounds, "lengthen her cords and strengthen her stakes," and rise to the sublime height of the glorious task offered her by the divine coincidences, or she will shrink from her mission, and in suicidal shame relegate herself into inglorious, "innocuous desuetude," while our God "will let out his vineyard to husbandmen who will bring forth the fruits thereof."

My judgment favors the former alternative. While not a prophet, nor a son of a prophet, I fancy I see weak hands feeling strengthened, and trembling knees straightening, and a mighty "shaking of the dry bones in the valley." I can foresee "strange fire" avoided, and novel and speculative methods shunned, while the world witnesses again, for the third time in the Christian era, the majestic march of the martyr spirit, the reformer's zeal, and the apostle's enthusiasm and fortitude—marching to victory. This time "not to doubtful disputations" and to unwholesome strife, but shoulder to shoulder, heart to heart, and shield to shield, entering the open doors and pressing onward, led and actuated by divine love, "conquering and to conquer" till the "kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ!"

Not long since Dean Farrar was asked if there would ever be a universal religion, and whether all nations and all peoples would eventually worship the same God. He answered: "I have no doubt of it. Christianity will be the only religion of the far future, and we are fast coming toward a universal religion. Have you ever thought how rapidly the Christian religion is growing? Three centuries after Christ, of all the people in the world, only one in every one hundred and fifty was a Christian. Now one-third of the world's population bows down to the Christian's God. Our missionaries to-day are in every part of the globe. In Hindoostan there is a vast number of Christian churches. The Fiji Islands have become Christian, and a great work is now going on in New Zealand and elsewhere. The opening up of the interior of Africa means that Christianity will follow the explorers, and I can see the time coming when a great corps of Christian workers will be pushing the standard of the cross into the most remote corners of the globe."

"Let us, therefore, not judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that no man put a stumbling-block or an occasion to fall in his brother's way." (Rom. xiv, 13.)

Happy is he who is privileged to live in these awful days, and to take part in these great and dreadful movements. Shall our arm of the service be weak or strong? Shall we dally with time, or shall we rally with faith and love around the blood-stained banner of truth and salvation? There stands the arbitrage of the whole momentous matter! Self-preservation dictates, "Follow into these open doors," and this, by divine grace, we will do, and "To the only wise God, our Savior, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and forever. Amen." (Jude 25)

PERSONAL REMINISCENCES OF REV. ROBT. B DOWNER.

Some seven miles' travel brought me to Dr. Wroteus' home. During the night a fearful storm of rain flooded the country. At breakfast Dr. Wroten said, "Robert, I am sorry, but a very sick patient forbids my leaving home at this time, and you can't go, either, as Tangipahoa and Amite rivers are booming full, and you can't possibly get to the bridges without swimming." My reply was, "Doctor, I must go." Off I started, and as I inquired of those passing me on the road, it was but to have Dr. W.'s opinion confirmed. On I went into the back-water over unknown dangers, aiming for the bridge, and expecting every moment to fall into swimming water, but, to my agreeable surprise, my horse kept his footing, and while I was somewhat wet, passed Tangipahoa safely. Amite river was more formidable, and not far away. People advised me not to attempt its crossing, but I felt impelled to go forward, and again I was in "perils of the deep," and again passed through safely.

While passing through a swamp bottom free from back-water, I began to rejoice over Satan, and boast that he had failed to turn me back. The thought had scarce passed my mind before I was swept from my horse by a low-hanging tree limb that I had failed to observe. "Well, well." I am in a fix now, prone on the ground. I was somewhat bruised, but, on feeling my bones, consoled none were broken, and I found on trial I could stand up, but to mount my horse was the question. Looking about, I found a tree stump not far away, and, in the saddle once more, I became exceeding humble the rest of my journey.

At Liberty, county seat of Amite county, I found several preachers going my way, and nothing unusual transpired between there and Woodville.

I was now at my journey's end, and felt sure of an honorable release, and in a few days go home relieved of all responsibility. I felt sure that no body of sane men would deem me physically competent for the work of an itinerant preacher; but, strange to say, after calm deliberation, those preachers disappointed me. The new-sainted Wm. Barton looked at the case like I did, and stoutly resisted my admittance, saying it would be but a few years until I was upon the superannuated list. (All this I learned later on.) Well, God's ways are not our ways, and it took forty years' service to put me there.

Natchez, as junior to J. J. Wheat, D. D., initiated me into the itinerant service, and no horse was needed. It would needlessly tire my readers to give a detailed account of my labors in the various circuits and stations committed to my charge. Ready at any Conference session to be told, "Stand aside, you are not needed," I have borrowed no trouble, and did what I could, fully conscious of the many disadvantages for me to overcome. I have accepted any work given me without a murmur. The Conference Minutes will show that I have served works that required consecration, patience, self-sacrifice, and great physical endurance. When, in 1865, the Bishop called, "Covington circuit (La.), Robt. B. Downer," I knew what it called for on my part; but no one ever heard a murmur from my lips on receiving an appointment. I have, in good faith, accepted my appointments as from the hand of the Lord, remembering that I could go nowhere where Christ's promise, "Lo, I am with you always," would not be verified, and where Christ is, is always heaven.

Bro. J. M. Pugh, in parting at Conference, charged me to tell about my mule. "Mack" made the trip possible from near Canton, Miss., to Covington, St. Tammany parish, La. For several years he was a prominent factor in my serving the Lord.

In 1865 my presiding elder was Kenneth A. Jones, and for some unknown cause he allowed me to be presiding elder, as well as preacher in charge, the entire year. I suppose he concluded that the raids of Federals might make him a political prisoner if he ventured into my work that year. The people were impoverished to almost starvation-point. Several times I carried feed from my mother's home, near McComb City, to feed old Mack.

FOREST DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

The Missionary Institute of the Forest District, Mississippi Conference, met in the Methodist Church at Forest, Saturday, April 29, at 8:30 A. M., and closed with the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, Monday afternoon, at 5:30.

Bro. T. L. Mellen, our presiding elder, conducted the opening exercises, and presided over all the sessions, directing affairs with a steady hand, and bringing out interesting facts in connection with the various phases of the questions discussed.

Fourteen itinerant—including Bro. B. F. Lewis, of Braudon—and seven local preachers were present, and manifested considerable interest, each one taking part in the discussions as he felt inclined.

Bro. P. H. Howse, pastor of the Neshoba circuit, was detained at home on account of the serious illness of his wife. Only three other itinerants were absent, but twenty local preachers failed to appear. It is to be regretted that so many were absent, for the meeting was a blessing to those who attended.

The papers read gave evidence of careful preparation, and showed that our preachers are keeping posted as to the movements of the church in her efforts to save the heathen, and are in close sympathy with her plans. Highly instructive and interesting papers regarding the work of the Woman's Home Mission Society were furnished by Miss Addie Purnell, president, and Mrs. Clara Harmon Cope, corresponding secretary of the Mississippi Conference W. H. M. Society. Miss Sallie Smylie was present, and read a paper on the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, giving many items of interest connected with its work. A fact stated, which should bring a blush of shame to many of our home churches, was the existence of an auxiliary to the Woman's Board in Trinity Church, Shanghai, China, with eighty-five members.

Special prominence was given to the preaching. The sermon by the presiding elder, Sunday, at eleven, on "The Destructive and Constructive Effects of Missions," based on Jeremiah's commission, though more than an hour and a half in length, was heard with unabated interest.

The pulpit was filled at other hours by Bros. J. G. Galloway, D. C. Langford, W. M. Stevens, W. M. Sullivan, B. F. Lewis, and this writer.

Bro. W. P. Donnell, our missionary to the Choctaws, gave a good account of himself and his work.

He is deeply in love with his people, and rejoices over the gracious opportunities he has for doing good. We expect rich results to follow his labors.

The Holy Spirit was present and manifested himself to his people. Those who attended the service on Monday, at eleven o'clock, will not soon forget the sermon by Bro. B. F. Lewis on Acts i, 8, nor the gracious outpouring of the Holy Spirit, the glad hallelujahs and many hearty handshakes.

A wave of revival power will, doubtless, sweep over our district as a result of our Institute.

Forest entertained royally, and has the gratitude of those who shared her hospitality.

W. L. LINFIELD, Sec'y.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

At the Missionary Institute of the Brookhaven district Rev. R. Selby delivered an address on "Our Obligations to Give the Gospel to the Heathen." The following synopsis of the address was prepared by the secretary, Rev. J. D. Ellis:

1. It is plain to the mind of every thoughtful student of the situation that the church is under orders from Christ for the dissemination of the gospel. This is the key-note of the church's divine character and progress, and without it we lose the highest mark of its superiority. We study all the characteristics that belong to it, and we note that its fundamental basis is that it gives impetus to the spread of the gospel. This is not merely an assumed relation, but a duty imposed by virtue of our existence as a church. As such we can not shirk it if we would, and at the same time maintain our heritage as the people of God. The divinest mission of the church is in the prosecution of the work definitely marked out by the Master. There may have been some misconceptions with the disciples, but none with us. It has been said, and truthfully, too, that the church which does not accept its obligation from a missionary point of view is not Christian, and this applies to the individual. The command is absolute and irrevocable, and the progress of Christianity is in proportion as we comply with God's plan as indicated.

2. As the command is not limited as to the obligation of the church, so there is no limitation with respect to nations. The sway of the gospel in its mighty sweep is universal, and we can not justify ourselves in proscribing our operations. The appreciation of each local church upon this vital question is limited to their intelligence of the same. There are few in sympathy with the plans of the church in penetrating the darkest places of earth, and because they do not know. The heart on fire with the love of God does not stop to question plans. The sacrifice required in carrying the gospel is of small moment compared with its necessity. Its achievements have been miraculous with limited resources, but when we view our possibilities its neglect is alarming.

3. The obligation of the church rests upon the fact that this is God's plan for saving the world, and our own spiritual life hinges upon working in harmony with it. You may ignore it, but this is God's method. We have reached a crisis in this sublime work, and it rests with the church to turn the tide in favor of the salvation of the heathen. We hear notes of triumph from every mission field. This should be an inspiration to greater effort. Let us go forward.

The danger of the church to-day is from "society." The savage beasts of the arena may not be ready to leap from their dens upon the loyal followers of Jesus Christ, who would meet death rather than deny their Master, but the scorn, the hiss, the social "cut," are the means sometimes now employed by the same tempting and malicious spirit of the world to compel Christians to surrender their principles and convictions at the demand of the prince of the power of the air. Let us stand by our principles. Let us follow conscience, and not fashion; Christ, and not the world.—J. H. Vincent, LL D.

DO PROTESTANT MISSIONS ENCOURAGE GOOD CITIZENSHIP?

BY MISS GENEVIEVE COCHRAN, MERIDIAN.

(Concluded.)

The Hawaiian Islands, with their ideal situation, beauty and productiveness, are now ours. That the stars and stripes wave over fruitful fields, pleasant dwellings, schools and churches, is due, under Providence, exclusively to the Christian zeal, fortitude and devotion of those early missionaries who staked all that life held for them in that remarkable venture which, resulting in the reconstruction of an entire people, will always remain one of the loftiest tributes to New England zeal and Christian endeavor.

Dr. Paton, the Saint John of the New Hebrides, labored with his colleagues in a hostile territory, speaking different dialects, and rightly has the interest of the world been given to his apostolic story.

The Fijis are the paradise of the Pacific, for the reason that English Wesleyans were willing to dwell by cannibal ovens, that they might hold up, in the midst of demoniacal orgies, the banner of the cross.

India has presented, perhaps, the most formidable barriers ever encountered in any mission field. The subtlety and acumen of Brahmanic priesthood, its power over ignorant masses, the rigid restraints of caste—in itself a wall of ice, mountain high against the approach of the gospel—a system of frigid immobility which, like a vast polar zone of frost, locks in eternal winter the whole society it engirdles; the long sway of that purest and best of oriental religions, notwithstanding its practical corruptions—these are some of the obstacles Christian missions have to meet. And yet, withal, the gospel is slowly raising these walls, undermining these strongholds, and melting these ice-coastles like the resistless Summer sun.

The spiritual phenomenon which follows Protestant mission work in the kingdoms of earth has a most beautiful and suggestive figure in that physical phenomenon which Pierson, quoting from Tyndall, has wrought into an exquisite illustration.

"In the process of crystallization the particles, like disciplined squadrons under a governing eye, arrange themselves into battalions, gather around distinct centres, and, forming themselves into solid masses, assume, after a time, the visible shape of a crystal. Such, in a far more transcendant way, is the conversion of a heathen community into a well-ordered and organized Christian State. A secret, unseen, mysterious power, which none can describe or can define, is at work. Around the name of Christ the disorderly and confused elements of moral chaos arrange themselves in symmetry and beauty, and society become crystalline, reflects the glory of God."

We are pleased to see such enthusiasm and earnest work as manifested by some of our district secretaries, for upon them depends very largely the success of the work.

In a lengthy, kind letter from Mrs. Scott Phillips, district secretary Vicksburg district, she expressed great regret that the time of holding the district meeting at Port Gibson had to be changed to the first Saturday and Sabbath in May. She wrote: "Our missionary society will be entertained with a reception at the home of one of our best loved members this afternoon.

"We are steadily increasing in numbers and interest, and will have a fine report to make at our meeting in June. Our wide-awake little president, Mrs. A. F. Watkins, believes that 'Well begun is but half done.' With her valued help, and that of Miss Olive Watkins, she does not wonder that 'matters missionary are looming up in Crawford Street Church.'"

BRO. UPTON'S QUESTION.

MR. EDITOR: The silence of the "beloved" who promised an article on Bro. Upton's question prompts the writer to express his opinion.

1. I do not know that assessing per cent. is strictly legal, but it is, in my judgment, better all around, for it equalizes the assessment for the presiding elder. (I perceive that the root of the matter is the salary of the presiding elder.)

2. It is the pro rata that is in need of "doctoring." Whether the presiding elder is assessed a per cent. or a direct salary, the law of pro rata division is the same; so, where is the difference? Personally, I had rather settle on the per cent. basis. I then have the satisfaction of knowing that all the brethren in the district are settling in the same way. When the presiding elder is allowed a per cent., there is uniformity; when allowed a salary, differences sometimes of at least 5 and 6 per cent. is discovered. If the pay of the presiding elder is short in the end, the preacher in charge has, perhaps, $15 or $20 to pay to balance up the salaries. By all means, let the district stewards adopt the per cent. plan.

3. I hope the "beloveds" will take no offense if I pay my respects to the pro rata division of receipts. After all, here is the trouble. I am serving my fourteenth year in the Conference, and at the end of each of these years, save the first two, I have had to settle and pay over a balance due the presiding elder. One presiding elder exacted his at the end of each quarter. One year I paid the "beloved" over and above his four collections $70; the next year, $65. In these years I received (i. e., the amount "left for the preacher in charge," as Bro. Kent says) $500, and $410 for the two years. The salary of the "beloved" was in the neighborhood of $2,000 for each year. Please understand me. I believe our presiding elders should be well paid. They are not overpaid. But when the presiding elder has had four "fair and square" chances, and fails to get his money, he should have conscience and mercy sufficient to let the poor preacher in charge off. If I run behind my presiding elder, he is welcome to his excess. The prospect just now in this place is that the presiding elder will run ahead of the preacher in charge. Praise the Lord! I generally pay the presiding elder $1 a quarter anyway, and he is welcome to all the rest I can collect for him.

4. One other thing, and I shall be through. I have never noticed a presiding elder giving anything to the Lord's cause. Certainly not on my works. I think our "beloveds" should strive to stimulate giving by personal example. How nice it would be to be able to say to the people: "Brethren, the presiding elder handed me $10 (or $5) for the Conference collections. Now, he gives all over the district; how many will give ten times this amount, five times, or even one time this sum?" Why, don't you see the Conference collections would run over!

Mr. Editor, the above is my opinion. I honestly think there is room for reform along some lines.

Yours truly, H. S. JOHNS.
Montgomery, La.

PRAYER.

Without claiming to be a theologian, or pretending to settle any of those questions about which doctors disagree, this writer would respectfully offer a few suggestions in reply to Bro. Johns' article, "A New Departure."

When one of his disciples said to the Master, "Lord, teach us how to pray," he received the reply, "When ye pray, say, Our Father which art in heaven," and from that day the beautiful prayer has been ascending to heaven from every form of conscious and unconscious human need; from the child at the mother's knee, from the baptismal font, from the marriage service, from the family altar, from the death bed of saint and sinner, and from worshiping congregations the world over. But that the Master meant to prescribe this as the only model, or to limit prayer to the first Person of the Trinity, seems scarcely borne out by the Scriptures.

We read of the rules of the synagogue that, "when he saw him, he fell at his feet, and besought him greatly;" of the centurion, that he "came beseeching him;" and when, in that climax of belief, he cried, "Speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed, for I am a man in authority" (that is, know what authority implied, and recognized the Savior's power), we find not only the fullness of faith, but the perfection of prayer. Of the Syrophonician woman we are told that she came "worshiping him;" of Stephen, that he looked up to heaven, and cried, "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit."

All these are examples to us, whatever the thief on the cross may have been, and all received the things for which they prayed, and that without rebuke or instruction.

As to the difference between request and prayer, this depends upon the conditions under which the request is preferred, and the spirit in which it is offered. Paul seemed to find no incompatibility in the terms when he wrote to the Philippians, "In everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God." That Christ is God, we know; that the Holy Spirit is the third Person of the Trinity, we know; therefore, in worshiping either, we are justified.

To ask of the Father in the name of the Son is our exalted privilege. "If ye shall ask anything of the Father in my name, I will do it," and, "Hitherto have ye asked nothing in my name: ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full."

Note here that the Master does not say, "Ask for my sake," but, "in my name." He leaves us what merchants call a "per pro," or lawyers style a "power of attorney," conditioned only on, "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you."

AN EXAMPLE FOR SCHOOL TEACHERS.

Some weeks ago we were invited to attend the exercises celebrating the anniversary of the Rosdale Temperance Band, at Rosdale School, in the Seventh Ward of East Baton Rouge parish, La.

Mrs. Rosalie Hillman, for many years a resident of this community, has for a long time been teacher of the school. Her extraordinary ability as teacher has won the confidence of the people and the hearts of all the children.

The liquor business has long been a fearful curse to this parish. With an open saloon for every street in Baton Rouge, and a grog-shop for nearly every public thoroughfare in the country, the work of death has gone on unrestrained.

A year ago Mrs. Hillman, touched with the influence of strong drink on the young life, organized the Rosdale Temperance Band, solely for the children of her school. About twenty of the children signed the pledge for a year. The fact that some, although very few, broke the pledge is convincing proof of the great necessity of the work. It would, however, be hard to find a firmer or more zealous little temperance band.

At this anniversary the object was to have the children renew their pledge, and also to get other signers who wished to join. The school-house was very nicely fixed with stage, curtains, decorations, etc., and the programme was excellent. The recitations, songs, dialogues and tableaux would have done credit to any city school of like size. Through the whole you could discern the temperance sentiment.

At the close Miss Mable Hillman, Mrs. Hillman's only daughter—a young lady of excellent ability, endowed with many of the attributes of her gifted mother—delivered a thoughtful and earnest address striking directly at the need of the temperance work, and it was delivered in such a manner that every word was carried straight to the hearts present.

After this opportunity was given those who wished to renew their pledge to come to the front and put their names on the roll. Nearly all the old signers renewed, and about twenty-five new ones were obtained.

We are thankful for the noble company of women who are ably and willing to do much for Christ's cause.

After all the agitation for legislation against the liquor business, unless temperance principles are wrought in our coming generation, our foundation is weak and our laws will not avail.

I would that many school teachers of our State would follow this example, and help protect our children from this deadly foe. M. F. JOHNSON.

"CALL NO MAN YOUR FATHER UPON THE EARTH."

Matt xxiii, 9.

All who have been associated with Catholics know that they call their priests "fathers." This practice is contrary to the instruction of our blessed Savior, who has said, "Call no man your father upon the earth." We are not to understand by this instruction that we are not to call our parent father, or the man who brought us to Christ; neither does it prohibit us from calling persons of great length of years or experience in the divine life fathers, or those who were the first to follow our blessed Savior; but it does forbid us calling Catholic priests fathers (of course, not only us, but Catholics, too.)

It is mortifying enough to hear a Catholic call a priest father, but much more so when Protestants call them fathers; and when our religious papers call them fathers, our mortification boils into a holy indignation. The very thought of religious newspapers, that are intended to guard the people against wrong practices and errors of every species, dignifying a Catholic priest by calling him father! The glaring inconsistency of all such papers appears unmistakably when we remember that they denounce Catholicism and its priests as the very embodiment of evil, and then turn right around and dignify the priests by calling them fathers. As little as some of them may have thought or intended to call a Catholic priest father, it is an endorsement of his life and office. May God help us who are to save the world to be consistent in right things!

Every preacher, not only in our church, but in every Protestant Church, should show Protestants the folly and sinfulness of such a practice. Do not call Catholic priests "fathers," for Christ has forbidden it, and he has forbidden it because it is wrong.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. N. Tucker: "Tuesday night, after the third Sunday in April, we closed a meeting of five days at this place. Rev. W. B. Lewis, of Yazoo City, did the preaching, which fully met and even surpassed the expectation of the people. The Baptists, Presbyterians, and sinners, as well as the Methodists, sat with attentive ears and yearning hearts to catch his words as they fell from his lips. While his sermons were varied in their subject-matter, he made prominent, by special sermon and frequent reference thereto, the crowning work of redemption—the entire sanctification of the soul by the renewal of the Holy Ghost. Quite a number were brought under conviction, one professed to be regenerated, and two applied for membership, and the church somewhat aroused. Later: We have organized a prayer meeting, which, so far, has been attended almost solely by our young people, who, after all, are the hope of our church. Let all the readers of the ADVOCATE pray for a great revival of religion on Raleigh circuit this year. I have lately made an appointment in a very much-neglected community. The people turn out in scores—more than a hundred last Sunday—and seem ripe for the harvest now. I expect to be able to organize a Sunday-school there next month, and a church later on, God helping me."

A daring balloonist sometimes tumbles nearly two hundred feet through the air hanging on to a parachute until it opens. "O! well," he says, "It usually opens in time." Sometimes it doesn't open and he is doomed. This seems foolhardy but no more so than the sick man who says, "O, I guess I'll get well all right!"

Disease is no guessing matter. If it isn't stopped it keeps on getting worse. Many a man begins with dyspepsia or "liver complaint," and gradually loses strength and vitality until before he knows it his lungs are attacked and he finds himself in consumption. The parachute doesn't open.

The only real safety for a man whose strength is failing from any cause whatever is to renew the sources of vitality at their fountain-head. The best agency for this purpose is the wonderful "Golden Medical Discovery" originated by Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y. This "Discovery" goes directly to the aid of the enfeebled digestive forces and enables them to make healthy nourishing blood, thereby building up solid muscular strength and active nerve force and energy.

The absolutely marvelous things it does for sick people is shown by the experience of Mr. Frank A. Stariz, of Fayetteville, Fayette Co., Texas, who writes: "It affords me pleasure to testify to the remarkable curative power of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I was severely afflicted with trouble in my lungs—spitting up blood, and was so weak I was unable to continue my work. I tried several remedies which gave me no relief, and I had commenced to think there was no hope for me. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery was recommended to me, so I tried it and began to improve at once, and was soon able to resume work. I consider it a wonderful medicine."

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangment for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

PUSH THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

The Sunday-school has been fitly styled the nursery of the church, and the more its benefits are observed, the more appropriate seems the characterization. A live Sunday-school nearly always means a live, growing church. The two have a vital relation to each other. There was a time in the history of the church when the religious instruction of the young was sadly neglected, but happily that day is past. While not abating their efforts for the conversion of adults, Christian workers of all denominations are giving larger prominence and greater attention to the religious training of childhood and youth. The Christian world is at last waking up to the supreme folly of allowing the human twig to become bent and dwarfed by vice and sin, and then of attempting to remedy an evil that should have been prevented.

The Sunday-school has proved itself one of our most efficient agencies for giving the right inclination and nurture to the young sprout of humanity. In many communities, however, its power for good is but half utilized; its measureless benefits are but feebly appreciated. The strengthening of this force means the strengthening of the church and the fortifying of Christianity. There is no question of the fact that the church that looks after the young, especially through the medium of the Sunday-school, is destined to be the most influential in the future.

While there are few in this land who do not believe in Sunday-schools, their value is often greatly discounted by those who ought to know better. Because the Sunday-school has to do with the little folks, and not infrequently with small beginnings, many professed Christians ignorantly suppose that this work amounts to little, and hence neither encourage it with their presence or their prayers. The influence exercised by even a small Sunday-school is incalculable. It is related that through the faithful and persevering efforts of three persons who, about seven years ago, started a Sunday-school with only thirteen members in a God-forsaken community in New England, a remarkable transformation in morals has been effected. At the time the school was begun intemperance, Sabbath desecration, and a horde of accompanying evils flourished. Sunday dances were held, at which shameful scenes were enacted, fighting and drunkenness being common on such occasions. Now all this is changed. The evils once rampant there have well-nigh vanished. The hall formerly used for Sabbath dances has become a store-house for farming utensils. Nearly all the children in the community now attend Sunday-school, several of the young people have become Christians, and the moral tone of the place is pure and wholesome. So much for the benefits of a single live Sunday-school.

How to make our Sunday-schools more effective and interesting is a problem that demands serious and constant consideration at the hands of pastors, teachers, and parents. Many a school is in a languishing condition simply because little or nothing is done to make its work attractive. There is no variety, no enthusiasm, no progress in the use of new methods and appliances. We are confident that a large proportion of our Sunday-schools are unsupplied with maps, charts, blackboards, etc., for illustrating and enforcing the lessons, which ought to have all the light possible thrown upon them, so that the children can not help but understand and be impressed. A small investment in this direction would yield a splendid return in the way of quickened interest and clearer knowledge.

It is a great pity, too, that comparatively few of our Sunday-schools are properly equipped with libraries; yet these are now so cheap as to be within the reach of all, and would help immensely to interest and stimulate the pupils. Pastors and superintendents should see to it that the splendid helps and appliances now available for Sunday-school work be employed as far as practicable. The slip-shod methods that characterize the running of many Sunday-schools are a shame to the church and a grievous hindrance to her progress. A flourishing Sunday-school was never the result of indolent, hap-hazard effort.

In some schools the principal attraction is the music, and a powerful one it is when wisely employed. The children should, by all means, be encouraged to sing. To let the grown people do the most of the singing is a fatal mistake.

Sunday-school teachers can not realize too strongly the importance of leading their pupils to a personal application of the truths taught them. There is far too much of perfunctory teaching, which neither impresses the children with their need of a Savior, nor inculcates reverence for spiritual things. It is not enough to tell the young the facts and truths of the Bible, to narrate the story of Jesus and his love. There should also be, on the part of every teacher, a heartfelt interest in the spiritual welfare of every pupil in his or her care—such that prayer and effort go forth to this end. The Sunday-school teacher must be pious as well as intelligent, else the young will get nothing but husks.

How wonderfully attendance upon the Sunday-school would improve if parents but half performed their duty in sending or bringing their children thereto! But getting them to appreciate its advantages—ay, there's the rub. Is not such indifference startling in the extreme when we consider that nowhere else, save in the house of God under the preaching of the Word, can be found such a combination of holy influences, such wholesome companionships, such innocent pleasures, such gracious privileges as the Sunday-school affords? Who can predict evil for the boy or girl who loves the Sabbath-school, and whose life is moulded by its teachings? What an encouraging fact it is that at least one sixth of our population are studying the Bible in connection with the Sunday-school! Let the work be pushed everywhere, for in proportion as the children are instructed in the truths of the Bible will the kingdom of God be advanced, and the church be built up. Our church can not afford anywhere to neglect the young. Let the absentees be hunted up, newcomers be cordially welcomed, and every laudable means be employed to make the Sunday-school an enthusiastic and helpful organization. Zeal and knowledge can hardly be utilized in a worthier cause than this.

ADDRESS.

To the Preachers and Members of the M. E. Church, South:

Your chief pastors call you to the observance of a Week of Prayer, beginning Sunday, June 25, and including Sunday, July 2; Friday to be kept as a fast-day.

The nineteenth century is far spent, the twentieth is at hand. The time summons us to serious thought. A hundred years pass before us for review. We are confronted with the problem what preparation we should make to meet the responsibilities and opportunities of the new century. We should close well the passing, that we may begin well the coming age.

CONFESSION AND GODLY SORROW.

The General Minutes of the past year show a decrease of preachers and members, 8,633, and of Sunday-school scholars, 14,939; a decrease also in ministerial support and in benevolent contributions, except for domestic missions and church extension. Falling off in membership is a new thing to us. It was preceded by a lessened rate of increase for a few years. Any check to our steady and rapid advance demands candid and earnest consideration. May it be the occasion, not of censoriousness and prophecies of evil, but of self-searching and repentance to salvation! Let us humble ourselves before God, that his mighty hand may exalt us. Shortcomings and losses should teach us wisdom, and stir us up to vigilance, zeal, and diligence.

THANKSGIVING AND REJOICING.

Partial and temporary checks should not interrupt grateful praise for the ceaseless and overflowing mercies of God and joyful acknowledgment of the wonderful progress of the church since 1800. He crowneth the century with his goodness. The love of God makes the conscience more acute and the heart more tender, deepens abhorrence of sin, intensifies desire to please him in all things, and incites to glad, energetic, tireless obedience and service. To us belongs, through grace, not doubt, but full assurance of faith; not the spirit of bondage, but the spirit of adoption; not despondency, but the inspiration of hope in the God of hope; not the torment of fear, but the triumph of love which casts out fear. Behold what great things our God has wrought for and by us, and bless and magnify his name. In the name of our God we will set up our banners. The joy of the Lord is our strength. He gives us beauty for ashes, a garment of praise for heaviness. Hallelujahs fill our lips. Joy, hope and courage are the dominant and abiding marks of his people. They march on from strength to strength, from height to height, from victory to victory. Let them that love the Lord be as the sun when he goeth forth in his might.

THE BRIGHTEST OF CENTURIES.

The nineteenth is the best century the world has ever seen, and the present generation enjoy the best part of the century. We do not shut our eyes to existing evil, nor exaggerate existing good, in declaring the present state of the earth a vast advance on all her past history in wealth, knowledge, power, culture, morals, humanity, and true religion. The darkness of the darkest spot is not so dense as it was a hundred years ago. If the day-spring from on high has not yet visited it, there are, at least, signs that the light approaches. The most favored spot is happier to-day than ever before. Christendom is in advance of the rest of the world, but is fast carrying the spirit and means of progress into heathendom. Christian nations have entered all lands with their commerce, railways, schools, literature and missions. Nearly every church is aggressive, missionary, confident of conquering the world for Christ.

OUR SHARE IN THE BLESSING.

This new world is professedly Christian from ocean to ocean and from pole to pole. The whole hemisphere acknowledges the only true God and his Son, Jesus Christ. No country has greater cause for gratitude than these United States. Its population has multiplied during the century from five to sixty millions. Its western border has moved from the Mississippi to the Pacific. Its wealth is said to surpass that of any other country. It ranks among the foremost powers of the world. May we be as eminent in virtue, piety and good works as we are in privileges!

No form of Christianity has prospered more than Methodism. In this Western soil it has specially flourished. The Minutes of 1800 report its total strength in America, from Georgia to Upper Canada, "white and colored members, 64,394." The Methodists of every name in the United States now exceed six millions.

Our own church has been greatly blessed since its separate organization. In 1846 she had 455,217 members; in 1860, 749,068. In 1866 there were 425,404 white members; now there are 1,458,259. From both counts preachers are excluded.

These numbers are significant. They suggest, but do not express, the magnitude of our blessings. We can not call one by one the roll, and listen as each tells the story of his own experience of grace. We can not follow each minister in his evangelical labors, enter all the happy homes of our people, mingle in the worship of every church, look upon the many myriads of scholars in the Sunday-schools. Heaven, too, has drawn largely from our communion during the century. They are praising God in nobler strains above.

WELCOME TO THE TWENTIETH CENTURY.

With eager desire and hope we anticipate the advent of the next century. Brighter be its hundred sections of world-history than the records of all preceding times. The new century will have its own needs, burdens, dangers. Ours is the responsibility, as far as we may, to lessen its inheritance of woe, and to supply it with resources for the accomplishment of a grand work to the glory of God and the welfare of our race. Generations to follow should have cause to exclaim, Thank God for the church of the nineteenth century! Let us prepare the way of the Lord among the nations.

Brethren, we ought to equip our own beloved church for larger and better work. We should hand down to our sons and daughters a heritage not only vaster in extent, but also richer in quality, than we received from our fathers. As the result of evangelical growth and maturing for so many years, the Christianity we transmit should be purer, wiser, more lustrous, stronger in faith, more fervent in zeal, richer in the graces of the Holy Spirit, better furnished for every good work, than the Christianity of 1801. Knowing the time, it is high time to wake out of sleep, to put on strength and beauty, to be a mightier and holier factor in the civilization and regeneration of our country and of our world. A million and a half of lights, holding forth the word of life, should cause a brilliant and far-reaching illumination. A million of Christian citizens, leaving out all minors, should be a felt power for good in all our land. What may not be achieved by the right use of so large a capital as the sanctified brain and heart and muscle and property of a million and a half of Southern Methodists? We say that we are the Lord's; that all we are and have belongs to him; that the end of life is to glorify God in our bodies and souls. Let us mean and live what we profess.

Preachers and pastors, stir up the gift of God that is in you; stir up the church of which you are leaders; be examples, teachers, evangelists, flaming torches; by your faith and zeal rebuke the sluggish and encourage the timid. Laymen, fill the houses of worship, teach or learn in the Sunday-schools, help in the Epworth Leagues, set up the family altar, consecrate your children in baptism, bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, and send them to our institutions of learning; commend religion by your spirit, speech, and behavior; give your personal influence and help to every good cause. Sisters, be zealous and unflagging in your Home and Foreign Mission Societies, and in all good works. Backsliders, return, and God will heal all your iniquity; lukewarm professors, pray that fire from heaven may kindle your love; half-hearted believers, make a full consecration, and seek a full blessing. Save sinners singly, for there is joy in heaven over one sinner that repents; save them in multitudes, as at Pentecost. Let these closing years witness peace, unity, holiness, and active, hopeful enthusiasm in all our connection, an auspicious augury at the dawn of the new century.

A THANK-OFFERING.

No church, no disciple, can be complete without the grace of giving. Gifts must speak our gratitude. Thank-offerings should bear proportion to benefits received. God has great claims on the church he has so richly blessed and increased. He loves a cheerful giver; therefore, give without grudging; not of necessity, but of choice; not sadly, but with a glad heart; not with hesitation, but of a ready mind. Give from a sense of duty until you learn the blessedness of giving, and to give spontaneously as the spring sends forth its waters. He that sows bountifully shall reap bountifully. God is bountiful, and you are the children of God. Convert your corruptible treasures into incorruptible. Glorify God with your means, and he will count himself your debtor. Everything given for the love of God is a loan which he will repay without fail and with largest interest.

The pressing need of the day, says the General Conference, is to free from debt, improve and endow our institutions of learning. The church can not succeed without schools at home and in foreign fields. Education should be the handmaid of religion; it may be the foe. Culture should not be infidel, nor heretical, nor worldly, but sound, spiritual, divine. Let us see that Methodism shall offer to both sexes schools unsurpassed in mental training and wholesome influence. We want an educated ministry and an educated laity. Our schools have been of inestimable service, though clogged and restricted by debt and poverty; poor, yet making many rich. The present numbers and aggregate wealth of our church suffice to secure adequate relief and enlargement. Within the eighteen months which remain to this century a million and a half dollars, or more, should be placed in our treasury—the free-will offering of a devout and grateful people. This can, and should, be done without diminishing the annual collections. It is a contribution to the twentieth century, that we may be partners in a greater work for God and humanity than our age has wrought. Let no one stand in the way, or fail to do his part, and get his share of blessing. Speak no word of discouragement, nor keep silent, but let each man cheer his neighbor. As God has prospered you, so give. The millionaire should give his draft for myriads of dollars. He will if he has more faith and delight in God than he has in mammon. If it hurts to part with his money for the love of Christ, the pain is a sign of spiritual sickness, and he should seek at once the Good Physician. Rich men whose estate falls far below a million should give each his thousands. Men of competence should give each his hundred, or, perhaps, hundreds, equaling by their larger number the wealthier class. Fifties, twenties, tens and fives should pour into the lap of the happy church from her many loving children. Poverty, rich in faith, though not in gold, should give dollars or dimes. The smiling child should totter forward with his nickel. Let all give with one accord, as an expression of gratitude and consecration, as children of the same Father, and heirs of the same kingdom. "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye, through his poverty, might be rich."

"Now He that ministereth seed to the sower, both minister bread for your food, and multiply your seed sown, and increase the fruits of your righteousness."

J. C. GRANBERY,
In Behalf of the College of Bishops.

Life is a building. It rises slowly, day by day, through the years. Every new lesson we learn lays a block on the edifice which is rising silently within us. Every experience, every touch of another life on ours, every influence that impresses us, every book we read, every conversation we have, every act of our commonest days, adds something to the invisible building.—J. R. Miller.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Jackson, La., EDITOR.

Those who desire to correspond with the editor of this department in regard to Epworth League work, or any other matter, may continue to address their communications to Jackson, La.

The Epworth Era, dated May 11, was issued as the "International Conference number." Those expecting to visit Indianapolis in July will do well to examine carefully as to the information given anent the coming Conference.

Indianapolis, like Toronto, is denominated a convention city. It has a population of about two hundred thousand, composed largely of Methodists and Presbyterians. The present United States senators from Indiana are members of one of the prominent Methodist Churches in Indianapolis.

It is stated that nearly every great commercial house has a prominent Methodist connected with it. The newly-elected president of the street railway company is a member of the Roberts Park Methodist Church.

Those who have charge of affairs confidently count on a larger attendance than at either of the international gatherings previously held. The railroads are offering special inducements, and accommodations for board, etc., are being arranged by a competent committee.

Those expecting to attend should write at once to L. F. Lewis, the Denison Hotel, Indianapolis. It is important that you write at once; then there will be no difficulty in securing a desirable home. The rates in private homes will not exceed one dollar per day.

A letter recently received from Rev. Henry G. Hawkins, of Madison, Miss., brings cheering news concerning League work in the bounds of his charge. Following we quote several passages:

"Since Conference there have been organized and chartered on the Madison circuit three Epworth Leagues—one at Madison Station, with Miss Helen Stewart as president, and Mrs. Hugh C. Montgomery as secretary; one at Madisonville, with Miss Nettie Ogden as president, and Mrs. John Sandidge as secretary; the third at Pocahontas, with Mr. David Conghlin, president, and Miss Jeanie Dewees, secretary."

"The devotional department of each meets every Sunday afternoon, and some work is being done at all three of the places in the other two departments. At Madison Station 'Dawn on the Hills of T'ang' is being studied by about half the members, and will soon be finished."

"It is our intention to have representation at West Point in June. We are planning to have Dr. H. W. Featherstun, of the Brookhaven district, to visit us soon and deliver his address on 'The Epworth League Idea: How to Work It.'"

CAMP MEETING AT DENHAM SPRINGS.

MR. EDITOR: Ninety-four years ago a Mr. Alexandria Hogue, of Scottish descent, and a native of Georgia, came to Livingston parish, La., and settled at a place now known as Denham Springs. This place derived its name from the son-in-law of Mr. Hogue, Mr. Wm. Denham, who owned the property from 1827 to 1855, when he sold it to two Swedes residing then at New Orleans. These two gentlemen, Messrs. Covos and Negro forte, made considerable improvement, fitting it up for a health resort. For awhile it was a famous watering-place, but was destroyed during the Civil War. Old soldiers of this section have a distinct recollection of the Springs, and how they used to "drill" in the beautiful hotel erected there in the days of long ago.

Denham Springs is a thriving little town twelve or thirteen miles east of Baton Rouge, just on the east bank of the beautiful Amite river. Having a daily mail from Baton Rouge and other points, and enjoying the blessings of superior educational advantages, being the home of several professional men and the center of this section for business, with a high-toned weekly paper published, our people are abreast with the spirit of our times.

The water of these springs, by analysis, contains iron, sulphur, magnesia, potassium, and other mineral substances.

A recent writer to the Denham Springs News says: "An Indian maiden once composed a song, and sung to the health-water dancing at her feet, because the water had healed her lover. In those days numbers of Indians would camp at the springs every Summer, I suppose, for their health, and in the Fall of the year would leave."

Besides these mineral Springs, this is a healthful locality, noted for its beautiful woodland scenery, having all the natural advantages possible to make it a desirable place for a Summer home.

It seems that nature hath provided everything to make this a desirable place for a Methodist camp meeting. We are now moving on with this religious enterprise. Land has been purchased. The grounds have been selected, surveyed, and cleared. The posts and other building material are on the grounds, and the contract for building tabernacle has been let. A Board of Trustees was appointed at our recent Quarterly Conference, to whom titles will be made in the name of the M. E. Church, South. Already the people are looking into the matter of building tents, etc. The time for holding meeting will, perhaps, be the fourth Sunday in July. All ministers will be entertained and provided with transportations from and to the railroad. Let those who expect to attend notify us at once. Brethren, come filled with the Holy Ghost. This will be the place for earnest work. We are expecting a glorious time. There is a future for Methodism at Denham Springs. All the preachers of the Baton Rouge district are expected to be on hand. Doctor, you are most cordially invited to attend.

Yours in Christ,
J. M. ALFORD, Pastor.

CHURCH EXTENSION.

It is due the church that at this time special attention should be directed to the cause of church extension. Applications for donations amounting to more than $80,000 were presented to the Board at its recent meeting, and heartily endorsed by Conference Boards and Bishops as very needy and many of them distressingly needy. The Board could give relief only to the amount of about $23,000, leaving many applicants entirely unprovided for. The Loan Funds in hand were sufficient to provide for only about half the applications. Under these circumstances it is exceedingly important that pastors and presiding elders throughout the church should look carefully after the collections for this object, and while giving all due attention to the other objects that are pressed upon them with unusual emphasis at this time, church extension must not be allowed to suffer. The payment of assessments in full in every charge would provide only in part for the work that ought to be done and that the condition of the church requires.

P. H. WHISNER, Cor. Sec.

PROHIBITION IN LOUISIANA.

To the Members of the Louisiana Conference, Lay and Clerical—

DEAR BRETHREN: At our last session we resolved, unanimously, to do what we could to have the question of prohibition submitted to a vote of the people in the several parishes of the State during the present year; and, as a member of your Committee on Temperance that submitted the resolution to the Conference, I desire to make a few suggestions:

1. Procure the hearty co-operation of all who are in favor of abolishing the saloon, irrespective of their denominational proclivities, age or sex, wherever practicable. This is not a denominational, but a moral and religious question.

2. Begin the work immediately by inviting this co-operation and circulating petitions to the Police Juries in all the parishes, asking that an election be ordered at some future time, to be suggested later, to determine the will of the voters on the subject.

3. Have a well and carefully written ordinance prepared for adoption by the Police Juries, requiring the abolition of the saloons in each of the parishes in which a majority of the voters voting do not vote for its continuance.

4. These elections should be supervised by honest, reliable and competent men; therefore, get the Police Juries to appoint such men, and such only. They should be held, if practicable, on the same day in all the parishes. I will suggest the day later on.

5. See that perfect arrangements be made for a public discussion of the subject the week immediately preceding the election, and by men who are competent to present the prohibition side of the question forcibly.

6. Now, brethren, let us begin at once to redeem our pledge and work with all the earnestness of men who feel that responsibility is upon them. If we do, I am satisfied that success will crown our efforts, and that most of the parishes in our State will be redeemed from the thraldom of the saloon. Let us undertake this gigantic work in the name of our God.

THOS. J. UPTON.

SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR PANORAMA

is one of the war books which is likely to be in continuous demand. It is a panoramic record of the triumph of Yankee Doodle. The eagle flaps his wings on every page, and "Old Glory" waves around and above every scene. Prominent officers connected with the war are here portrayed, as well as many of the "men behind the guns." Military life is pictured to the eye, from recruiting to guard mount and skirmish line. Nor is the ludicrous omitted. The company cook receives the attention due to his importance; the mess is shown; cavalry scenes are given; the hospital arrangements are depicted; the heroines of the Red Cross service are displayed; street scenes in Havana, Santiago and elsewhere are unrolled, the new citizens or subjects (which are they?) of Uncle Sam appear and disappear as the leaves are turned.

In a word, the gazer visits the new localities and sees the tumultuous new life, without the risk or expense of a sea voyage.

The Album is 5¾x8 inches, weighs 12 ounces, printed on finest coated paper.

KIDNEY TROUBLE.

The Most Prevalent, Dangerous and Deceptive Disease.

Thousands Have It and Don't Know It.

Pains and aches come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble. Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working to pump the thick, kidney-poisoned blood through the veins and arteries.

Soreness or uncomfortable feeling in the back indicates kidney trouble of no small importance.

The passing of scanty or profuse quantities of urine is a warning of kidney trouble. If you want to feel well, you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys.

The famous new discovery, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, is the true specific for kidney, bladder and urinary troubles. It has cured thousands of apparently hopeless cases after all other efforts have failed.

Sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. A sample bottle sent free by mail to any address. Also a book telling all about Swamp-Root and its wonderful cures. When writing, address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and mention that you read this generous offer in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

THE BOOK OPENED;

OR, AN ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE.

BY ALFORD NEVIN, D. D.

PRICE, $1.50.

This is indeed a most valuable work, written especially for Sabbath-school and Bible class teachers, scholars, and all who feel the need, as it is believed many do, of a convenient and comprehensive volume to which they can at any time turn for information to aid them in understanding and defending the Word of God. It has been prepared to serve in this direction as a manual, to which recourse can be had with confidence and comfort, for explanations which might be found elsewhere, but only after research involving great expenditure of time and means. The author is a man of learning and talent, and has written an eloquent volume. All who read the book will be delighted with it. Read what is said of it by the religious press of the country.

"The work is one of universal merit and contains a vast amount of valuable information."—American Christian Review.

"It is a universal compendium in which may be found explanations of many things and much information."—The Church Union, New York City.

"As an aid to Bible students this is a desirable volume."—The Christian Standard, Cincinnati, O.

IF I KNEW.

If I know the box where the smiles are kept,
No matter how large the key
Or strong the bolt, I would try so hard—
'Twould open, I know, for me.

Then over the mud and sea I'd scatter
I'd scatter the smiles to play,
That the children's faces might hold them fast
For many and many a day.

If I knew a box that was large enough
To hold all the frowns I meet,
I would try to gather them, everyone,
From nursery, school and street.

Then tolling and holding, I'd pack them in,
And turn the monster key;
I'd hire a giant to drop the box
In the depths of the deep, deep sea.

A CHARMING WOMAN.

In one of our most intimate and confidential talks, a dear girl asked me to tell her what I think the most desirable gift for a woman. She spoke of several friends—one of them as having grace of movement; another, as rarely beautiful, with brilliant eyes and lovely complexion; a third, as accomplished, playing and singing, and speaking two or three languages besides her own; and a fourth as very clever. We may multiply the list, and as we look over our circle of friends we easily see that nearly everyone has something bright and individual which commands her to us; but the sum of the matter is that the gift of all gifts for a girl is expressed in one little word of five letters—charm.

If you insist on my defining charm, I am afraid I will disappoint you, for it is as difficult of analysis as a perfume. The better way, if I could manage it, would be to show you somebody who has it; as I would show you a painting on the wall, or a flower in the garden. Very plain girls and women are sometimes endowed with this grace. I remember one who was not pretty at all—a little dumpy brown thing, who had not the art of dressing very well, and who slipped in and out of a room as softly and shyly as a mouse, bless her heart! But this sweet Elizabeth was popular beyond all the girls of her class; she was constantly in demand, and nothing could be done without her.

In her case charm had several elements. Her voice was low, yet clear. She never made an effect of insisting, as girls with shrill voices do; her tones were soft and distinct. She was gentle, but she was not overlooked in consequence. She always knew where to find things. At home her father and brothers appealed to her for the books and papers which were out of sight, but which it was important to have on the instant. Elizabeth could explain away little vexations. She remembered people's names and faces—a very great talent, and one worth everybody's cultivating. Elizabeth was considerate and full of tact. I never saw her do a rude thing, or heard her say anything unkind.—Harper's Round Table.

THE HABIT OF INTERRUPTING.

A few days since I was present at a small lunch party of ladies, and I noticed with some surprise the scant courtesy they showed to one another during conversation. One of the party would start to say something, and before she had finished another would break in with another topic, only to be interrupted in turn. I must confess that I was a bit surprised, for all these women were supposed to be well bred, and yet they were disregarding one of the simplest rules of polite behavior.

A little later I was calling on some friends, and I noticed the same thing. Each member of the family would interrupt the others, and the interruption was considered quite as a matter of course. Then I understood the situation better, and put the blame just where it belonged, on the lack of home training. If the mother grows careless and allows her children to contract the habit of interrupting one another constantly, she must not be surprised if this habit is carried beyond the home circle, and her children show in society the result of indulgence of thoughtlessness.

The habit is one of the most unpleasant that can be contracted, and the fact that it is such a common one does not make it one bit the better or the more excusable. It is a habit that grows on one unconsciously if one does not keep close watch. It should be the care of the mother in the home to teach her children respect for one another, and insist upon that courtesy of treatment which she expects them to give to strangers. Unless politeness is a habit it will never be a grace. It must be ingrained, and the teaching can not be begun too early.

I wish the girls would keep a little watch upon themselves to see whether they have fallen into the pernicious habit, and if they have, just set to work to break themselves of it at once. It may seem a little thing, but it is one of the indications of fine breeding to treat anyone with the respect due to him as an individual.—Golden Rule.

STUMBLING-BLOCKS MAKE STEPPING-STONES.

Strive vigorously to form, early in life, a habit of using everything that comes to you, whether pleasant or unpleasant, fortunate or unfortunate, to your advantage. Do not allow an unpleasant letter, a disagreeable criticism, an uncharitable remark, loss of property, or other trial of any kind, to cloud your whole day and cast shadows over your life. Resolve vigorously to make every seeming stumbling-block a stepping-stone to higher and nobler endeavor. If you can make no other use of misfortune, you can use it as a point of departure for new and more determined effort, an occasion for turning over a new leaf. Make up your mind resolutely that nothing shall stand in the way of your genuine success. You can not allow your life to be darkened by the clouds cast over your path by others who seem to wish to injure you. Treat trouble and misfortune as the oyster does the grain of sand which irritates it. Cover them with pearls, and make them things of beauty. Misfortunes and difficulties make stronger those who have the courage to surmount them and use them as stepping-stones instead of stumbling-blocks. If you will determine resolutely and vigorously that every apparent misfortune that comes to you shall be turned into a blessing, you will soon lose all fear of evil, and will become strong to battle with seeming opposition. For, after all, what we call the misfortunes of life and the things that make us unhappy are not such, in reality.—Success.

A woman in a certain large reformatory was given the life of Elizabeth Fry to read. She afterward remarked, "A book that I read in my youth poisoned my mind and brought me here, but this one has saved me." No better statement of the power of literature could be made. While we deplore the output of the literature whose color is yellow, and whose power for evil is unmeasured, it is encouraging to remember that the American Bible Society has put out during the past year a million and a half copies of that book whose leaves are for the healing of the nations.—Peninsula Methodist.

BROKEN LIVES.

God even seems to break them sometimes that they may become truly useful. At least, he can use broken lives in his service just as well as the whole; indeed, it appears as if men can never do much for God till they are "broken vessels." He chooses the weak things of this world that no flesh may glory.

We ought, therefore, never to be afraid of God's providences when they seem to break up our lives and crush our hopes, and even to turn us away from our chosen paths of usefulness and service. When he shuts one door it is because he has another standing open for our feet. When he breaks our lives to pieces it is because they will do more for his glory and the world's good broken and shattered than whole.—The Presbyterian.

LOSING TEMPER.

Losing the temper takes all the sweet, pure feeling out of life. You may get up in the morning with a clean heart, full of song, and start out as happy as a bird, and the moment you are crossed and you give way to your temper, the clean feeling vanishes and a load as heavy as lead is rolled upon your heart, and you go through the rest of the day feeling like a culprit. And anyone who has experienced this feeling knows that it can not be shaken off, but must be prayed off.—Selected.

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT,

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living

The finest compliment we have ever heard paid to a woman was by her husband, and he said, in speaking of her, "We always think of her as a morning-glory, because she looks so bright and cheery and pretty at the breakfast table." How many breakfast tables are presided over by women who make no effort to be dainty, and there are a great number who are at once untidy and even uncleanly to look at. The claim that household duties keep women from looking well in the morning is easily disproved, for in many a household in the kitchen a big apron will thoroughly protect her dress, and then, too, cooking, unless one makes it so, is never dirty work. That woman commits an error who looks uncared for and badly dressed in the morning.—Midland Advocate.

By the Christmas firesides of some of you there will be vacant chairs and vanished faces. Forget not that the joy of the Incarnation is the joy of the Resurrection also, and that there is not one single innocent joy on earth that is not a shadow of a promise of the eternal joy in heaven. The end of our journey, and the end of their journey whom you loved and have lost, is not here. In human life, at one time the wind blows, the rain falls, the frost is cruel; at another the sun shines, the birds sing, and all is May; but through shadow or through sunlight we are traveling onward.—Canon Farrar.

Hygiene.

VENTILATION.

The necessity of pure air and plenty of it is known to everyone, yet is ignored completely by many in their mode of life. Any one who has ever had an aquarium knows what will happen to the fish if the water is not changed frequently; yet few stop to think that the same fate will be theirs if they do not take equal care to freshen the air they breathe.

In Summer there is comparatively little danger of suffering from impure air in the house, for a desire to keep cool impels us to open the windows. But in Winter all doors and windows are tightly closed, and the slightest breath of air is shunned as if it brought death instead of life and health.

The necessity of ventilation, however, is greater than ever in cold weather, for stoves and lights use up a great deal of the oxygen we need, and fill the rooms with poisonous carbonic acid gas. Fortunately the sashes of the window seldom fit absolutely, and there are cracks under the doors and keyholes in them, so that we seldom succeed in fastening up our rooms as hermetically as we wish, and, therefore, did not make ourselves as ill as we deserve. But this is not enough, and every room in the house should be thoroughly aired morning and evening, even in the coldest weather, by opening the window wide and letting the air blow through. A room will soon warm up again after such a cleansing, and, moreover, the air does not need to be so hot to feel comfortable when it is fresh, as it does when it is stale and charged with impurities. In addition to this, there ought in every living and sleeping-room to be some provision for constant renewal of the air. This can be effected easily by raising the lower window sash two inches, and filling the space between it and the sill with a board. The air filters through between the two sashes without creating the draught which we are taught to dread. Another and better way is to lower the upper sash slightly, filling the gap so made with a close wire net.

An open fireplace in a room is a good help to ventilation, for there is almost always an upward current in the chimney, even if there is no fire in the grate, and in this way much of the bad air is removed.—Youth's Companion.

WHYTE—WILLIAM JOSEPH WHYTE was born in Chapel Hill, N. C., April 9, 1852, and died at the home of his son-in-law, W. J. Evans, Bond, Miss., Feb. 22, 1899. He graduated at the State University of North Carolina in 1850.

About 1852 he came to Alabama. For several years he taught school in, or near, Mobile. Here he met and married Miss Josephine Chastang. In 1860 he moved to Mansfield, La. In 1861 he entered the Confederate Army, where he did faithful service. The last two years he was hospital clerk at Keachie, La. In 1866 he returned to Mobile. He was employed two years in the Toll Institute. He lived several years at Manville, Ala. About 1877 he came to Mississippi. He traveled several years for the American Bible Society. He loved this work, although full of hardships.

He was fond of literature, and had a highly cultivated mind. He was efficient and faithful as a teacher, and was universally loved by his pupils, many of whom are now useful men and women.

Mr. Whyte was reared in the Sunday-school, and united with the M. E. Church, and became a Christian, while a school-boy. He was undemonstrative in his feelings, but his life was molded after the "divine pattern." He was humble, patient, and sincere. He obeyed Paul's exhortation, "Let nothing be done through strife or vain-glory, but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves." He was punctual in attending worship, and always ready to assist in prayer meeting or Sunday-school work. He is sadly missed as a teacher in our Sunday-school at Bond. He seldom spoke evil of anyone, but was constantly looking for the good he could find in others.

For a number of years he was prematurely feeble, but his will-power kept him up. Two years ago he took charge of the Bond post-office, where he labored faithfully until death. He was conscious to the last, and on the eve of death he said, "I am perfectly reconciled, and have no fears." He then dictated a letter to his sister, one to his brother, and one to his old friend and desk-mate, Dr. R. M. Whitfield, of Meridian, Miss. To each he spoke calmly of the end. To Dr. Whitfield he said, "Come down immediately, and let us terminate our fifty-three years of friendship on this earth by renewing one which shall never end in eternity." His wife and two eldest sons had preceded him to the "better world."

Truly a good man has fallen. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." He always encouraged me in every good plan, word, or work, and through the grace of God I hope to meet him in heaven.

His daughter-in-law, E. LOU WHYTE.

BURNHAM—Mrs. SERILDA BURNHAM (nee Screwes) was born in Jefferson county, Ga., July 29, 1820. She removed to Rankin county, Miss., in 1835, where she resided until her death, which sad event occurred Saturday, at noon, April 29, 1899.

In January, 1836, she was married to Joshua Burnham, who preceded her to heaven thirty-four years ago. To them were born twelve children—eight sons and four daughters. Two sons lost their lives in support of the "Lost Cause;" two daughters died years ago. Eight children, fifty-seven grandchildren and sixty-seven great-grandchildren survive her.

In the death of Grandma Burnham one of the purest of God's saints is translated from earth to heaven. Converted in early life, she became an ardent and devoted Methodist, and for more than threescore years she was true to the solemn vows assumed in early girlhood. She was truly "a mother in Israel." By her sweet, Christ-like spirit, gentle demeanor, and loving solicitude for the welfare of others, she won the love and confidence of all.

Sister Boroham was a model mother. She really "trained up her children in the way they should go," and the Lord has given her a remarkable fulfillment of the promise, "When they get old they will not depart from it." All of the children, and most of the grandchildren and great-grandchildren who have reached years of maturity, are earnest Christians and active members of the church, many of them occupying official positions in the church. Surely "her works do follow her." "Her children will rise up and call her blessed." She lived a very active life, insisting upon laboring with her own hands and keeping her own house until her last illness. Gradually and peacefully she passed away. Without a struggle or a groan she sweetly fell on sleep." On the lovely Sabbath, the last day of April, we laid her body to rest in hope of the glorious resurrection of God's saints.

PAUL D. HARDIN.

COLE—No greater shock has come to the people of Macon, Miss., than that caused by the sudden death of THEODORE N. COLE, which occurred Feb. 21, '99. He was noted for probity. His word was as good as his bond. He knew not how to take advantage, or to stoop to do a little, mean thing. He was the very soul of honor. Industrious, charitable, he never turned a deaf ear to the cry of the needy and the afflicted.

He was born in Alabama, Oct. 7, 1836; professed religion and joined the Methodist Church while quite young, in which he lived until his death.

For many years back he has been devoted to the cause of Christianity, helping, with his influence and money, to build up the waste places of the earth. He will be sadly missed at his church (X Prairie) in the support of its institutions. The Methodist preacher has lost a substantial friend, and many who have traveled the Brooksville and Hebron circuits, and who have been stationed at Macon, will regard his death as a personal bereavement. His home was the welcome retreat for the weary itinerant.

He was never married. He came out of the war between the States a wounded, walking skeleton; stopped at an uncle's house for a short while. His uncle soon died, leaving a widow and several orphan children. At the earnest solicitation of the family he went to live with them, becoming a father in management for the family. Finally the aunt died, but the relationship continued to his death, and never were more kindness and substantial favors shown an uncle's children than he showed. He felt to them like a brother. Thus has passed away the ideal citizen, loyal to God and his church, loyal to his country and home, loyal to widows and orphans, loyal to the poor and suffering. May his virtues be emulated, and may we all meet him in heaven!

D. W. BABB.

CALHOUN—The subject of this tribute, DANIEL CALHOUN, son of John and Nancy Calhoun, was born Aug. 11, 1816, and departed this life March 17, 1899, at his home near Mt. Olive, Covington county, Miss., surrounded by a host of friends and loved ones.

Bro. Calhoon was twice married, his first wife being the daughter of Daniel and Nancy Graham, and whose given name was Christian—characteristic of her life, which life ended just before the beginning of our late Civil War. His second marriage occurred with Miss Martha A. Ford, March 28, 1861, who still survives him.

This old servant of God was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in early life, constantly holding on to his Christian integrity through all the years of his earthly pilgrimage; hence he was enabled to say to the writer a few days before he died, "I am not ashamed of my life."

Bro. Calhoun was held in high estimation by the whole community in which he lived as an unobtrusive, generous Christian character. He was an old member of the Masonic fraternity, and was buried with Masonic honors.

A wife, sixteen children and a number of grandchildren are mourning his loss. Look up, fond loved ones; your husband and father lives to die no more. G. R. ELLIS.

Williamsburg, Miss.

COOPER—ELLA MAE COOPER, child of W. B. Cooper, was born March 12, 1893; died Feb. 13, 1899.

Little Ella, while sitting by the fireplace on the evening of the twelfth of February, about six o'clock, was burned, and died about two o'clock that night. She was a bright child, and very fond of singing, and seemed to have good musical talents. A few minutes before she was burned, being anxious to learn the song, "Nearing the Port," she asked her father to tell her some words in the song that she did not know. The father and mother attending their domestic affairs, their attention was attracted by a scream of the grandmother, Sister Cooper, "The child is burning up!" By this time the child was wrapped in flames, but when he got to her the child fell off of the piazza, burned black. He picking her up, she said: "Papa, why didn't you come sooner? I hollored and hollored." In relating the circumstance of her wanting him to teach her the song a few minutes before she died, she heard him, and said, "Papa, I can sing yet," and tried to sing the song. Indeed, this was a sad scene. May God bless the family!

DEAFNESS CAN NOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

SOCRATES died from a cup of poison administered by the hand of a friend. How many in this land have died by poisonous remedies given by friendly hands to combat diseases? It is quite a comfort to know that when giving DICKS' CHILLIFUGE there is not a drop of poison in a bottle full of this beneficent remedy.

A Great Combine

Trusts and Combines in many lines of production, and controlling the output of many factories, have recently been formed, some Capitalized at Millions, and other similar organizations are projected. It is not our purpose to discuss here the influence of these trusts, whether beneficial to public interests or otherwise; but we wish to announce to our readers that which is not prejudicial to any interests, but which, on the contrary, is directly in favor of every reader of this paper.

WE HAVE ENTERED A COMBINATION

HERE IS THE PLAN

A splendid illustrated MONTHLY, devotional to the cause of Methodism throughout this broad land and called THE AMERICAN ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE, is published in St. Louis, with offices in New York and Chicago. It is the peer of the best of the popular magazines in illustration, literature, and typographical excellence, and is designed to be to the Methodist membership of about six millions in America, what the popular secular magazine is to the general reading public. The Magazine is not a competitor of any of the other Church periodicals; it is general in its scope. It is the ONLY ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE PUBLISHED MONTHLY IN THE UNITED STATES, and occupies a field distinctly its own. Its aims and purposes are of the highest. Its ideals are: THE PUREST IN LITERATURE, THE HIGHEST IN ART, THE NOBLEST IN METHODISM. It is a worthy exponent of the great Church it so ably represents.

Some Opinions of Representative Methodists, North and South.

"The American Illustrated Methodist Magazine should be welcomed by the whole Methodist family. Many a number will contain articles worth ten times the subscription price." —Bishop Charles C. McCabe.

"A periodical absolutely solitary in the field it occupies. It is a joy to the eye, the mind and the heart. It ought to find a place at once in every family circle in the land." —Bishop W. A. Candler.

"Fair, sweet-toned, appetizing." —Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.

"A gem among the monthlies of our land." —T. Berry Smith, Central College, Fayette, Mo.

"Our common Methodism is to be congratulated on this valuable accession to our periodical treasures. I hope every Christian will have this beautiful Magazine." —Bishop John F. Hurst.

W. T. Harris, of Washington, D. C., United States Commissioner of Education, has this to say of a recent number: "It is one of the most remarkable magazine numbers that I have seen for a long time, and I beg leave to enclose two dollars for two regular subscriptions. I congratulate you."

"It takes rank with the best for its varied and rich table of contents. A valuable auxiliary to our Epworth League work." —Bishop E. R. Hendrix.

The Press, Denominational and Secular, Speak in Highest Terms.

"A future of gratifying success and large usefulness is assured it." —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"We most heartily commend it to our people as a high-grade periodical, worthy to take its place in every Methodist home." —New Orleans Christian Advocate.

"The contributions compare well with those of any other Magazine of the day and the illustrations are excelled by none." —Pittsburg (Pa.) Daily News.

"It will aim to advocate and magnify the things which world-wide Methodism holds in common, and especially to be a factor in the cultivation of fraternal relations between the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." —Central Christian Advocate.

"Interesting and attractive, not only to Methodists but also to the general reading public, for the matter which fills the pages is of a character broader than the title would indicate." —Columbus (O.) Dispatch.

"The letter press is superb, the illustrations first-class and the reading matter thoroughly instructive, entertaining and edifying." —Pennsylvania Methodist.

"The prospectus of the Magazine indicates that there is an abundant feast of good things in store for its readers; but the Magazine itself is better than any prospectus." —The Pittsburg (Pa.) Times.

"A triumph of literary talent and mechanical art." —St. Louis Christian Advocate.

"The scholarship of the Magazine is insured by the editorship of Revs. James W. Lee and Naphtali Luccock, who are known and loved in St. Louis and throughout the West." —St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"We welcome it, relish it and recommend it." —Western Christian Advocate.

"It compares favorably with the best of them, and is a brilliant success from the beginning." —Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.

"It takes high rank with the best periodical literature of the day." —Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

"We cannot but give to the Magazine our best wishes, and hope for it great success." —Texas Christian Advocate.

To these might be added hundreds of testimonials from Church officials, pastors and laymen, North and South, all praising the Magazine for its intrinsic worth and its lofty purpose.

"THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF METHODISM," which is being published serially in the Magazine, is a feature of marked interest, and is alone worth the subscription price; but the History is only one of the many interesting and artistic features of each number.

Every Methodist family should be a subscriber. Its price is so small all can afford it, but in combination with this paper an opportunity is offered to secure both publications for little more than the cost of one alone.

The subscription price of THE AMERICAN ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE is $1.00 a year; the subscription price of this paper is $2.00 a year. We will supply BOTH one year for $2.65 in advance.

This is our GREAT COMBINE—a TRUST organized solely in the interests of our readers, and which they are invited to join. Do not delay.

THIS OFFER WILL EXPIRE JUNE 1.

Take notice that in order to get the benefit of this offer you must first pay all arrearages. In order to ascertain the amount of your arrearage, look at the label on your paper and count the months from the date there given to May, '99. Then send 16⅔ cents for each month. Add to this $2.65.

GERMAN KALI WORKS,
93 Nassau St., New York.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

A monument to Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Markham was unveiled in Metairie Cemetery, New Orleans, on May 20.

The diplomatic career of Baron de Staal, who presides at the peace conference, has been a long and distinguished one.

The new Japanese cruiser, the "Chitose," which has left San Francisco for the Orient, is the first warship ever built in San Francisco for a foreign power.

The women of Alabama have decided to present Miss Annie Wheeler, daughter of General Wheeler, with a handsome silver set as a testimonial of her work among the soldiers at Santiago during the war with Spain.

At Torreon, Mexico, a new cotton mill has been put up. The company has a $600,000 capital. The mill has 500 looms and employs some 800 or 1000 operatives. It is lighted by electricity, having 400 incandescent and six arc lights.

The German Reichstag proposes to grant the sum of $300,000 for the expenses of an Antarctic expedition, to start in 1901. The expedition will go as far as possible in a wooden ship, and attempt to reach the South Pole by means of dog sleighs and a captive balloon.

The cloud of uncertainty that has been hanging over Cuban affairs has been dissipated as the result of a long conference between Generals Brooke and Gomez, and there is no reason why the three million dollars should not be distributed and the arms surrendered, unless unexpected opposition develops among the officers and soldiers.

The conference between the civilian members of the United States Philippine Commission and the representatives of the Philippine Commission continues. The military and civil members of the American Commission differ regarding the wisdom of continuing the conference, the former adhering to their original demand for the unconditional surrender of the insurgents.

M. de Staal, head of the Russian delegation, and president of the conference, received final instructions from Emperor Nicholas to deal with the question of realizing compulsory arbitration, whether by a supreme tribunal of several great powers or by private tribunal, consisting of the powers whose interests might be at stake, with the subsequent friendly mediation by some third power.

President McKinley has strongly objected to the Cubans surrendering their arms to the municipal authorities instead of to the United States arsenals, and, pending the ultimatum, General Brooke is withholding the decree ordering the surrendering of the arms and the distribution of the money. The delay is again causing dissatisfaction among the Cubans, and it is believed that if the plan agreed upon between Generals Gomez and Brooke is not carried ont, trouble seems imminent.

Berlin, Germany, is soon to have an "American church," where "American religion" will be the attraction. The American colony meets for worship in the rooms of the Y. M. C. A., and has a minister, Dr. Dickey. The congregation owns a lot and has $20,000 in hand for a building fund. This has been largely increased of late by subscriptions in this country, obtained by Dr. Dickey, who is now in the United States. The new church will of necessity be non-sectarian, inasmuch as the thirty-five Americans now resident in Berlin represent seventeen denominations.

It was stated that Aguinaldo had finally sued for peace, and had agreed to the terms offered by the special Philippine Commission; and it was freely asserted that the trouble was practically at an end. It now turns out that the Filipinos have not sued for peace, but have, on the contrary, sent a commission to General Otis to ask for a suspension of hostilities for the purpose of summoning the Filipino Congress. This is practically the same request that was made several weeks ago, after the taking of Calumpit, and, like the prior request, was promptly refused by Major-General Otis.

Regarding arbitration, the present position of the delegates seems to be this: Germany and the other powers of the triple alliance are entirely against it, and Turkey follows in their wake. Great Britain and the United States are entirely in favor of it. Prof. von Stengel, of the German delegation, has said "Arbitration is impracticable when two nations are divided by a vital issue, while in less important questions it exists already." France is hesitating and will probably agree with Russia. Several delegates confess that they came to the conference unprepared and have already learned much.

While pressing the United States to agree to arbitration of the Alaskan boundary controversy, the British Government has entered objection to the dispatch of additional American troops to the territory. The controversy between the two governments has assumed a more serious aspect than is generally supposed. While the President is bound to the principle of arbitration, and while, on its face, the case the United States could present would, it is believed, result in a triumph for this government, there seems possible that the arbitration might decide that the British Government is entitled to a port on the Pacific coast, perhaps Skagnay, of which Great Britain desires to obtain possession.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections; also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints. Having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, and desiring to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who wish it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail, by addressing, with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 820 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

JOB EARNED HIS TITLE BY GREAT SUFFERING. Had he flourished in these days, his recourse for consolation would not have been the company of three nagging friends, but a bottle of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL, which has a wonderful power to dissipate the inflammation, cool the feverishness, and completely cure boils and carbuncles.

Some people seem to rake up all the sorrows of the past; to them they add the burdens of the present; then they look ahead, and anticipate a great many more trials than they will ever experience in the future.—D. L. Moody

28th ANNUAL CAMP MEETING

Seashore Camp Grounds.

Located on the Gulf Shore, with a frontage of 1,400 feet.

WILL OPEN (D. V.) ON WEDNESDAY, JULY 12, NEXT, AND CONTINUE FOR 8 OR 10 DAYS.

The Grounds are opened April 1, and closed Nov. 1, for occupying cottages and reception of visitors. Modern and ample accommodation have been provided for the multitudes that annually visit this refreshing and delightfully cool and bracing place of rest, free from malaria and contagious diseases.

The sea bathing is unsurpassed by any resort on the Mississippi Sound, while the supply of pure, sparkling drinking water is furnished by one of the finest of artesian wells, whose waters possess rare virtues.

The Grounds represent a beautiful grove of rare attractiveness, with its abundance of 20-odd varieties of shade trees, which afford shelter from the Summer heat.

The exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued, and act as a tonic to the debilitated visitors from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns. Boats for sailing and fishing always on hand. The drives along the seashore present magnificent views, and are over ten miles in length. Visitors are not expected to arrive or depart on the Sabbath day.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 5 to 22, inclusive, and be good to return on until Aug. 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. A fine hotel, with a frontage of 75 feet, equipped with electric lights and all modern conveniences, has been erected.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the New Orleans, Seashore and Mobile District Conferences.

"NIGHT."

BY ALFRED J. ROUGH.

Luke ii, 8.

It was not in the glow of noontide high,
Or the tender grace of morn,
But shadows were over the earth and sky—
'Twas night when the Lord was born.

This is ever the way God molds his deeds,
In silence and out of sight;
They hide in the dark like the precious seeds,
Then suddenly rise in light.

So, whenever a night with shadowy wing
Folds darkly over our way,
We must listen to hear God's angels sing,
And watch for the dawning day.

Let us say, when we sit in darkness long,
With aching heart forlorn,
"It was night when the angels sang their song.
'Twas night when the Lord was born."

For all the glad days that had rolled in light,
Since the first glad day had birth,
Were not half so bright as the one dark night
When the Savior came to earth.

And at last we shall own in the heavenly clime,
With a finished life in view,
That our darkest nights in the path of time
Were the brightest days we knew.

"Knowledge does not comprise all which is contained in the large term of education. The feelings are to be disciplined, the passions are to be restrained, true and worthy motives are to be inspired, a profound religious feeling is to be instilled, and pure morality inculcated under all circumstances. All this is comprised in education."—Daniel Webster.

This definition is full and exhaustive, but not too full. Education is essentially twofold—intellectual and moral. Neither of these divorced from the other is entitled to the name. The moral nature is as distinctive, and demands equal consideration with the intellectual; and more: in the true idea of education it exceeds the intellectual as far as the intellectual exceeds the mere physical. In all true education these two faculties are to be advanced together, hand in hand. With this idea, which is the only true one, we readily see that the ground of all the improvements and ameliorations of the human race is education. It is the spring of all progress and the leaven of all society. The foundation of all good and all wealth is laid in the intellectual and moral nature of man. In these we see the shadowy angel of a new and immortal life, but, like the angel the sculptor saw, it is incased in rugged stone. Unless our efforts are directed equally to these two natures, we sow our seed upon the barren sand. Some people think, to educate a man, you have got to make him stand up straight, and stuff him like they do the geese in Paris—till he is full up to the neck. Stuff him full of incidents, facts, and books; teach him the mechanism of reading, writing, and arithmetic, and charge his memory with words and rules and dates, and give him a trade, and he is educated. Take a quart of history, a pint of geography, and a half gallon of mathematics, and a few hundred yards of surveying, and a thimbleful of psychology, and a telescope full of astronomy, and a smattering of philosophy, and a capsule or two of moral science, and put them all down him, and send him to the gymnasium to settle his stomach, and he is educated. He is just about as much educated as a hollow log would be if you were to stuff it full of Hebrew, Greek, and Latin. The true end of education is to unfold and direct, according to the laws of our being, the whole nature. In our moral nature and its possibilities we see the image and workmanship of God. It is in this part of our being that kinship to Deity is stamped, and the still, small voice of our origin and the prophecy of our destined future is constantly heard. In the unfolding and proper direction of the soul faculties God's law is the guide. The wealth of this world lies in enriched life and character. Man's chief good is not in the material world, not in houses and lands and stocks and bonds, not in equipage, fame, or pleasure; not in the cultivation and development of reason, the perceptive faculties, the taste and imagination, but in the discipline and culture and right direction of his soul powers—moral nature, power of affection, will, choice, self-control, and virtue; power of wisdom in selecting the highest good, and power to follow firmly the best ends. It is in our moral nature that we are still in the image of God, and as this nature is brought out and polished, we see ever more clearly the likeness of our Maker. The thinking, choice and action must be along the highway of the soul's lofty endowments and true end. The intellectual eye will discover some thing of God in land and sky and sea, but the clear image, perfection and glory of God are brought out in matchless beauty in man's moral nature, unfolded by the laws of virtue, justice, truth, love, goodness, and disinterestedness. These things form the medium of communication between our souls and God, because these attributes belong to the divine nature. As our higher nature is wrought upon by pure, holy and unselfish motives, we take on the likeness of God, and come to think his thoughts after him, and regale our spirits with the knowledge that God is. I do not mean by what I have said to even insinuate that you can educate man into religion, or educate religion into man. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the spirit is spirit." But the real good of education lies in the purity and elevation it gives character.

Now, the education I have described is the only education that can meet the demands of our nature and the present life, and satisfy the end of our being. We must shut out all narrow, secular, and sickly ideas of a question of such magnitude, and not be contented with giving our children a little book learning to fit them for some little niche in society, or for "getting on in the world." This distinctive education is what we want, and the church alone proposes to give it to us. She alone is thoroughly qualified to give it to us. She can better understand the needs of the race she is sent to save, and appreciate more keenly the moral side of our nature. Our Methodist Church is pre-eminently fitted for this trust, as she is a close student of the needs of the time. She is a patron of scholarship and the friend of education. The sum she asks for this work is small when we consider our blessings, our numbers, and our resources. It seems that it might be easily doubled, and nobody feel it. The needs are great and pressing. Our colleges and universities are but half equipped for the mighty work they are to do. The church, with the high commission upon her fresh from the lips of God, can not afford to lag behind all the enterprises of the time. A million and a half for education! Inscribe it upon the banners of Southern Methodism! Fling it to the breeze! Let every preacher and leader put a trumpet to his lips, and sound in long and repeated blasts. A million and a half for Christian education! And let all the people in the valleys and on the mountains shout aloud, "Amen!" Perhaps it can best be done in log-rolling fashion. Let all the people get ready—hand-sticks and wrist-supports. Sometimes the big logs are left till after dinner. Give all the people a big, substantial dinner. This will be done by the preachers and leaders. Don't feed them on stale light bread and old ham; neither give them beautiful white linen, handsome china or cut glass for dinner; but give them nice, tender greens fresh from the garden, seasoned with the meat that strengthens man's heart. Then, while every fellow is in good humor, get out under the big gum logs. Let everyone get his hand on his stick. All ready! He'o heave! They all come together, and each leans to the log and braces himself against his partner. The logs are piled, the field is cleared, and everybody feels good.

ECHOES FROM TWENTIETH CENTURY EDUCATION DAY IN MISSISSIPPI.

Rev. C. D. Cecil reports five dollars from DeKalb circuit. Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, fifteen and 50-100 dollars from Belzona, and "more to follow." Rev. E. C. Sullivan, sixteen and 60-100 dollars from Cornersville circuit, and "five churches yet to hear from." Rev. L. D. Worsham, twenty-five dollars from Eureka circuit, and "three other churches yet to collect from. Think I will get good amount by presenting the cause privately. Certainly going to do all I can for Twentieth Century Fund." Rev. G. W. Gordon, twenty-five and 80-100 dollars from Ethel circuit, and "will present the matter at each church till I make the round of my charge." Rev. A. T. Bell, thirty-eight and 75-100 dollars from Quitman, and "one-half of the membership yet to be seen. Published notices of the work in both town papers. Have very little doubt that my charge will pay in full." Rev. J. R. Counties, fifty dollars from Gunnison, and "this is only a beginning." Rev. R. J. Jones, fifty and 25-100 dollars from Capitol Street Church, Jackson, and "some of our best-paying members were absent." Rev. W. C Harris, sixty-one dollars from twenty persons at Shaw, and "have seventy-five members. Confident of securing one hundred dollars." Rev. W. B. Lewis, one hundred thirty-one and 50-100 dollars from Yazoo City, and "will follow the public collection with private solicitation," etc.

This shows what can be done. Dollars have been received from charges which some thought would not contribute a cent. Some charges that should have been forward to remit have not yet reported. "There's more in the man than there is in the land." Several brethren observed the day, but thought the time not favorable for a collection. Some wrote they were not yet ready to begin the work. Several had written in advance they would observe a Sunday in June.

Every pastor must be his own judge of conditions in his charge; but it is easy to fall into a snare in waiting for a favorable time. "A favorable time" for anything will never come of itself, but we must, by prayer and effort, compel a favorable time.

While it is necessary and right to consult officials and the membership to a certain extent, still this has its limitations. Many (most) will advise you to wait for a "convenient season" for anything you suggest. And their advice will be ever, only, always, "Wait." If the "convenient season" about which Felix spoke ever came, the record does not mention it.

Having furnished every preacher in Mississippi with a post card addressed to me, is it too much to expect a report of what was done, or when the day will be observed, and what are the prospects for success? If I seem too persistent in this work, it is because I firmly believe the very existence of our church is involved in what we are trying to accomplish by this movement. If this Twentieth Century Movement fail, by some other method this work MUST be done, or our beloved church will go into decline. But the Twentieth Century Movement will not fail. It must succeed. What must be done can be done and will be done, and we are the people to do it. The great heart of the church is being stirred as never before. Dear brother, give your people the opportunity to have a part in it. LET EVERYBODY HELP NOW!

P. S.—Information has reached me of a difference of opinion in some places about the use of the roll books. Some contend names of all members should be enrolled at once; others say only names of those who pay should be enrolled. It is proper to enroll names of all members; then, as they pay, the amount is set opposite the name of the party who paid. By this means it can be readily seen who has paid and who has not, and the preacher will know whom to approach for contributions. Bear in mind this is to be a free-will thank offering. No attempt will be made to coerce anyone into giving. But argument, appeal and opportunity will be given each individual to have part in this great work for the benefit of humanity and the glory of God. The only reason the roll-books will be carried to the Annual Conference is, that where there is a change of pastors, the new pastor may have the book, in order that he may intelligently take up this work where his predecessor left off. THE SCHOOL QUESTION.

BY REV. W. S. LAGRONE.

We regret exceedingly the unfortunate state of things likely to exist in North Mississippi on the school question. If we are not careful, we are going to seriously damage our cause just at a time the most hurtful to us. I am sure all the parties concerned are honest in their convictions, and have the cause of education at heart, and would not intentionally get in the way of the work already in hand, or hinder an advanced movement; but unless some of us move up a little, and others hold back a little, we are going to get wide apart, and seriously hurt the cause we are anxious to help and advance.

The Oxford Globe makes an announcement that will be hurtful not only to Grenada College, but to Oxford and the worthy brethren whom it intends to honor. The Globe announces without knowledge or consent of the Board of Trustees, or the Board of Education, or the authority of the Conference, that "At last, after many hitches and set-backs, the Union Female College buildings and grounds have passed into the hands of the North Mississippi Conference, the deal having been made by Revs. R. M. Standifer and J. W. Malone, acting for the church. That these brethren will open the school in September."

This notice is going to do harm, because it is not true. The Conference has taken no action in the matter, and no one is authorized to make such a deal. The law provides that no such contract shall be made.

This notice puts Bros. Standifer and Malone in a position they can not afford to assume:

1. Because they are members of the North Mississippi Conference, subject to the appointment of the Bishop; and unless they have concluded to locate, they are not likely to be appointed to Union Female College.

2 The Board of Trustees have given notice that Grenada College will open in September. If these brethren open at Oxford, they will do it without the authority of the Conference, and in opposition to the only school owned and run by the Conference.

When the Conference meets, will it recommend the appointment of two such men as Standifer and Malone to an institution over which we have no control, and in which we have not a dollar invested, to oppose Grenada College, owned and controlled by the Conference? We are all pledged to stand by the Board of Trustees and Grenada College, and this we will do. If it is to the best interest of the church in North Mississippi to make a change in the location of the college, that Board is competent to suggest, and the Conference the only authority for a change. Whatever might have been the prospect for a change from Grenada to Oxford, this move will interfere. It is premature.

Suppose these brethren open in September at Oxford, and the Conference fails to recommend and the Bishop to appoint them. Then what?

The school at Grenada will certainly open in September with a president and full corps of teachers.

Suppose the trustees recommend to the Conference, and the Conference recommends the change from Grenada to Oxford. Who will be the president and teachers?

We all see the necessity for an advanced movement in this work, but we can not, and must not, sacrifice what we have, and we certainly will not take another debt.

THE GRENADA COLLEGE.

The article of Bro. J. W. Malone, under the caption of "The Oxford Female College," is calculated to mislead the readers of the ADVOCATE.

The trustees of the Grenada College will in due time proceed to elect a new president to take charge of the school, and continue it as the North Mississippi Conference School for girls. I think the moving of the school to Oxford is only contemplated by a few individuals, and not by the Conference.

ARCADIA DISTRICT EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

About forty-five delegates and some visitors from a fair proportion of the charges of the district met at the choice town of Minden, April 27, with a good opening sermon by Rev. S. J. Davies, of Arcadia. The service was inspiring and helpful.

The president of the district being absent, the first vice-president of the League, Rev W. W. Nicholson, took the chair at the opening business session, April 28 Miss Gussie B. Tooke was the efficient and tactful secretary. The pastor of Minden station delivered an impromptu address of welcome, to which Miss Eula Yarbrough, of Arcadia, responded in well-chosen words.

The presence of Rev. P. O. Lowrey, of Shreveport, and Dr. I. W. Cooper, of Jackson, added interest to the occasion and power to the influence of the rally upon all present. The strong and eloquent address of Dr. Cooper will not soon be forgotten. "Success" was his theme, and many a life went out that night with nobler purposes, and grander prospects, and more heroic faith.

Bro. Lowrey's helpful address on "The Epworth League Worker" was clear in its emphasis of the power of individual life, the touch of man to man, the voice of love.

Some splendid papers were read. We do no injustice to the high character of all the essays when special mention is made of three. Miss Beulah Rhinehart, on the "Charity and Help Department," touched the highest level of literary style, and the clearest notes of the duty of charity, and the privilege to help. Prof. O. B Staples gave us a thoughtful and scholarly paper on "The Student Missionary Campaign." Missionary enthusiasm will be more intelligent after listening to Prof. Staples' paper. Miss Anna T. Clingman read a finished essay on "The Young Men of the Church—Where Are They?" So pleasing, appropriate, direct and strong was this paper that its reading was requested at the prayer meeting on Sunday afternoon, April 30. Miss Clingman read the duty of putting a premium on righteousness out of a consecrated life.

Other papers were strong—in fact, a high level of excellence was unbroken, save by the superior excellence of these three papers mentioned above.

Dr. Cooper made a good talk to the Leaguers, and on Sunday preached a strong sermon on "Conscience."

Sunday night, after a sermon on missions from Rev. A. J Notestine, which stirred our hearts, the president of Centenary College gave us a talk on his college work. Following this, our popular presiding elder, Rev. B. T. Crews, appealed to the Leaguers present for help for a needy student for the ministry in that grand old institution of learning. Ninety-two dollars was pledged, Minden leading with $20 from the League and $10 from individuals. (Since that time the local chapter has provided for more than the amount pledged.)

The officers chosen for the present year were elected unanimously, as follows: President, W. W. Nicholson; first vice-president, Miss Anna T. Clingman; second vice-president, Mr. O B. Staples; third vice-president, Miss Beulah Rhinehart; corresponding secretary, Miss Gussie B. Tooke; recording secretary, Miss Viola Miller.

The Program Committee for the year is composed of Rev. C. P. Smith, Miss Anna T. Clingman, and Mrs. S. J. Davies.

The meetings were well attended, the spirit fine. The preachers are enlisted in the work more than ever before, the young people full of zeal and enthusiasm for the Master, and the cause of missions on the hearts of our common Methodism in these parts with deeper power than the past has known.

We meet next year in the town of Homer. Mr. Editor, come.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Jackson, La. EDITOR.

College commencements!

Diplomas and ribbons galore

Many of the Leaguers are anxiously looking forward to the home coming of their brothers and sisters, some of whom will "finish" during the next few weeks.

What wonderful opportunities await the trained young men and women of to day who have studied "to show themselves approved unto God" as workmen that need not to be ashamed.

The bugle blast of the latter days of this nineteenth century ought to call into line a mighty army of trained soldiers, armed for the conflict against the world, the flesh, and the devil.

Let every League in Louisiana and Mississippi organize itself into a "college canvassing society," to secure boys and girls during the Summer for our own church colleges which will (D. V.) open in September.

The League and the college are closely connected; their work is harmonious; they stand for the training of young men and young women for Christ and the church.

The Epworth Leaguers of the Western North Carolina Conference have notified the presiding elders and pastors in the bounds of the Conference that they propose to assist them in raising the missionary assessments in full. Thus they will prove to be true helpers in the cause of Christ.

A change has recently been made in the chairmanship of the Home Committee for the International Epworth League Conference, soon to convene in Indianapolis. Hereafter let all communications relating to homes be addressed to Rev. C. E. Bacon, D. D., care of "The Denison," Indianapolis, Ind.

STATEMENT FROM THE BOOK COMMITTEE.

To the M. E. Church South:

The Book Committee of the M. E. Church, South, published in July, 1898, a statement setting forth the facts in connection with the collection of the claim against the United States Government for the use, consumption, injury, and destruction of the Publishing House by the army of the United States during the war between the States. That statement, containing all the pertinent facts in the case, gave assurance to the church that the Book Committee, in discharge of the obligation imposed upon it by the church, had made a careful and exhaustive investigation into the acts of the Book Agents in the collection of said claim, and also declared it to be the unanimous opinion of the thirteen members composing the Book Committee that the Book Agents, in the communications addressed to senators, and complained of as deceptive and misleading, had not intended to mislead the Senate of the United States.

Since the publication, last July, of said statement no new facts bearing on the collection of this claim have come to the knowledge of the Book Committee.

It is true, as we learn from the public press, though not from any communications sent to us—for no such communications have been received—that some Annual Conferences have passed resolutions in connection with one or more features of this claim. These resolutions cover three demands or suggestions:

1. The return to the United States Government of the money appropriated in satisfaction of the claim of the church.

2. The resignation of the Book Committee.

3. The displacement or resignation of the Book Agents.

The action of any of our Annual Conferences deserves and receives from this committee careful and respectful consideration. At the same time it will be recognized and admitted that in matters with which the church has charged the Book Committee, that Committee must, in conscience and in discharge of responsibility, reach such conclusions as convince the judgment of the individual members of the Committee.

In reference to the return of the money appropriated to satisfy the claim of the church, we believe that the resolution adopted by the United States Senate, Feb. 21, 1899, in which resolution it is declared that no injury was done the United States, so definitely settles that question as would make any further agitation of it improper. In addition to this fact, the Book Committee, even if so disposed, has never had the power to return this money, being precluded from taking such a step by the express terms of the Sixth Restrictive Rule.

Touching the suggestion or request of some that the Book Committee should resign, we have only this to say: that having been charged by the general church, whose servants we are, with very responsible duties, we do not deem a difference of opinion between ourselves and others who have not been charged with our responsibilities a sufficient ground for such a step; and, indeed, the resignation of the Book Committee is impossible under the law of our church, for there is, during the intervals of the General Conference, no one authorized to accept such resignation, nor any authority to appoint a new Committee. It seems, on the contrary, to be our duty to continue hereafter as hitherto, in the conscientious discharge of the duties of the office to the best of our ability. The General Conference to which alone we owe our official existence laid certain responsibilities on its Book Committee, and committed certain functions to it. The Committee has shirked no responsibilities; has assumed no functions not committed to it.

Some Annual Conferences, less than one-third of the whole number, asked for the removal of the Book Agents. About thirty communications have been received by us, some requesting, others demanding the removal of the Agents. Some of these communications were from District Conferences, stewards' meetings, and preachers' meetings, though most of them were from individuals. It should be noted that two-thirds of these communications came from one State, more than three-fourths from two States, and but three came from individuals outside of three States. It should be noted further that many of these communications largely agree in form and language, showing that they are the results of a printed circular extensively distributed for the declared purpose of influencing the judgment of this Committee, and of thus effecting the removal of the Book Agents. A copy of this circular is in possession of the Book Committee. Only two of these communications, and those from individuals, came from the bounds of Annual Conferences that are not reported to have asked for the removal of the Book Agents. Consequently it will be sufficient to reply to the resolutions of these Conferences as being the larger and more representative bodies, and inclusive of District Conferences, stewards' meetings, preachers' meetings, and individual members.

After this Committee had published in July of last year its deliberate and unanimous judgment that the Book Agents had not intended to deceive or mislead United States Senators, the responsible presiding elder legally appointed an Investigating Committee to inquire into the moral conduct of Dr. Barbee. This Investigating Committee, after long and careful inquiry, unanimously reported that no trial was necessary. The Tennessee Conference, of which Dr. Barbee is a member, after a discussion extending over more than two days, passed his character without a dissenting vote.

It has been stated to the Book Committee that Dr. Barbee's character was passed with the express or implied agreement or understanding on his part that he would resign his position as Book Agent. Dr. Barbee denies that he was in person or otherwise a party to such agreement or understanding, or had any knowledge of such agreement or understanding. This denial was scarcely necessary, for the very intimation that the Tennessee Conference was capable of being a party to such an agreement or understanding would be a most unjust reflection on the integrity of that Conference.

It will not be claimed by any well-informed member of our church that Annual Conferences have any jurisdiction over the Book Committee. Requests from such Conferences can be only advisory, not mandatory. This Committee has an open ear for advice from Conferences or from individual members of our church, and gives it patient, careful, and respectful consideration. But the responsibility for the determination of such questions as have, by the supreme power of the church, been laid on this Committee, and alone on this Committee, must be left to the conclence and judgment of the individual members of the Committee. This responsibility could not be shared with others even if the Committee were so inclined.

As no charge of immorality is pending against either of the Agents which would authorize this Committee to proceed under paragraph 431 of the Discipline, if this Committee has authority to remove the Agents, it must be under paragraph 427, giving power to the Book Committee "to suspend the Book Agents in the intervals of the General Conference for misconduct or inefficiency in office." This Committee has long since deliberately and unanimously declared its judgment on this point. No less than four regularly constituted church tribunals—being all the tribunals to which the church has given jurisdiction, either over the acts or the moral character of Dr. Barbee—have unanimously held that he was not guilty of misconduct in office.

Recognizing the binding authority of the judgments of our regularly constituted church tribunals in matters over which they have jurisdiction, and that the Agents have already answered to every such tribunal in the church, and have been acquitted of any intention to do wrong in connection with the prosecution of the Publishing House claim, the Book Committee regards this question as settled, and feels bound by this settlement. It could not, therefore, if it would, remove the Agents for misconduct. To do this would be not only to go behind our law and overturn it, but would also be an unlawful impeachment of the verdicts of those alone qualified to determine responsibilities committed to them by the General Conference.

We do not understand the charge of inefficiency in office to have been made by anyone against the Book Agents.

The sole legitimate conclusion we can reach, or that, in our opinion, can be reached by those subject to the Discipline of the church, is, that the charge against the Agents is res adjudicata.

To go outside the law of the church for any purpose would be to break down all protection given to our preachers and members, and this Committee respectfully, but firmly, declines to do what it believes to be unauthorized and unlawful.

The Senate of the United States adopted, Feb. 21, 1899, a report in which it is stated that many senators regarded the fee paid the attorney employed by the Book Committee to collect the aforesaid claim as "excessive and unreasonable," and "a waste and improper use of the fund" appropriated by the government in discharge of its obligation to our church.

The report further implies that the aforesaid contract, so far from guarding the interest of the beneficiaries of the Publishing House—for the safe guarding of which interest the church has appointed the Book Committee—had wrought an injury to these beneficiaries.

The following facts will probably be sufficient to convince the church that the contract was legal, customary, and reasonable; and that the Book Committee, in a conscientious and just manner, has cared for the interests committed to its trust:

Three times—viz., in 1870, 1874, and 1878—the General Conference authorized the necessary steps to be taken to remedy, as far as possible, the great wrong done the beneficiaries of the Publishing House by the unjust seizure, retention, and use of its property, and the General Conference also approved the steps taken to collect such a sum of money from the Government of the United States as would in some measure reimburse the church.

In addition to the payment of more than eleven thousand dollars to one of our preachers to cover his expenses for years while he worked to induce Congress to do us justice, different Book Committees entered into contracts with attorneys to collect this claim. The contract under which we were at last, and after many years, successful in securing partial remedy for the wrongs inflicted on the beneficiaries of the Publishing House by the authorities of the United States was, except as to the amount of the contingent fee to be paid the attorney, an exact copy of a previous contract entered into between a former Book Committee and an attorney, which previous contract had been approved by Judge E. H. East, of Nashville, Tenn., at that time the chairman of the Book Committee, and recognized as one of the leading and ablest lawyers in the State of Tennessee, and, indeed, in our church. The Hon. A. H. Garland, of Arkansas, formerly Attorney-General of the United States, pronounced the contract with the attorney who succeeded in collecting the claim to be legal, customary, and reasonable. That this is a correct opinion, as far as concerns the legality of the contract, is further attested by the fact that the Senate Committee did not even utter a hint against that legality.

The report of the Senate Committee, made July 8, 1898, shows that effort was made to introduce evidence to prove that the contract with our attorney was legal, and the fee paid neither unusual nor exorbitant. This evidence was rejected, the point being raised that the investigation should be confined to the question of misrepresentation

Mr. Clay said: "I thought the sole question was in reference to misrepresentation."

The chairman, Mr. Teller, said: "That is what I announced—the misrepresentations which had been made by anybody with reference to securing the passage of the bill—not as to the merits of the bill or as to the value of the services rendered."

Mr. Pasco said: "If an outrage were perpetrated by the contract, it was upon the church, and that is a matter which the church itself must investigate. The only matter for the Committee to investigate is whether an outrage was perpetrated on the Senate by the willful misrepresentations of the parties engaged in this matter. If there was an outrage perpetrated upon the church, the church is capable of following that up and acting upon it, but the Senate has not intrusted it (that is, the Senate Committee) with that investigation."

On such grounds the proffered evidence as to the reasonableness of the fee was rejected. Yet, in its report the Committee does undertake to pass judgment upon the fee as "excessive and unreasonable," and the implication is plainly made that the Book Committee was unfaithful to its trust in that it failed "to protect the beneficiaries from what many senators regard as a waste and improper use of the fund," from what the Senate Committee characterized as "excessive charges and extortion."

The Investigating Committee thus passes judgment upon a matter into which it refused to inquire, which was not submitted to it for investigation, and on which it declined to receive evidence when proffered.

Thus it is shown by its own action that the amount of the attorney's fee was a matter in which the government had no interest or concern; was not a proper subject of inquiry by the Senate; was not, in fact, submitted for investigation, and the attempted decision of that question was ultra vires, and without any force or authority.

When the Senate, on Feb. 21, 1899, adopted its resolution approving the report of its Investigating Committee, it said: "The injury resulting therefrom affected only the beneficiaries of the fund, and not the United States, and the Senate should take no further action in the matter."

This final action was taken without debate, and without any reference to the proof taken, the resolution being passed after the statement of Senator Pasco that the matters had "been carefully considered before the Committee." The reasonable inference is that the Senate, as a body, was not familiar with the facts in the case, and was not cognizant of the fact that evidence on the point involved had been rejected by the Committee.

The Senate has, therefore, itself passed judgment on a matter which was never investigated, and which, by the action of its own Committee, was excluded from consideration.

Evidently, according to the view of the Senate itself, the church is the only body having authority to investigate this question, and the church has investigated and decided it.

At the last General Conference the Committee on Publishing Interests, after a careful investigation, declared that the contract with the attorney "was, under all the circumstances of the case, a reasonable and proper one, and in accordance with the usual business methods in like cases, and is approved."

The Book Committee, after investigation, unanimously held in its report of July, 1898, that the fee was not only reasonable, but was for a less sum than is customary in such cases. As the church is capable of determining this matter, and has done so, it might be taken as conclusively settled.

But we will go further, and show by the action of the Senate itself in similar cases that the contract fee was not only reasonable, but below the customary amounts allowed and paid by the Senate.

By Section 9 of an Act approved June 29, 1888, an appropriation of $2,858,798.62 was made by Congress in favor of the Choctaw Nation of Indians. Congress fixed the fees of the attorneys, and the report of Mr. Carlisle, Secretary of the Treasury, shows that the sum of $913,703.75 was paid to the attorneys.

By an Act of Congress, approved August 23, 1894, approximately $3,000,000 were appropriated for the benefit of the Western Cherokee Indians and other tribes, wards of the Government. Thirty-five per cent. was reserved to pay the fees of attorneys. The Court of Claims decreed twenty-five per cent. to attorneys. Not satisfied with the amount decreed by the court, the attorneys appealed to Congress, and by an Act, approved June 7, 1897, the remaining ten per cent. of the whole was paid to the attorneys. This, too, by the same senators who, one year later, concluded that thirty-five per cent. of a much smaller claim, which probably required more time, toil, and expense, was "excessive and unreasonable."

As to private claims granted by Congress in which attorneys, as stated by Senator Morgan on the floor of the Senate, which statement was uncontradicted, even unchallenged, received fifty per cent. of the amount collected, we cite the John Roach claims for $358,311.67 allowed by Acts of Congress, approved April 9 and June 3, 1898.

On June 9, 1898, within one hour after the debate closed on the Lodge resolution to investigate the circumstances connected with the passage of the Publishing House claim, an omnibus bill to appropriate about $10,000,000 passed the Senate without division; and included in that sum were claims adjudicated by the Court of Claims amounting to $1,897,000, composed of private claims in which attorneys are reported to have had fees ranging from twenty-five to fifty per cent. of the whole.

The same bill appropriated $1,055,473.04 to pay what is known as the "French Spoliation Claims," where the attorneys' fees are reported as fifty per cent. of the whole.

Numerous other cases might be cited to show that the usual fees paid for getting claims through Congress, not so old or so stale as was the Publishing House claim, were fifty per cent. of the whole. But enough instances have been given to show that the same senators who found our fee of thirty-five per cent. to be unreasonable had themselves set the precedent of thirty-five per cent. in the case of larger and less difficult claims.

That an attorney or agent living in Washington during the session of Congress, and constantly pressing, by all legitimate means, our claim upon the attention of members, was indispensable to success, is palpable to all persons who have had experience in such matters before Congress, and in this case was emphasized by the great loss we had suffered of money vainly expended, and by the great delay to so much as a report upon the claim, which last fact had discouraged the Agents and some of the attorneys. There were few persons familiar with the history of the effort to secure compensation who had the least faith that it would ever be obtained.

If it be thought that the contingent fee agreed to be paid was so large that the attorney received substantially and relatively more than the beneficiaries, it is only necessary to remember that the same Committee of the Senate, which at last reported in favor of the payment of $288,000, had previously proposed and urged that we should be content to receive $150,000 in full satisfaction of our claim. By the contract made by the Book Committee, and successfully fulfilled, $37,200 in excess of that sum was, in the end, secured as the net result, clear of all expenses and charges, to the beneficiaries of this claim.

How, then, can it be truthfully said that the beneficiaries of the fund have been wronged by any action of the Book Committee?

The report adopted by the Senate implies that the contract made by the Book Committee was an injury to the beneficiaries of the fund. That the beneficiaries were greatly injured is not only shown by the affidavits contained in our petition for relief, but is also confessed by Congress in granting the sum of $288,000 to reimburse the church. But this injury to the beneficiaries was not an injury done those beneficiaries by the Book Committee in its efforts to collect this amount, but was an injury done by the Government of the United States. A further injury to these beneficiaries was in the long delay to pay this claim, and again, after this long delay, in the payment of a sum but little more than half the amount shown to be due by the affidavits in the hands of the Senate Committee that recommended the payment of the amount finally granted. Had Congress thirty years ago, or even at a later date, manifested a desire to protect these beneficiaries, there would have been no necessity to employ an attorney, but unfortunately for the beneficiaries this desire was not manifested in time for practical purposes. The Book Committee, so far from injuring the beneficiaries of the fund, took the steps by which those beneficiaries have recovered the portion of the fund which they have finally received.

The Senate Investigating Committee, in its report of July 8, 1898, makes an assertion which the Book Committee feels bound to controvert, believing that this assertion, if successfully maintained, is subversive of most important rights of ecclesiastical bodies, such as our Church and its General Conference and subordinate standing Boards and Committees.

This assertion is as follows: "The Committee do not agree with the contention that the Senate has no right to inquire into the subject of compensation for services rendered by their attorney to the Book Agents. The Senate was passing upon the question of a claim against the United States made by trustees, not for their personal use, but for the benefit of certain beneficiaries, and there was the same jurisdiction and right to protect the beneficiaries from excessive charges and extortion that is constantly exercised by the courts of the land when cases are being tried which affect the estates of infants and trust funds."

We venture to say, with all due appreciation of the Committee's desire to protect our beneficiaries, that no more fallacious position has ever been put forth in a public document.

The Congress of the United States, in passing on this claim, was in no view a court trying a case and protecting the interests of all parties concerned, plaintiff and defendant, adult and infant, fiduciaries and cestuis que trust; but a legislative agent of the United States, ascertaining and settling by honest payment a claim of debt against the United States. As the government is honest, so its agent is presumed to be honest, and, therefore, willing to pay a properly ascertained debt. With questions as to what the creditor may do with his money, or may have contracted to do with his money, not fraudulent in itself, or "contrary to public policy," according to well-settled law, such a body has nothing whatever to do.

The Senate Investigating Committee was evidently acting under a misapprehension as to who the creditors are to whom this claim was due. The corporate name of the publishing concern is, "The Book Agents of the M. E. Church, South." The church was thus; under its own corporate name as a publishing concern, claiming the payment of an amount due for the damage done to the substance of the Publishing House—that is, to the capital or producing investment of the concern. This being the case, the fund, when obtained, would, of necessity, take its place with the other capital of the Publishing House. Thus it clearly appears that the creditors to whom this claim was due were neither infants nor helpless objects of eleemosynary provision. They are ultimately the whole membership of the M. E. Church, South, clerical and lay, by whose means and for whose benefit their Publishing House was established and is conducted, its object being defined in the Discipline, paragraph 418, as follows: "To advance the cause of Christianity by disseminating religious knowledge and useful literary and scientific information in the form of books, tracts, and periodicals." The eleemosynary feature was from the beginning an incidental one, both in the provisions of the law of the church, and in its custom in applying that law to the distribution of the products of the House.

These "beneficiaries" have an interest in the profit of the funds used in the business of the House, and, since the vast majority of them are not "infants," and those who are having competent legally appointed guardians, the beneficiaries are well able to protect whatever interest they have, and to prevent through the proper ecclesiastical tribunals of the church and the courts of justice the waste of their property without conceding to the Congress of the United States, or either House thereof, the dangerous power of inquiring into the disposition of money by an honest creditor before making payment of his debt, and thus exercising the powers of the judicial as well as the legislative department of the government

Having submitted to our church and the public the foregoing statement, the Book Committee respectfully and earnestly suggests to all persons interested in these matters, and in the welfare of our church, that until the next session of the General Conference, when, if deemed desirable, these affairs may be passed under review by the legislative body of our church, the chief source of power and influence among us, all agitation of the subject, especially in an acrimonious and bitter spirit, shall come to an end.

NEW DOORS.

At the Brookhaven District Missionary Institute, Rev. I. L. Peebles delivered an address on "The Doors Lately Opened before Us." The following account of the address is from the pen of the secretary, Rev. J. D. Ellis:

Bro. Peebles presented in a strong and enthusiastic speech the gradual and successive opportunities of the church in foreign fields from the apostolic times, and especially its present opportunity in Cuba and Porto Rico. His speech showed a wonderful familiarity with church history. He said that it was God's plan from the beginning to open doors for the church as fast as it desired to enter. This he did until the church backslid, and in proportion as the church backslided in that proportion were doors closed against her until ensued what is known as the "dark ages." In the beginning of the nineteenth century nearly the whole world was closed against the church. Madagascar was entered in 1818, and fully opened 1861. Siam opened in 1813, and fully in 1851. Hawaii was opened in 1819, and captured for Christ in 1870. Five parts of China were opened in 1812. In 1860 access was had to the interior, and now the whole nation is open. In 1859 Japan opened a door, and in 1881 protection given to all religions. Korea, for centuries shut up to herself, opened several of her ports to Christianity in 1882, and now she cries, "Come over and help us."

The most recent opportunities of the church are Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Philippines; but for lack of means we are unable to enter any but Cuba. He said that the whole world is open save Mecca and L'hassa (Lassa). Mecca is in Arabia, and is the birth-place of Mohammed. If this place does not open its doors to the church of God, it is likely her very existence will cease, for her population has recently been reduced from 100,000 to 40,000. The doors of Lassa of Tibet are still closed. It is the place where Dalai-lama lives and is worshiped. But God will open all closed doors as soon as the church is ready to enter. He said if the church does not enter the open doors, she will backslide.

SITUATION WANTED.

A young lady desires a situation as a teacher, or governess.

Address I. H.,
Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. E. Akin, P. C.: "Assisted by Bro. G. D. Anders, of Columbia, I held a six days' meeting at Pollock, which resulted in some conversions, a number reclaimed, the membership greatly revived, and ten accessions to the church. Bro. Anders' preaching was heart-searching, and the results will be substantial. This makes eighteen added to the membership of the church during the year, and we are praying and working for a revival all along the line during the year."

Rev. Roht. L. Phillips, Porterville, May 22, 1899: "We closed an eleven days' meeting with Bro. Crossley at Marion, May 9. There were two accessions to the church. Several young ladies trusted Christ for salvation. Miss Bennie Erwin received a happy witness to her conversion. Miss Allie Brogan, the talented daughter of the sainted Brogan, of the Mississippi Conference, was 'perfected in love.' Oh, what a happy face! Many others blessed in the meeting. The Baptist pastor, Bro. Lowry, kindly recalled his appointment on the second Sabbath, he and his people worshiping with us. There was no war with denominations or authorities in this meeting. 'Perfect love' 'doth not behave itself unseemly.' Glory to God for a love and joy which make all the avenues to the soul windows of heaven. Bro. Crossley is nobly serving a noble people."

Rev. R. L. Wohh, McLauria, Miss., May 23, 1899: "The second Quarterly Conference on Galloway circuit was held at Brooklyn, Miss., on the sixth instant. Bro. W. W. Simmons, our beloved presiding elder, was with us, and magnified his office, preaching for us Saturday and Sunday. Bro. Simmons is indeed 'a soul-winner,' and has endeared himself to all who know him. Following Quarterly Conference we had a few days' protracted meeting. Bro. Geo. P. McKeown was with us, and did the preaching. It was a feast of good things, and while there were no conversions, we believe that a good work has been accomplished in the hearts of God's people, and are confidently expecting to gather much fruit as a result of that sowing. We are sorry to report the death of the infant son of Bro. and Sister A. P. Courtney, near Brooklyn, on the tenth instant. May the Holy Ghost comfort their broken hearts!"

Rev. W. B. Van Valkenburgh, Atlanta, La., May 21, 1899: "We have just held a most delightful Children's Day service at this place, using the programmes entire as prepared by our Publishing House, with a few choice supplementary selections. The occasion proved to be a most delightful one. The children and young people assigned recitations performed their respective parts most admirably. Special mention is due to Mrs. Geo. C. Lewis, who, without stint, devoted her time to the young people in practice and drill-work, and for her part rendered us at the organ. The congregation was representative in character; the Baptists and Methodists on the programme, and preparing dinner, mingling together, and assisting each the other as members of one common family. The Baptist pastor was also on hand, honoring us with his presence, and encouraging and endorsing our service in many ways. Collection, including cost of programmes, $3.65. The first Children's Day ever observed here. The superintendent had it announced as an ever-hereafter-to-be-observed day and service. I feel that real good will result. To God be the glory. Amen."

Rev. P. H. Howse, P. C., Coffeeville, Miss., May 17, 1899: "We reached our field of labor Jan. 13, and was kindly received at the parsonage, Jan. 14, by some of the faithful people of this (the Neshoba) charge. Since that time we have had a variety of experiences—some cold, some hot, some joyful, some sad; but God was with us all the way. Another preacher was born to us in February, but has not, so far, proven to be a family affliction. The people have been thoughtful of us, and we have enjoyed many kindnesses at their hands. My wife lay very near death's door for several days, but was kindly nursed by the precious good women of this charge, who will always hold a sacred place in our memory. Our Quarterly Conference is chronicled with past events. Our presiding elder was with us, and as happy as a sunflower. He did his work manly and Christianly. There was nothing covered or on the sly; no equivocating, but openly and decently. He preached us two awakening sermons. I believe that if his health holds out (which it seems to bid fair to do), he will instill new life into the district by the assistance of the Holy Ghost and his co-laborers. This charge is doing very well. The people are cheerful and the pastor busy."

RESOLUTIONS.

The members of the M. E. Church residing in the vicinity of the Low Creek School-house met here to-day for the purpose of organizing a society of Methodists. Rev. I. S. Few in the chair; Robt. F. Bedingfield, secretary.

The following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, We do hold to the teaching, tenets of the M. E. Church, and in the past have been as sheep without a shepherd until Rev. I. S. Few, M. D., D. D., came into ("as God sent") our midst and called us together with goodly words and godly counsel, and exhorted us to unite and re-enlist under the banner of the cross, we do hear his voice and give heed unto his counsel; be it hereby

Resolved, That we this day, with God's help, organize a church under the name of Henlah.

Resolved, That we hereby petition to the Louisiana Conference of the M. E. Church, South, that our society be admitted into its fold, and be incorporated into whatever circuit the wisdom of Conference may see fit. The chairman, Dr. Few, then suggested that a Sunday-school should be organized, which was immediately done. He then appointed Robt. F. Bedingfield, superintendent; William Peasson, secretary; Miss Bettie Bedingfield, treasurer; Charley Miller, teacher senior class; Mrs. Minnie Bruce, teacher of junior class; Mrs. Mary Cox, teacher of juvenile class.

Resolved, That Dr. Few is requested to remain in charge of our society until Conference shall have made other arrangement.

Resolved, That a copy of these proceedings shall be forwarded the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and one to Rev. J. T. Sawyer, P. E., Shreveport district, and request that he take charge of our petition before the next Annual Conference of the Louisiana Conference of M. E. Church, South.

LEHRTON CHURCH.

We, "the Lehrton Church," held a Church Conference yesterday and revised our roll. The results were very gratifying indeed. (This is the first time the roll was ever revised.) Out of 151 members we only eliminated three, leaving 148 members in good standing.

After the Church Conference we discussed the advisability of moving our church and parsonage, as had been previously announced. We had some speeches, after which the vote was taken. The vote stood: For moving, 19; against, 6 (8 cast against, but 2 illegal ones). Some did not vote at all, though they were in favor of the move. There is, of course, some dissatisfaction.

The present site of church and parsonage is very inconvenient to the preacher in charge and family. We are more than half a mile from the "little village of Ruleville," and we belong to the paper-sack brigade, and it's not very pleasant to have to catch our horse and ride to town (wet or dry) for five cents worth of soda or salt.

In our speech we tried to show the dear ones the hardships, but "they were set in their ways," and could not see through our speeches. But we are going to meet to-morrow to complete arrangements to start to moving our church to a convenient location. Messrs. Rules have donated a nice lot for the church. I am sure the move will be greatly advantageous.

Our District Conference is almost on us. I am utilizing many of the nights now trying to get ready for my examinations. We had so much sickness through the Winter that I get very badly behind with my studies; then my work is very heavy. I have six appointments, and that keeps me a-stirring. My wife has been out at Starkville sick for sixty-five days. Of course, this is a great hardship on me.

Our "Children's Day" exercises will be late, but I think they will be very interesting. The little fellows seem to be very enthusiastic, and the prospects are flattering. We have some very godly men for Sunday-school superintendents.

On the whole, my work is progressing nicely now.

I feel like Bro. E. P. Nasbet, a fellow school-mate and preacher who lives in Texas. Writing me some time ago, he said: "I got the 'dear old ADVOCATE' (through papa's kindness). I enjoy the contents very much, especially 'From the Work.'" Then adds: "I wish more of the old Millsaps boys would write, so I could keep up with them." "Ditto."

J. W. MCGEE.

"What Headaches Mean."

The dreadful headaches which women suffer mean nineteen times out of twenty that there is more trouble than headache.

There is probably some unhealthy condition of the delicate organism of womanhood and often added to this the digestive functions are out of order; these two conditions cause nearly all the headaches from which women suffer.

There are two great remedies specially adapted to these ailments invented by the chief consulting physician of the famous Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y., Dr. R. V. Pierce. His world-renowned "Favorite Prescription" is the most successful medicine ever known for the cure of distinctly feminine ailments and his "Golden Medical Discovery" is the one supremely effective cure for digestive difficulties.

Taken in conjunction they completely rejuvenate the nervous system of weak and debilitated women; giving health, strength and capacity to the nerve-centers; renewed power to the blood-making glands and energetic force to the entire body.

A lady living in Coshocton Co., Ohio, Mrs. W. T. Stanton, of Blissfield, writes: "I had female weakness very bad for nearly three years. Had dragging down pains in and above my hips and such dreadful pains in the back and top of my head (just as though someone was lifting me by the hair). Had no ambition, would try to work a few days then would have to lie in bed for a long time. No tongue can express the suffering I endured. I had much pain at monthly periods. I doctored most of the time with as good a physician as there is in the state, but had no ease only when I was quiet and off my feet and then I had more or less pain in my head. When I began taking Dr. Pierce's medicines I weighed 102 pounds, and was very pale and weak. I took twelve bottles of the 'Favorite Prescription' and seven of the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' Now I feel like a different person. Have no pain in my head, can do all my work for self, husband and one child, am gaining in flesh. I feel it is through God's mercy and your wonderful medicines that I am cured."

Where constipated conditions exist Dr. Pierce's mild and agreeable "Pleasant Pellets" should be occasionally used in connection with the "Prescription."

Best Edition of the World's Best Books

—THE—

"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangment for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

Faith is to believe what we do not see, and the reward of this faith is to see what we believe.—St. Augustine.

Good books, like good friends, are few and chosen; the more select, the more enjoyable.—A. Bronson Alcott.

A man who has in his pocket the Proverbs of Solomon has more brains in his pocket than the world generally have in their heads.—H. W. Beecher.

Any man can sing by day; but only he whose heart has been tuned by the gracious hand of Jehovah can sing in the darkness.—William M. Taylor, D. D.

No man gets a proper view of life who closes his eyes to the fact that this world is only a training-school for the world that is to come.—Baltimore Advocate.

When maligned and persecuted unjustly, do not imagine that you are forsaken of God; be brave and firm, remember that they called the master of the house Beelzebub.—Baltimore Advocate.

Were you to get a kingdom or twenty kingdoms, it were but a pitiful trifle compared with this, whether you walked as God commands you, and you did your duty to God and to all men.—Carlyle.

He who in poverty, or sickness, or solitude, can preserve a merry heart and a cheerful countenance is a benefactor to society, a testimony to his God, and the best of all possible friends to himself.—Bishop Thorold.

Speak well of everyone. If you can not, then speak no ill. Silence there is golden. This does not mean that no criticisms are permissable, but never say of others what you would not be willing to say to them or in their presence.—Exchange.

Yes, things are hard sometimes. And we must live on and bear God's will. Because he makes a plan for us and there will be always something coming, we can't tell, day by day, what may be; only he never forgets us or leaves anything out.—A. D. T. Whitney.

All that you and I are responsible for is doing our duty. Ours is the seeding, and God alone beholds the end of what is sown. How do we know how much good we accomplish when we do any good thing or utter any truth in love? Eternity will be full of surprises to us. Wait and see.—Theodore L. Cuyler.

There is not much gain in thinking about the things over which one can have no control. It is better to leave them prayerfully with God. The man who tries to think of such things worries. He is worried about his health and about the weather and about his family and about the wickedness of the world until he has learned the lesson of prayer. Then he does the best he can each day and leaves the rest with God.—Sunday-School Times.

OUR EDUCATIONAL MOVEMENT—THE WHY OF IT.

Educational enthusiasm is one of the chief characteristics of the times. All over the land there are unmistakable evidences of deep interest in and genuine appreciation of culture. In fact, education has become one of the hobbies of the American people, and a most excellent hobby it is, provided it be ridden in the right direction.

It needs to be remembered, however, that not every kind of education is an unmixed blessing to the individual and to society. Culture is not a cure-all either for vice or for poverty. Refinement and improved environment have never proved effectual remedies for moral corruption. Though, in the age of Pericles, Greek literature and art reached their highest development, the whole social fabric of Athens was honeycombed with iniquity. Intellectual culture, unaccompanied by the restraints of a pure religion, finds its logical expression in characters like Voltaire, Rousseau, and Aaron Burr, who, though keen in intellect and learned in worldly wisdom, were moral lepers and sowers of discord. Education is not complete unless it includes the spiritual nature as well as the mind and body. All other education produces lop-sided development, and is apt to lead to pernicious effects. Intelligence does not imply self-mastery, or freedom from the dominion of vice and immorality. It is every day becoming more apparent that nothing short of the best Christian education can be depended on for the building up of noble character and a pure and safe citizenship. While a thorough education wonderfully increases a man's capacity for usefulness, it also increases correspondingly his capacity for evil.

Some say it matters not where youth are educated, provided they receive thorough instruction. One might as well say it matters not where we get water, provided the supply be ample. But, as every one knows, many sources of water supply are impure and unwholesome. Likewise the fountains of instruction are sometimes poisoned.

Since the State can not consistently teach religion or adequately emphasize its importance, the church would make a grievous mistake were she to leave the work of education entirely to State and secular enterprise. The time spent by a boy or a girl in college is usually the most critical in the formation of character, the final impress, so to speak, being then imparted. Hence, it is of momentous importance that during this period the student should be surrounded by the best possible influences, and have before him the noblest ideals.

Christianity has from the first been engaged in educational work, and has constantly sought to train her converts both in mind and soul for future usefulness. The great revival and reform movements that have purified the church, and saved Christianity from becoming an effete and forceless religion, have almost, without exception, originated in institutions of learning.

Though a trite statement, it is nevertheless significant, that Methodism was born in a university, and was cradled in the lap of learning. Our church has, from her very infancy, been an ardent promoter of intelligence, and a fosterer of schools and colleges. John Wesley was a pioneer in the field of popular education. He let no opportunity slip for the establishment of schools. That wonderful man was far-sighted enough to perceive that evangelization must be accompanied by education, or fail in the best results.

It is not enough for the church to seek to evangelize the world; she must also train those who come within her pales, and prepare them for service. She must seek the best means, not only of spreading the gospel, but also of perpetuating the powers and benefits of Christianity. In no other way can she do this than by establishing and maintaining schools and colleges in which youth shall be trained, as Bishop Galloway puts it, "for life and for eternal life." Colleges are recognized as strategic centers of culture and influence. Hence, if the stream of young life that flows from them can be trained into right channels, who can measure the benefits to society? The church that most adequately provides for the intellectual and religious training of youth is destined to become the most influential and expansive. Who is so unwise as to question that consecrated intelligence is more acceptable to God and serviceable to humanity than consecrated ignorance?

The majority of the missionaries who evangelized the South Sea Islands were college men, and the same may be said of the majority of those who to-day are carrying the gospel to the uttermost parts of the earth. The various Mission Boards have long since found it expedient to send the best-trained men and women to the most degraded and benighted peoples.

It is related of that famous missionary, Dr. Judson, that one day, as he approached Madison University, he said, "If I had a thousand dollars, do you know what I would do with it?" The person asked supposed he would give it to foreign missions. He replied, "I would put it into an institution like that," pointing to the college. "Planting colleges" (he meant Christian colleges) "is planting seed-corn for the world."

It is because Methodism believes with all her heart the truth just stated that she is endeavoring, during the closing years of this century, to strengthen and enlarge her educational machinery. The leaders of our Zion are deeply convinced that an advance in this direction will result in greater good to the church, and be more far-reaching in its results, than the fortifying of any other of our forces. In view of the rapid advance of general intelligence and the constantly increasing demand for an educated ministry, both in the home and the foreign field, it would simply be suicidal for us to allow our denominational schools to languish. We need to bestir ourselves at once.

With two or three exceptions, our female colleges are all unendowed, and our male colleges are nearly all seriously hampered for lack of funds. The hour has arrived for us to give them adequate equipment, or bring reproach upon ourselves. If we are to continue to educate, let us do our best; otherwise, let us retire from the business. The hour has passed when superficial work will pass muster.

WHO WILL WEAR THIS CROWN?

There is not a Methodist Church building on the Island of Cuba. There is not, so far as I know, a Protestant Church building.

The Baptists, who are the most numerous Protestant body on the island, have their largest congregation (that at Havana) housed in an old theatre.

Our missionaries are preaching in chapels provided by adapting the parlors of houses built for residences, which we rent. In those inconvenient and temporary quarters they are having remarkable success. Already, before most of them have worked as long as six months, their quarters have overflowed. If their work is to succeed, they must have proper places of worship. They confront a Romanism intrenched in splendid houses built by the treasury of the State.

We need at once a suitable place of worship in Havana, the capital and commercial metropolis of the island. There dwell 200,000 people—at least one-seventh of all the population of Cuba. In that great city there is not a Protestant Church building! Think of that. I can buy a suitable property near the centre of the city now for $30,000. At that figure it is very cheap. The property of the Baptists, not so well located, cost, I am told, $35,000. The chance to buy this property may slip out of my hands any day. I have not had the money to secure an option on it. The Board of Church Extension and the Board of Missions have authorised me to raise the money and buy it. Neither Board's treasury was in condition to supply the money. I make this statement, appealing to all who love the Lord Jesus, and who care for the needs of this unhappy island, to help in this great emergency.

A brother beloved starts me with a subscription of $500. Who will join him? Are there not a hundred persons in all our Southern Methodism who can give each $500 to buy this ground and put upon it a commodious church, a good school building, and a parsonage? It is large enough for all these, and the buildings now on it would supply material for at least two of the buildings desired.

Oh, that some man or woman would come forward and build the first Protestant Church in Cuba! What a monument it would be!

Sir Christopher Wren is immortalized by St. Paul's, London, the inscription upon it being, "If ye seek my monument, look around you." Not less honored will be the man who erects the first Protestant Church in Cuba. Who will wear this crown? W. A. CANDLER.

[The above appeal from Bishop Candler ought to meet with a hearty response throughout the church. Here is a magnificent opportunity for Southern Methodists to honor the Lord with their substance. A little judicious sowing in that field will ensure a bountiful harvest in the near future.]

BRO. PHILLIPS' FUNERAL.

The remains of Bro. B. F. Phillips, who died at Ocean Springs, Miss., Wednesday, May 17, were shipped to Shannon, Miss., Thursday, the eighteenth, and the funeral was preached by Bro. K. A. Jones, of Okolona, Friday, 10 A. M., from Eph. iii, 15. Bro. Anderson, of Verona, and this scribe also participated in these sad rites. Besides the above-named, Bros. J. T. Cunningham and H. M. Young were present.

That Bro. Phillips was much beloved by the people of Shannon, irrespective of denomination, was evident from the vast congregation assembled, and the many sad faces and tear-dimmed eyes present.

After the funeral services the Masons present took charge of the remains, and conveyed them to the cemetery, where they were interred with masonic honors.

The grave was almost covered with floral offerings carried by loving hands as tokens of respect and appreciation. As the last flower was laid upon the new-made mound the benediction was pronounced by Bro. Jones.

We tender our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved wife and sorrowing sons, and pray the God of all grace to comfort their hearts.

S. B. MYERS.

ATTENDANCE ON THE SERVICES OF THE CHURCH.

Every member of the Methodist Church promised at her altar to attend the ordinances of the church, yet how many never think of it again. Some may run well for a season, then get cold or lukewarm. They satisfy their conscience by one service a day or one a month, and as to the mid-week service, they never even think of the prayer meeting. What kind of Christians do such church members call themselves, and what kind are they in God's sight?

Will you be made "ruler over many cities," or will the sentence be, "Depart; I never knew you!" It is the duty of the members of the church to attend the Sunday services, morning and night, and to be in their places at the prayer meeting. If you really want to go, you will go. If you do not want to go, Satan will help you to an excuse. Did it ever occur to you that while you professed to be the servants of Christ that you were really in partnership with Satan? That you are not living as Christ would have you do, but as Satan suggests? The Holy Spirit never suggests a turning away from duty; the evil spirit does, and every time you stay away voluntarily from the services of the church you are following the leadings of the evil spirit. You may think you are not well enough to go, as the weather is too inclement, and you may deceive your pastor in this way, but you can not deceive God. He knows that you do not go because you do not want to go. When the day of reckoning comes, what will you say? What use has God for church members who have no heart for the services of his house or no love for the preached word? What does the dear Lord think of you, and what interest have you in the blood that was shed on Calvary? This is a vital question and one you will have to answer at the bar of God.

A sister who thus neglected her church duties lay on her death-bed. Her many lost opportunities rose like specters to torture her soul, and as she cried out her pastor tried to comfort her, but all in vain, for her conscience goaded her to desperation. She had a beautiful voice, but she had persistently refused to sing in the church. She had declined to do church work, she had studiously absented herself from the services of the church, she had a name to live, yet was dead. Her cry was, "Spare me a little longer that I may give my life to the service of God," but the fiat had gone forth, "Cut the barren fig tree down," and thus she went into the presence of her Maker. May God help you to see where you stand before it is eternally too late!—Central Methodist.

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

Ian Maclaren, who has done very little literary work for some months, has just written for The Saturday Evening Post, of Philadelphia, an important series of four short stories, under the general title, "A Scots Grammar School," the first of which will appear in the issue of June 3.

The June Ladies' Home Journal opens with a page drawing of Longfellow's "Evangeline," and gives a group of pictures showing some "Fetes of College Girls." An interesting description is given of "The Creole Girl of New Orleans," and "Housekeeping on an Ocean Steamship" is graphically portrayed. "How a Young Man Can Work His Way Through College" has a practical value for every poor boy ambitions for higher education, and "Telling the Character from Handwriting" is interesting and entertaining. Bishop, priest, rabbi and minister contribute to a symposium on "What Is the Good of Going to Church?" and the Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis, D. D., discusses "Pains that Polish Perfection."

In McClure's Magazine, for June, appears a description of Marconi's wireless telegraph. The article is written with the assistance of Mr. Marconi himself, by Mr. Cleveland Moffett, who himself sent and received messages by the wireless telegraph across the English Channel. Another interesting and valuable article in this number is an account of negotiations between Admiral Dewey and the Spanish commanders that led to the final surrender of Manila practically without any fighting between the land forces. A graphic account of the strange life of the miners who work a mile out under the sea off the coast of Cornwall, reminiscences and anecdotes of "Lincoln and the Soldiers," and a dramatic description of "Paul Jones' Greatest Fight," by the Rev. C. T. Brady, are other attractive features of the number.

In Self-Culture, for June, the opening paper, on Harvard University, contains several fine portraits of members of the faculty whose names are linked with the extraordinary recent growth of that ancient institution of learning. Rear-Admiral Roe, in an article entitled "The Unrest of the Nations," reviews the powers of the world, and points out the tendencies to unrest among their peoples, together with the causes of those tendencies. A sketch of the life and work of Honore de Balzac shows the great novelist at work, and tells of his early struggles for fame and fortune.

Some interesting private letters of Dr. O. W. Holmes, and personal reminiscences of that amiable anatomist and litterateur, are given by Dr. George Stewart. Dr. Marcus Benjamin presents a description of the Smithsonian Institution, and Mr. Hezekiah Butterworth describes the country of our Pilgrim forefathers under the title, "A Legend-Haunted Summer Land."

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE, FOR JUNE.

William Allen White, the Kansas editor, whose "Boyville Stories" are so well known, writes a tale of Western political life with which his editorial duties have brought him in close contact. He calls it "A Victory for the People," and gives the inside history of the appointment of a United States senator by the governor.

Another story by a new writer is, "A Burial by Friendless Post," by Robert Shackleton, a New York journalist, who has made a particular study of the strange life on Blackwell's Island.

Henry James contributes a short story in the field in which he won his first successes—a character study of Boston people of the most pronounced New England characteristics.

Scribner's most remarkable serial is brought to a close in this number where Governor Roosevelt, under the title of "The Return Home," gives the final scenes in the life of the most famous regiment of recent times.

Sidney Lanier's poetical music impressions are concluded in this number.

MR. EDITOR: Your editorial, "Push the Sunday-school," is timely and suggestive. It ought to do good.

I am just home from a week's service on Montpelier circuit, during which time I preached seven sermons at five different places, made Sunday-school talks, took subscriptions for church papers, sold a goodly number of books, and had a pleasant and religious time, generally, with those good people. Bro. Raper is serving his third year on that work. He is in good favor with the people, and doing effective service.

I enjoyed one day in the parsonage at Houston with Bro. Ball and family. He reports encouragingly of his work.

Bro. Bowen is assisting in a meeting in Greenwood this week.

I go to District Conference at Holloudale next week.

The following will be read with interest by the numerous friends of Bro. Randolph:

MR. EDITOR: We are now aboard the U. S. transport "Sherman," and in two or three hours we will start for the Philippines. I write to say good-bye, and to ask to be remembered by the brethren of Mississippi. I will miss the State League Conference, and probably our Annual Conference. This I much regret. The Lord is blessing our work with the Sixth. More than a score of the men have professed conversion, and we have organized a Y. M. C. A. of nearly 200 charter members. I have purchased an organ and hymn books, and will hold daily services on the way to Manila. We have about 1,500 men on the transport, and quite a number of officers, including Gen. Fred. D. Grant and Gen. Bates. With much love for you personally, and all the brethren, I say, Good-bye.

MANSFIELD COLLEGE.

I spent last week in Mansfield assisting Bro. Sheppard, the pastor, in protracted revival services. It was my fortune to be entertained for one night, and to spend some hours of day, in the only female college under the control of the Louisiana Conference.

To say that I was favorably impressed expresses it mildly. The department of the girls in the institution speaks volumes in favor of the excellent, careful, and discriminating control exercised by Professor and Mrs. Sligh over their pupils.

The recitation I heard was good, and the methods of teaching up to date. The curriculum equals and even surpasses some more pretentious colleges. The fact is, this school depends upon real work; some others upon the name and fashion and expense, which are about the only things they have to commend the institutions to the people.

An afternoon joint-meeting of the two literary societies, in which they presented an improvised program in splendid style, showed the talent as well as the culture in literary grace and musical sweetness and melody, of the daughters of Louisiana, who have the privilege of attending this college in the hills of DeSoto parish.

The best feature of all is the religious atmosphere that prevails. In the recent revival a number of the pupils were converted and brought into the church. The management insist on this feature of success with the emphasis which it demands. The health of the location of this college is apparent at a glance. Mansfield is said to be the highest town in the State. The ozonic atmosphere of these piney heights is surely conducive to health.

The cost is moderate. No institution in the South offers so much for so little expense. People of Louisiana, rally to your female college, and give it the patronage you need, and the progress our work demands. Education pays tenfold in this life, and education in a Christian college pays in the life to come.

Don't put your boy under the control of the State; the State can not teach religion; religion is the only safe basis of a sound morality. Can you afford to do less for your girls than for your boys? Send the fair ones to Mansfield! Send your boys to Centenary! C. P. SMITH.

Collections from Children's Day are being reported. We want the name of every Sunday-school that observes the day; so, when reporting, please give the name of the school as well as the name of the charge which it is on. We want to give every school credit in the Year Book for the amount it raises. The book will go to the press the first week in July; therefore, every school should report at once after the day is observed.

Send money to W. T. Griffin, of Mayersville, Miss. He will forward to Thomas Monnt, treasnrer. Bro. Mount is temporarily located in New Orleans, and is liable to be removed to Vicksburg at any time; so, to prevent confusion, send money to Bro. Griffin, and he will turn same over to Bro. Mount.

A GREAT MEETING.

MR EDITOR: We have just closed a meeting of great power at Antlers, I. T. Twenty-five additions to our church, many conversions in and out of the church; also at the close of the meeting an Epworth League was organized by Bro. Mitchell, the pastor, and a heavy storm at the parsonage in the way of a ponnding. I thank God for success in loading souls to the blessed Christ. I am en route home now. W. D. BASS.

MISSIONS.

MR. EDITOR: The second round of Quarterly Conferences is nearly over, and yet I am without missionary bulletins from several of the presiding elders of the Mississippi Conference for the first quarter.

E H. Mounger, P. E, Vicksburg district, reported as follows: Vicksburg, Crawford Street, foreign missions, $27 60; South Vicksburg, foreign missions, $3 55; Port Gibson, foreign missions, $4; Flora, foreign missions, $9; Satartia, foreign missions, $10, and domestic missions, $6; Mayersville, $5 for foreign and $2.50 for domestic missions.

C. G. Andrews, P. E., Meridian district, reported: Lauderdale, $12; Daleville, $3; Wayne mission, $0.49; Shubuta, $51.85; West End, $1 63, all for foreign missions.

T. L. Mellen, P. E., Forest district: Decatur, $14 50; Newton and Hickory, $13 for foreign missions; and 58 subscribers to the Review of Missions—including every preacher in charge and every supply in the district.

Of course, further collections were made in some of the charges after the holding of the first Quarterly Conferences and before the completion of the rounds; these will appear in the bulletins for the second rounds now drawing rapidly to a close.

The largest number of subscribers to The Review of Missions in Mississippi is at West Point; and the largest list of subscribers in the Mississippi Conference is at Meridian (East End having "the lion's share"), and the next at Gloster, with Canton for the third. T. L. MELLEN,

FROM BRO. POE.

I wish to tell my friends that I have about fully recovered, and am now able to be about "my Father's business."

All the brethren and friends who prayed for me, and in any way sympathized with me, have my sincere gratitude. My recovery was unusual, and, I think, in answer to prayer. I surely passed through the valley of the shadow of death. For twenty-four hours my feet were laved in the turbid waters of "chilly Jordan," and in a few days after my recovery was despaired of. The fever left me and never returned. My strength in seeming supernatural power came to me. Since that time I have been constantly improving. My people were very kind to me. I will never forget them. I no longer fear nor dread death. Faith in God takes away all of its sting. My suffering has been a blessing to me, and I thank God for it.

ATTENTION, MISSISSIPPI LEAGUERS!

The five-cent assessment for carrying on the State League work is now due, and should be sent to our State treasurer, Miss Vio Thompson, Tupelo, Miss., at the earliest day possible. The State officers are entirely dependent upon this assessment for means to meet the necessary expenses of our coming State Conference, so the importance of paying it promptly is manifest. SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR PANORAMA is one of the war books which is likely to be in continuous demand. It is a panoramic record of the triumph of Yankee Doodle. The eagle flaps his wings on every page, and "Old Glory" waves around and above every scene. Prominent officers connected with the war are here portrayed, as well as many of the "men behind the guns." Military life is pictured to the eye, from recruiting to guard mount and skirmish line. Nor is the ludicrous omitted. The company cook receives the attention due to his importance; the mess is shown; cavalry scenes are given; the hospital arrangements are depicted; the heroines of the Red Cross service are displayed; street scenes in Havana, Santiago and elsewhere are unrolled, the new citizens or subjects (which are they?) of Uncle Sam appear and disappear as the leaves are turned.

In a word, the gazer visits the new localities and sees the tumultuous new life, without the risk or expense of a sea voyage.

The Album is 5½x8 inches, weighs 12 ounces, printed on finest coated paper.

SOCRATES died from a cup of poison administered by the hand of a friend. How many in this land have died by poisonous remedies given by friendly hands to combat diseases? It is quite a comfort to know that when giving DICKS' CHILLIFUGE there is not a drop of poison in a bottle full of this beneficent remedy.

AT BEDTIME.

When my good nights and prayers are said,
And I am warm tncked up in bed,
I knew my guardian angel stands
And holds my head between his hands.

I can not see his gown of light,
Because I keep my eyes shut tight;
For if I open them, I knew
My pretty angel has to go.

But while my eyes are shut I hear
His white winge rustling very near;
I know it is his darling wings,
Not mother folding up my things.

FRANCES WILLARD'S COUNSEL TO GIRLS.

Miss Willard was constantly impressing it npon her hearers and readers that every woman, rich or poor, married or unmarried, shonld cultivate individnality and independence. One of the most characteristic chapters in her breezy, helpful book for girls, How to Win, is the one in which she urges every young reader to cultivate a specialty. "By this means," she writes, "you will get into your cranium, in place of aimless reverie, a resolute aim." And she goes on to say:

This is where your brother has had his chief intellectual advantage over you. Quicker of wit than he, far less unwieldy in your mental processes, swifter in judgment, and every whit as accurate, you still have felt, when measuring intellectual swords with him, that yours was in your left hand, that his was in his right; and yon have felt this chiefly, as I believe, because from the dawn of thought in his sturdy young brain he has been taught that he must have a definite aim in life if he ever meant to swell the ranks of the somebodies upon this planet, while you have been just as sednlously tanght that the handsome prince might whirl past your door "'most any day," lift you to a seat beside him in his golden chariot, and carry yon off to his castle in Spain.

And, of course, you dream abont all this; why shouldn't you? Who wouldn't? But, my dear girls, dreaming is the poorest of all grindstones on which to sharpen one's wits. And to my thinking the rust of woman's intellect, the canker of her heart, the "worm i' the bud" of her noblest possibilities has been this aimless reverie; this rambling of the thoughts; this vagueness, which, when it is finished, is vacuity. Let us turn our gaze inward, those of us who are not thoronghgoing workers with brain or hand. What do we find? A mild chaos, a glimmering nebnla of fancies, an insipid brain soup, where a few lnmps of thought swim in a watery gravy of dreams, and, as nothing can come of nothing, what wonder if no brilliancy of achievement promises to flood our future with its light? Few women, growing up nnder the present order of things, can claim complete exemption from this grave intellectual infirmity.

Somehow one falls so readily into a sort of mental indolence; one's thonghts flow onward in a pleasant, gurgling stream, a sort of intellectnal lnllaby, coming no-whence, going no-whither. Only one thing can help yon if you are in this extremity, and that is what your brothers have—the snag of a fixed pnrpose in this stream of thought. Around it will soon cluster the dormant ideas, hopes and possibilities that have thns far floated at random. The first one in the idle stream of my life was the purpose, lodged there by my life's best friend, my mother, to have an education. Then, later on, Charlotte Bronte's Shirley was a tremendous snag in the stream to me. Around that brave and steadfast character clustered a thousand new resolves. I was never quite so steeped in reveries again, though my temptations were nnusual, my "Forest Home" by a Wisconsiu river offering few reminders to my girlish thonght of the wide, wide world and its sore need of workers.

The next jog that I got was from the intellectnal attrition of a gifted and scholarly woman who asked me ofteu to her home, and sent me away laden with volumes of Wadsworth, Niebuhr, and the British essayists, not forgetting Carlyle and Emerson. Margaret Fuller Ossoli was another fixed point—shall I not rather say a fixed star?—in the sky of my thonght, while Arnold of Rugby, to one who meant to make teaching a profession, was chief of all. Well, is it possible that any word I have here written about a definite object iu life toward which heuceforth you may bend a steady gaze? I am not speaking of a thorough intellectnal training only. It is to the life-work, which only a lifetime can fully compass, that I would direct your thoughts.—United Presbyterian.

SERVED THEM RIGHT.

In a neighboring county there is a church whose pastor is not only learned and eloquent, but he is also a gentleman of stalwart proportions. He is usually meek, bnt at times his "Irish gets up," and he shows that, along with his meekness, he possesses a certain amonnt of nerve.

A few evenings ago, at one of his services, two tough young men created a disturbance by langhing and talking aloud. They scoffed at all the preacher said. At length the preacher's patience became exhansted and he remonstrated with the two smart alecks.

"Why came you to this house of worship?" inquired the preacher.

With a loud laugh one of the fellows replied: "We want to see a miracle, and came expecting to see one performed."

The minister made no reply. Stepping down from the pulpit, he walked to where the two young men were sitting. Seizing one after the other, he proceeded with them to the door. Then his strength came in play, and he threw the two ruffians into a snow-bank several feet from the door. And as they struck the snow they heard these words from the preacher's lips: "No, young men, we do not perform miracles here, bnt you are probably aware by this time that we 'cast ont devils.'"

And resuming his place in the pulpit, the preacher finished his discourse.—Exchange.

"LOVE YOUR ENEMIES."

Dnring the Revolutionary war a Dunker leader named Miller was grievously insulted by a man named Widman, who was afterward sentenced to be hanged as a British spy. Miller went to General Washington and begged for Widman's life. The commander-in-chief replied:

"I would like to release Widman becanse he is your friend; but I can not, even for that consideration."

"Friend!" cried Miller, "he is not my friend; he is only my enemy, and, therefore, I want to save him."

The general was so touched that he pardoned the man.—Christian Leader.

An exchange reports the following: "Why did yon strike little Elsie, yon nanghty boy?" "Well, what did she want to cheat for?" "How did she cheat?" "Why, we were playing at Adam and Eve, and she had the apple to tempt me with, and she never tempted me, but went and ate it all up herself."

AS A MATHEMATICIAN.

Although Mr. Gladstone became the greatest chancellor of the exchequer England has ever had, when he was at Oxford University he wrote home, saying that he didn't care for mathematics, and intended to concentrate his attention upon classics. His father wrote back that his son's decision grieved him. He did not think a man was a man nnless he knew mathematics. Mr. Gladstone, on receiving this intimation of his father's wishes, abandoned his own plan, and applied himself with his nsual concentration to the stndy of mathematics. Much to his snrprise, he came ont donble first. He often said in after life that he had done it to please his father, and that he would never have been chancellor of the exchequer had it not been for the bent given to his mind by his compliance with his father's wish that he shonld pnrsue mathematical studies.—Northwesteru Advocate.

A BEAUTIFUL TRIBUTE.

Attending the funeral of a dear friend the other day, her pastor, speaking of her who had gone, said: "In all the years of my acquaintance with her I have never known her to speak nnkindly of anyone, or have I ever heard anyone speak unkindly of her. When others were censorious, this dear woman always found an excuse, saying, 'I think they could not have understood; I am sure they did not mean to do wrong.' Although always an invalid, she kept her own weakness in the background, never talking abont it, always interested and anxious to help others, always going to those in sorrow, carrying them comfort." It seemed to me that no tribnte could be more beautiful than this.—Christian Intelligencer.

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT,

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living.

METHOD OF READING.

Mr. Gladstone nsnally had three books he was reading at the same time, and changed from one to the other, when his mind had reached the limit of absorption. When he read a book he did so pencil in hand, marking off on the margin those passages which he wished to remember, querying those about which he was in donbt, and putting a cross opposite those which he disputed. At the end of a volume he constructed a kind of index of his own which enabled him to refer to those things he wished to remember in the book.—Selected.

Let us not climb the high wall till we get to it, or fight the battle till it opens, or shed tears over sorrows that may never come, or lose the joys and blessings that we have, by the sinful fear that God will take them away from us. We need all our strength and all the grace God can give us for to-day's bnrdens and to-day's battle. To-morrow belongs to our heavenly Father; I would not know its secrets if I could. It is far better to know whom we trnst, and that he is able to keep all we commit to him until the last great day.—T. L. Cuyler, D. D.

Let us do our duty and pray that we may do our duty here, now, to-day—not in dreamy sweetness, but in active energy; not in the green oasis of the future, but in the dusty desert of the present; not in the imaginations of otherwhere, but in the realities of now.—F. W. Farrar.

The great thing which a young man needs in a crisis of temptation is to declare for the right qnickly. Leave no time for temptation to accumulate. . . . It often reqnires a great deal of character to do that; not only a religious principle, bnt a strong character back of that.—Austin Phelps.

Hygiene.

ONE CAUSE OF ILL TEMPER.

The author of "Diet in Sickness and Health," an English woman, affirms that an excessive use of meat is responsible for a good deal of ill temper. In snpport of this theory she says:

If we compare domestic life and manners in England with those of other countries where meat does not form such an integral article of diet, a notable improvement will be marked. In less meat-eating France nrbanity is the rule of the honse. In fish and rice-eating Japan harsh words are nnknown, and an exqnisite politeness to one another prevails even among children who play together in the street. In Japan I never heard rude, angry words spoken by any but Englishmen. I am strongly of the opinion that the ill temper of the English is caused in a great measure by a too abundant meat dietary, combined with a sedentary life. The half oxidized prodncts of albnmen form urates and uric acid, which, circulating in the blood, produce both mental and moral disturbances.—Exchange.

The body is made np of purely organic material; and if it be renewed every day by proper nonrishment, what can it know of advancing years? The strain and stress and fret and worry of mental attitudes are the largest factors in bringing lines into onr faces and feebleness into our limbs, and inducing general and specific conditions of disease. The effects are wrapped up in the causes, and we can not take the one without the other.

Drinking water, no matter where found, should be filtered and boiled before using, for it is apt to contain disease germs washed from watersheds.

HAMPTON—Christiana Elizabeth Hampton, daughter of Thornton P. and Anne Greyson was born in Stokes county, N. C., June 4, 1814; professed religion and joined the M. E. church in her twelfth year; was married to J. M. Hampton, Jan. 31, 1837 (several years before the latter entered the ministry of the Methodist Church); died April 5, 1899.

The subject of the above sketch illustrated, in a remarkable degree, the graces of our holy religion. Especially in the marital relation did she exemplify those principles. The stricken husband says, "No man ever had a better wife." She was one of the "keepers at home." (Tit. ii, 5.) During a married life of nearly sixty-three years she was never absent from her home at meal time, when her husband was at home, but once. The affairs of the home were directed with consummate skill, the spirit of Christ being manifested in domestic as well as social relations. In this home children were properly reared. There grandchildren were moulded into noble womanhood.

The life of Sister Hampton embraced much of the period of Methodist itinerant heroism—the period when Methodist Churches were weak and circuits large. The burden of home cares so fraught with far reaching consequences rested upon her, while the husband was absent doing battle for the Lord, for weeks at a time.

Sister Hampton's love for husband and home caused no unconcern for others. She gave attention to the sick of the community, and administered to the wants of the poor and friendless. Not only in temporal things, but she was careful about their instruction in the things of Christ. She was fond of the company of friends, and her home was noted for its hospitality. She kept in touch with the young people as well as the old unto the last.

Her religion was profound and constant. She had read the New Testament through annually for years. Had read as far as Romans during the present year. Her seat was always filled at church as long as she was able to attend. She loved the Methodist Church and delighted in entertaining Methodist preachers. When the time for her departure came there was no suffering, physical or otherwise. Death had no sting. The end was peace.

SHELBY—Dr. Russell B. Shelby was born in Kentucky in 1824. When he was a boy his father, a Presbyterian minister, moved in the Mississippi Delta, and, with others, founded the first settlement in what is now Coahoma county. At an early age the doctor was graduated from the Cumberland University, when he then began the study of medicine. Having completed his course, he entered a successful practice in Mississippi. Afterward he held positions of honor in the hospitals of Cincinnati and Saint Louis, but finally returned to Mississippi. He soon acquired a handsome practice. His skill in managing the diseases peculiar to this section was marked, and both at home and abroad his ability was recognized. He visited all alike, both rich and poor, when called.

In 1859 he was married to Miss A. Cravens, of Memphis, Tenn. For fifty years they lived and loved together. Several children blessed their union, of whom but three are left.

He was a Christian and a gentleman of the old school. He was the poor man's neighbor, a generous citizen, a devoted husband and father. Ever philanthropic and loyal to truth and duty, he was a blessing to the world.

He loved his church. For some fifty years he was a consistent Methodist, and the greater portion of the time a steward. His last Sabbath at preaching he led the closing prayer. His favorite text was John iii, 16.

He died of la grippe at his home in Lula, Miss., Feb. 18, 1899, and entered into rest. He leaves the sorrowing wife and children the priceless heritage of a record that is untarnished by anything small or unmanly. What a legacy!

We shall miss him here, but we shall meet him again. God fervently bless the sorrowing loved ones and comfort them!

Lula, Miss. J. E. Cunningham.

GRANBERRY—Mrs. Serena Granberry was born March 27, 1825, and died March 13, 1899. She joined the M. E. Church in the year 1840. In the year 1850 she received the Holy Spirit in great power into her soul, and her life was thoroughly consecrated to the service of God. She was a woman of a very pure character. Her Bible was her daily companion. The Word of God was pure; therefore, she loved it above all other books. She drank freely from the fountain of eternal life. She was an active worker in the church and in the Sunday-school, and was always in her place. Her health had been bad for twenty years, or longer, but she had been sustained by strength from on high to wait on her aged companion, who was her constant care for several years before his death. When his pure spirit passed out to the bright world above she prayed to God to take her, too, as she had nothing now to live for. So the God she had so faithfully served answered her prayer, and in one short month took her to heaven to be with loved ones there forever. Her death was a beautiful translation from a world of sin and sorrow to the bright world above. "We sorrow not as those who have no hope, for we believe that Jesus died and rose again," and that "those who sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." Here is bright hope of all God's children. That is a desolate grave indeed over which there does not creep out a single sprig or blade of hope. J. S. Parker.

WOODWARD—Samuel A. Woodward was born April 26, 1807, in the State of Virginia; moved to Illinois while quite young; lived for a few years in Kentucky and Tennessee. In the latter he was married to Miss Emily P. Harris, and then moved to Alabama; thence to Mississippi, where, in 1845, he settled the place in Lafayette county on which he lived more than fifty years, leaving it only one year before his death to live among his children. He had raised a large family of children, but only five are now living.

In early life he became a Christian and joined the Methodist Church. His house has been the resting-place of many a weary itinerant preacher when this was a pioneer country. He loved the church, and was never happier than when associated with Christian people in his own hospitable home, or worshiping with them at God's house. Few men have been more useful in the community where they live. Through his long life he lived at peace with men, and, last of all, at peace with God. The last few weeks of his life he suffered much, but spoke often of the assurance that he enjoyed that he would soon be at rest. On the twenty-sixth of November, 1898, at the home of his son, Henry E., he peacefully slept in Jesus.

A. W. Lanoley.

HAMILTON—Miss Jane P. Hamilton was born Nov. 24, 1829. She was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1853, and lived a consistent member until her death, April 3, 1899.

She was a modest, unassuming Christian, retiring in disposition; went to church whenever she could, and always expressed herself when talking to the writer as "doing the best she could" to be ready when the summons came. She was a great sufferer; her illness was quite protracted, but she bore it as a Christian alone, helped by divine grace, can bear affliction. When the end came she expressed herself as "just waiting." She was so weak that she could not talk. No doubt if she had had the power of speech, she would have talked of many beautiful things revealed to her in this hour as the spirit was just on the ground separating the two worlds. Who can tell but while sisters and brothers were bidding her good-by, but that father and mother, who had gone on ahead of her, were greeting her with fond love and bidding her welcome to the home where sickness and death can never come? May my God sanctify her life and death to the good of all the family! Let us all meet her in heaven, is my prayer.

Her pastor, B. F. Phillips.
Shannon, Miss.

FERGUSSON—We have been called upon to mourn the loss of Mrs. May Ola Fergusson, whose sweet spirit passed from earth to heaven Wednesday, Feb. 15, 1899. While our hearts are sad, yet we bow in submission to Him who gave, and who hath taken away, for "death is the crown of life."

The W. F. M. Society, of which she was an honored member, adopts the following:

Resolved, That while we mourn the loss of such a consecrated Christian, faithful wife, self-sacrificing mother and loyal friend, we rejoice that she is "safe on the other side."

Resolved, That we strive to be ever patient, gentle, loving, and kind, as was she, for the power of such a life only eternity can tell.

Resolved, That we tender to the bereaved ones our heartfelt sympathy in this great sorrow, and pray that the "everlasting arms" be around them.

Resolved, That we deem it both a merited tribute to the dead and a duty to the living that a memorial of this life of faithful service be spread upon our records, a copy be furnished to her family, and that these resolutions be forwarded to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Respectfully submitted.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

A Great Combine Trusts and Combines in many lines of production, and controlling the output of many factories, have recently been formed, some Capitalized at Millions and other similar organizations are projected. It is not our purpose to discuss here the influence of these trusts, whether beneficial to public interests or otherwise; but we wish to announce to our readers that which is not prejudicial to any interests, but which, on the contrary, is directly in favor of every reader of this paper.

HERE IS THE PLAN A splendid illustrated MONTHLY, devoted to the cause of Methodism throughout this broad land and called THE AMERICAN ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE, is published in St. Louis, with offices in New York and Chicago. It is the peer of the best of the popular magazines in illustration, literature, and typographical excellence, and is designed to be to the Methodist membership of about six millions in America, what the popular secular magazine is to the general reading public. The Magazine is not a competitor of any of the other Church periodicals; it is general in its scope. It is the ONLY ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE PUBLISHED MONTHLY IN THE UNITED STATES, and occupies a field distinctly its own. Its aims and purposes are of the highest. Its ideals are: THE PUREST IN LITERATURE, THE HIGHEST IN ART, THE NOBLEST IN METHODISM. It is a worthy exponent of the great Church it so ably represents.

Some Opinions of Representative Methodists, North and South:

"The American Illustrated Methodist Magazine should be welcomed by the whole Methodist family. Many a number will contain articles worth ten times the subscription price." —Bishop Charles C. McCabe.

"Fair, sweet-toned, appetizing." —Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.

"Our common Methodism is to be congratulated on this valuable accession to our periodical treasures. I hope every Christian will have this beautiful Magazine." —Bishop John F. Hurst.

"It takes rank with the best for its varied and rich table of contents. A valuable auxiliary to our Epworth League work." —Bishop E. R. Hendrix.

"A periodical absolutely solitary in the field it occupies. It is a joy to the eye, the mind and the heart. It ought to find a place at once in every family circle in the land." —Bishop W. A. Candler.

"A gem among the monthlies of our land." —T. Berry Smith, Central College, Fayette, Mo.

W. T. Harris, of Washington, D. C., United States Commissioner of Education, has this to say of a recent number: "It is one of the most remarkable magazine numbers that I have seen for a long time, and I beg leave to enclose two dollars for two regular subscriptions. I congratulate you."

The Press, Denominational and Secular, Speak in Highest Terms.

"A future of gratifying success and large usefulness is assured it." —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"The contributions compare well with those of any other Magazine of the day and its illustrations are excelled by none." —Pittsburg (Pa.) Daily News.

"Interesting and attractive, not only to Methodists but also to the general reading public, for the matter which fills the pages is of a character broader than the title would indicate." —Columbus (O.) Dispatch.

"The prospectus of the Magazine indicates that there is an abundant feast of good things in store for its readers; but the Magazine itself is better than any prospectus." —The Pittsburg (Pa.) Times.

"The scholarship of the Magazine is insured by the editorship of Revs. James W. Lee and Nuphtali Luccock, who are known and loved in St. Louis and throughout the West." —St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"It compares favorably with the best of them, and is a brilliant success from the beginning." —Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.

"We most heartily commend it to our people as a high-grade periodical, worthy to take its place in every Methodist home." —New Orleans Christian Advocate.

"It will aim to advocate and magnify the things which world-wide Methodism holds in common, and especially to be a factor in the cultivation of fraternal relations between the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." —Central Christian Advocate.

"The letter press is superb, the illustrations first-class and the reading matter thoroughly instructive, entertaining and edifying." —Pennsylvania Methodist.

"A triumph of literary talent and mechanical art." —St. Louis Christian Advocate.

"We welcome it, relish it and recommend it." —Western Christian Advocate.

"It takes high rank with the best periodical literature of the day." —Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

"We cannot but give to the Magazine our best wishes, and hope for it great success." —Texas Christian Advocate.

To these might be added hundreds of testimonials from Church officials, pastors and laymen, North and South, all praising the Magazine for its intrinsic worth and its lofty purpose.

"THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF METHODISM," which is being published serially in the Magazine, is a feature of marked interest, and is alone worth the subscription price; but the History is only one of the many interesting and artistic features of each number.

Every Methodist family should be a subscriber. Its price is so small all can afford it, but in combination with this paper an opportunity is offered to secure both publications for little more than the cost of one alone.

The subscription price of THE AMERICAN ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE is $1.00 a year; the subscription price of this paper is $2.00 a year. We will supply BOTH one year for $2.65 in advance.

This is our GREAT COMBINE—a TRUST organized solely in the interests of our readers, and which they are invited to join. Do not delay.

THIS OFFER WILL EXPIRE JUNE 1.

Take notice that in order to get the benefit of this offer you must first pay all arrearages. In order to ascertain the amount of your arrearage, look at the label on your paper and count the months from the date there given to May, '99. Then send 16⅔ cents for each month. Add to this $2.65.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Queen Victoria was eighty years old last Thursday.

Rosa Bonheur, the famous animal painter, died in France last week.

The State Fair, which was held in this city during the past month, closed on Wednesday.

The Court of Cassation met in Paris, May 29, to hear the debates in the application for a revision of the Dreyfus case.

Admiral Dewey telegraphs the Navy Department that he will stop at various places on his way to the United States, and will reach New York about Oct. 1.

The students of Lincoln University have been informed by the Chester Presbytery that hereafter no trial sermon preached from a manuscript will be accepted.

Aguinaldo's "peace" envoys have been dismissed by the American Peace Commissioners, and were told not to return unless they came prepared to make an unconditional surrender.

Although left absolutely destitute by the incendiary fire which recently destroyed his home, General Wade Hampton has refused to accept the donation of a home from the people of South Carolina.

The sugar cane crop has kept up wonderfully well, notwithstanding the continued dry weather, and the stubble, which at first showed the most signs of damage from last Winter's freeze, is constantly developing fresh signs of latent life.

The gross expenses of the State of New York in the year 1899 will, it is computed, amount to $25,000,000, of which nearly 10 per cent. will be necessary to pay the deficits of departments which exceeded in 1898 or in previous years the appropriations made for them.

Orders have been issued from Pekin directing the viceroys and governors of the neighboring provinces to put all their forces on a war footing owing to the arrival of six Italian warships in San Mun harbor. It is thought also that the Chinese propose to drive the Germans from Shun Tung peninsula.

The transport "Logan," with the Second Volunteer Infantry Immunes, Colonel Duncan N. Hood commanding, from Gibara, Cuba, arrived at New York quarantine on May 29. After from twenty-four to twenty-eight hours' detention, the regiment will go to Camp Meade, Middletown, Pa. The Second will be mustered out about June 21.

Many of the British Government leaders are recognizing the advisability of taking early and practical steps toward the better housing of the working classes. In Glasgow 136,000 square yards of ground have been purchased by the municipality, on which to build workingmen's houses. The total sum allotted for this purpose is $500,000.

Miss Annie Wheeler, daughter of General Joe Wheeler, has asked the War Department to send her as an army nurse to the Philippines. If her request is not granted, she will probably go to Montgomery, Ala., in June, to receive a beautiful silver set presented to her by the women of Alabama as a testimonial for her heroic work among the sick and wounded soldiers at Santiago.

The Public Order Committee of the City Council has recommended for adoption by the Council an ordinance providing that it shall be made a requirement in the letting of every public contract that the contractor shall employ persons who have been for six months previous residents of the city, and that the city engineer shall have power to dismiss any persons so employed who are not such residents.

Paper money can not be used in the Philippines, for there is a variety of ants in the islands which eat almost everything and are particularly fond of paper. In a recent shipment, say reports, was $100,000 in paper money of small denominations, and preparation were being made to send more paper in the next shipment, when a warning was given that hereafter nothing but gold and silver coin must be sent to the islands.

It is already evident that the Czar's Peace Conference is not likely to result in disarmament or in any material change in the policy of European powers with respect to armaments. All the propositions which have been so far advanced refer principally to regulations looking to the mitigation of the horrors of war rather than the elimination of the incentives to war. The committees have discussed the better care of the wounded and the protection of property of neutrals, as well as several other kindred subjects. Arbitration, restriction of military inventions and disarmament have dropped into the background, with every indication that they will be kept there.

The anti-American and anti-Gomez faction are jubilant over what they term the failure of the United States to bribe the soldiers to give up their arms. A meeting of Cuban officers, under the leadership of Mayia Rodriguez, has been held at Marianao. General Rodriguez said he was delighted with the discipline shown by the Cuban troops. Not one real soldier, he declared, had accepted the money at La Punta, nor would there be a man in the provinces of Pinar del Rio or Matanzas who would accept the American payment. He added that the Yankees would have to take back to the United States the $3,000,000 which they brought here as bait to get control of the Cuban arms.

28th ANNUAL CAMP MEETING
Seashore Camp Grounds.

Located on the Gulf Shore, with a frontage of 1,400 feet.

WILL OPEN (D. V.) ON WEDNESDAY, JULY 12, NEXT, AND CONTINUE FOR 8 OR 10 DAYS.

The Grounds are opened April 1, and closed Nov. 1, for occupying cottages and reception of visitors. Modern and ample accommodation have been provided for the multitudes that annually visit this refreshing and delightfully cool and bracing place of rest, free from malaria and contagious diseases.

The sea bathing is unsurpassed by any resort on the Mississippi Sound, while the supply of pure, sparkling drinking water is furnished by one of the finest of artesian wells, whose waters possess rare virtues.

The Grounds represent a beautiful grove of rare attractiveness, with its abundance of 20-odd varieties of shade trees, which afford shelter from the Summer heat.

The exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued, and act as a tonic to the debilitated visitors from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns. Boats for sailing and fishing always on hand. The drives along the seashore present magnificent views, and are over ten miles in length. Visitors are not expected to arrive or depart on the Sabbath day.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 5 to 22, inclusive, and be good to return on until Aug. 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. A fine hotel, with a frontage of 75 feet, equipped with electric lights and all modern conveniences, has been erected.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the New Orleans, Seashore and Mobile District Conferences.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

TO THE METHODISTS OF NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

The trustees of Grenada College are proud of the record this school has made during the past seventeen years. During that time hundreds of girls have been taught in the institution, and scores of graduates have gone out from its halls. The good thus done, who can estimate? Surely the value of this work is "above rubies." This is the work we propose to continue, and to this we pledge our best efforts, and we invite your continued patronage and support. This property is yours—paid for, established, and maintained by you. It is the only property owned by the Methodists of North Mississippi, and the only school authorized by the North Mississippi Conference to educate our girls. Asking you to sustain it is simply asking you to sustain your own. We do this, too, on the basis of the work heretofore done at Grenada, to which we invite your closest scrutiny. The school is in better condition than ever before in its history. Last session it reached high-water mark, being full to overflowing. Those wanting rooms for next session will do well to make engagements at once. The building is so admirably constructed that at some time of the day the sun shines into each room. Not a case of serious sickness has originated in the institution during its entire history. Can any other girls' school in our territory say as much? The building has been overhauled and refitted and furnished. A splendid system of electric lights, sewerage and water works has been put in. There is hot and cold water on every floor. The property is clear of debt, and there is nothing to hinder its onward march to greater prosperity. We ask of the preachers and people the undivided support which their only authorized girls' school is entitled to receive, and which this school so richly merits. While our motto is, "Not how cheap, but how good," still the price of tuition and board has been put at the lowest point consistent with thorough and honest work. This school will be run in strict conformity to the legislation of our recent General Conference, which meets our hearty approval and unqualified endorsement. The newly-elected president, the Rev. W. M. McIntosh, A. B. (Emory College, Oxford, Ga.), needs no introduction or commendation to Mississippians. An important factor in bringing the school to its present exalted position, Mr. McIntosh thoroughly understands its present conditions and future needs. His unanimous election was not alone the judgment of the trustees, but also in response to a widespread desire of the patrons and friends of Grenada College.

J. R. BINGHAM,
Pres. Board of Trustees.

OUR COLLEGES FOR GIRLS.

If the special friends and champions of Whitworth College are wise, they will quit claiming for Whitworth a part of the Twentieth Century Educational Fund, to the exclusion of other colleges in the Mississippi Conference equally as meritorious, or there will be no such fund to be divided. It is better not to forestall the action of the Conference Board of Education or of the Conferences.

It does not do to undertake to dispose of East Mississippi Female College—the most successful and liberally-patronized school for girls in our Conference—by saying it is on the eastern line of the State, and overlook the fact that it is in the most prosperous city in the State, and otherwise most advantageously situated for drawing patronage, not only from Mississippi, but also from Alabama, Louisiana, Tennessee, and elsewhere. And our Methodism is not restricted to Conference boundaries.

If the plans of some over-zealous brethren are to be carried out, and our most successful college for girls is to be degraded into a "feeder" for Whitworth, the sooner the fact is made public the better—if it be a fact. Then let Whitworth look to its over-zealous friends for its endowment, and not to the Twentieth Century Fund. If Whitworth, with less patronage and a smaller faculty, is to be preferred, and its president is to be made president of all the other colleges for girls in our Conference (a la Randolph-Macon and the Virginia schools), make that public, and the Twentieth Century Educational Fund in the Mississippi Conference will be too small to do anybody or any college any good whatever. But the Board of Education of our Conference will not perpetrate the folly some of the brethren are disposed to advocate. The repeated assaults, direct and indirect, on East Mississippi Female College are hurting neither the college nor its consecrated and competent president; but recent publications are defeating efforts to raise the Mississippi Conference's proportion of the educational fund, as well as making some people think "how hard it is for human nature to forgive another who has succeeded where one's own self has failed."

Mr. Editor, I have never been a college president (although I have declined the presidency of three colleges—and they still live!), and so have never failed in conducting one for girls or boys, or for both. Perhaps that is the reason why I rejoice as much in the success of East Mississippi as I do in the measure of success which has come to Whitworth, and why I would be glad to see like success vouchsafed to Edward McGehee and Port Gibson. And that is also the reason for my declining an offer of land and of money a few years ago to build another college in one of the thriftiest towns in the bounds of the Mississippi Conference. And I do not believe that Whitworth will be helped at all by destroying East Mississippi, or that East Mississippi will be more firmly established by the overthrow of Whitworth. And I do believe that Port Gibson and Edward McGehee are doing work which neither Whitworth nor East Mississippi would do were we to abandon these institutions of learning. T. L. MELLEN.

FROM THE DISTRICT.

Since our last communication we have been confined altogether to the county of Yazoo, except a mid-week appointment at Brandon. At the latter place we found the diligent pastor with everything in order. While, territorially, he belongs to Jackson, he really has the opportunity of using three of the beloveds, and this writer is gratified to know that he does not hesitate. On the basis of per cent., Brandon leads the district in the collections for all purposes, being nearly up to date. The pastor is reaching out to other points.

At Yazoo City our work is growing in interest, and the pastor is on the alert on all points. Quarterly Conference was well attended, and the matter of being ready to occupy at Lintonia (a suburb of Yazoo City) at earliest moment was fully discussed. Already we have here a chapel, and a Sunday-school presided over by Dr. Carruthers, and doing fine work. If the Y. and M. V. R. R. establishes its shops at this point—which is considered now next to a certainty—we will be on the grounds and right in the neighborhood of the shops. It is possible that our next Conference may have to provide for this as a charge.

Having coupled the Yazoo circuit with Yazoo City, we did some doubling up on Sunday, preaching three times and riding twelve miles.

Benton and Tranquil also being joined and adjoining, we pursued same course, only the brethren here had mapped out work beginning with Friday night and ending with Monday, 3 P. M. Two Quarterly Conferences, seven sermons, and overland rides of sixty miles, and yet one brother thought the elder was rather hasty.

On this trip I passed by the Rocky Springs Baptist Church, where we spent a while among the tombs. Here we noted one stone, on which we read, "Matilda Adams," erected by her brother, our Rev. T. W. Adams. Though far from kindred and friends, she sleeps among the people of our Lord.

Silver City and Lodi were our next, and here we found our brethren doing their best to keep interest in the cause of the Master awake. Sparseness of population, an unsettled citizenship, and the deceitfulness of riches, make this territory a difficult field. At Silver City good congregations met us, and also many friends of my youth. Church work is moving on slowly-ascending lines. Finances generally good. As said one brother, "Here we have not many praying members, but lots of paying," and yet we have some paying, and hope for more. At Silver City we took the collection for foreign missions, and secured nearly the full assessment.

Brandon, Benton and Silver City all appointed committees to look after the repairing or building of parsonages. At each place something is needed before another Winter. Good and true men were appointed at each place, and we look for good results.

Crops, generally, are promising, and in the Delta the planters express great satisfaction at their condition. No fruit, few berries, and the chicken crop late ripening. T. B. H.

ORPHANS' HOME.

MR. EDITOR: The Orphans' Home located at Water Valley is certainly a great success. Sixty little unprotected, almost uncared-for, children have been received into this asylum for real godly development. They are faithfully taught text-books, and how to cook, milk, wash, attend to all the phases of housekeeping, and labor in garden and field, proper distinction being made between boys and girls in these industries.

The directors met on the tenth and eleventh of May, and very minutely looked into all matters pertaining to the Home. Their thorough investigation was very satisfactory. The management, we assure you, is all that could be expected or asked.

The true economy of the institution is truly remarkable. The plans devised and efforts put forth are controlled by one aim—that is to accomplish the greatest good for our land and church with the smallest amount of money. The greatest, most pitiable extravagance on earth is to so niggardly spend "means" as there will be no "cleanliness," cultured mind, or breathing of "Jehovah's breath."

Oh, how humanity would be lifted if we all, with that "love that never faileth," helped the poor! The large hearts of Bro. M. L. Burton and his accomplished wife are wholly in this great work. They wisely select efficient helpers. It is a beautiful sight, and one that touches and bestirs any soul that is "humane" after the Christ sort, to see these precious buds gathered from the "wayside" discharging their domestic duties orderly, cheerfully, and promptly, and watch them as they are instructed in lessons for a broad, noble, successful Christian life. These "little ones" will make magnificent men and women if they grow up in this soil that brings forth "much fruit." Here is a plain way to be useful: aid in elevating the human race, and lay up treasures in heaven. We must all be heartily united in relieving the needy, and liberally succoring the friendless and helpless. Let everyone do something for this praiseworthy cause. The highly-favored children should be trained to give money with their parents and guardians to carry forward and enlarge this Christ-like enterprise. Do not lose an opportunity of doing immeasurable good for yourself, family, State and Church. Pray for these now neat, bright children. Send in such children as should enter the "Home," and forward money, that you may be one who assists in building up our splendid country and have perennial gladness.

J. B. STREATER,
J. M. WYATT,
Committee.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The new church-buildings at Greenwood and Winona are nearing completion. They will both be occupied soon. Steps are being taken for a district parsonage for the Aberdeen district, and Aberdeen has been selected as the place for its location. This, when consummated, will enable us to report a presiding elder's home for every district in the Conference.

The Greenville District Conference has just closed a pleasant session at Hollondale. The preachers were all present excepting Bros. Thomas, Harris and Graves, who were detained at home by sickness. We missed their genial faces, and hope they will soon be restored to health. Campbell Trigg was licensed to preach, and he and J. W. McGee were recommended for admission on trial in the Annual Conference.

Good reports are coming in from Children's Day observance. The indications are for a general observance of this occasion and good collections. So may it be. Send the money at once to Rev. J. A. Leech, treasurer, Minter City, Miss., and a postal card report to the agent, that we may know of the work.

We are anticipating a great meeting of the Epworth Leaguers at West Point, on the twenty-second instant. We hope that it will be an occasion of great interest and profit. Let everybody get ready for it; especially prepare to sing by procuring "The Young People's Hymnal," the song book which will be used. Send to me at once for it, or be ready to get a copy as soon as you arrive at West Point. I shall have on hand there a full stock of this, "the best song book on the market;" "Teachers'" and "Workers' Bibles," and other good books at Publishing House prices. Persons who may desire any special book will please write me in due time, so that I may be sure to have it. I hope to be present as follows: Woman's Missionary Conference, Sardis, June 10; Vicksburg District Conference, June 15; Aberdeen District Conference, June 29; Corinth District Conference, June 30; Columbus District Conference, July 5.

The election of Rev. W. M. McIntosh to the presidency of Grenada College gives general satisfaction, and the outlook is propitious for the continued prosperity of our beloved Institution. G. W. BACHMAN.

Winona, Miss., June 3, 1899.

REPORT OF DISTRICT BOARD OF EDUCATION.

ADOPTED BY THE WINONA DISTRICT CONFERENCE, MAY 14, 1899

Your Board of Education beg leave to report as follows:

The Loan Fund now belonging to us amounts to three hundred dollars. Seventy-five dollars of this amount is a gift from Dr. W. T. Johnson, of Greenwood, Miss., this year. This money is loaned to young men to enable them, to attend Millsaps College, preparatory to entering the traveling connection. At present there are three beneficiaries of this fund.

We are glad to note the continued prosperity of Millsaps College, and feel that we were highly favored in having Dr. Murrah with us. We greatly appreciate his very able and instructive address on Christian education.

We report with much gratitude the great prosperity of Grenada College, which has grown so much during the last session that the applicants for training there exceeded the capacity of the building, and had to be turned away with great sadness on the part of our worthy and progressive president. We favor the enlargement of the building and thorough equipment of this school, and pledge our help to this end. We appreciate the faithful work of Bro. Malone as president, and deeply regret his resignation. We pray that divine wisdom may direct the trustees in selecting his successor, and pledge our hearty and undivided support to this, the only school property owned by the North Mississippi Conference for the education of our girls.

We favor the Twentieth Century Educational Movement with all our hearts, and pledge our earnest efforts to secure the $3,925 asked for as the minimum amount from this district.

We appreciate the great labors of Bishop Galloway in this cause. His labors are inspiring to us all, and we trust his enthusiasm may be communicated to the whole church, so that we may not only raise the million and a half dollars, but we may go even beyond that. We welcome him to our midst, and pledge him our hearty co-operation.

In conclusion, we would emphasize that qualifying word in the name of the work done by our schools, viz.: Christian education. Let our trustees and college presidents see to it that all our schools impart an education that is truly Christian, so that pupils leaving our college halls shall go out to enter into the work of bringing the world to Christ.

Respectfully submitted.

JNO RITCHEY, for Board.
Attest: J. R. BINGHAM,
Sec'y of the Conference.

Report of Committee from Board of Trustees of East Mississippi Female College.

(Adopted Unanimously by the largest Board Meeting held for years.)

We, your Committee on the State of the College, beg leave to report as follows: We are glad to note the fact that the religious influence of the college is of such pronounced character that few indeed of the student body will go to their homes without an experimental knowledge of salvation. This, we believe, ought to be the distinguished feature of all institutions of the church.

We also note that the president, true to his promise of last year, has greatly raised the course of study, and that even now it is on a par with any other institution of the kind in the South.

The president also reports that very thorough work has been done in all departments. This, in the opinion of your committee, is, next to the religious influence, the highest aim of this institution; so that, when our girls shall go out from the halls of our college, having a diploma at our hands, it shall be enough to say she has been to East Mississippi Female College.

President Beeson informs us that it is his intention to continue to raise the standard until it shall be superior to any.

The grade of teachers is especially worthy of commendation. Without mention of departments, we will simply say that they, as a whole, are specialists in their several lines, measuring step by step with the most progressive in this progressive age of the land.

Our buildings are in good condition; indeed, all indicate that they have been under the eye of one whose interest was one of ownership. Several hundred dollars have been spent in repairs and needed improvements.

Realizing the great improvements, the tremendous success of the school, the fine religious tone, and many other things too numerous to mention, we recommend for adoption of the Board the following resolutions

That for his great service to the church in bringing the college to its present prosperous condition, under the providence of Almighty God, we express to President J. W. Beeson our profound appreciation; and that we do hereby pledge him our heartiest support and sincere prayers; and that we commend to the parents and guardians of girls, who are looking after their religious and mental welfare, to place them in the care of our president, J. W. Beeson, as being eminently worthy of their profoundest confidence.

W. H. CURTIS,
J. C. CAVETT,
G. H. GALLOWAY.

FROM CLINTON, LA.

The court-house, on June 1, was filled with the brains of this parish to hear Drs. Cooper and W. H. LaPrade discuss the saloon. The president of Centenary is a live, robust, earnest, pathetic speaker, full of incident and illustration. He can not only tell the truth, but make the truth tell. The inimitable LaPrade, so versatile, shrewd, felicitous, had the wind taken out of his sails by the larger vessel ladened with the golden grain of thought. He hauled in his main-sheet, shoved down the tiller, pointed up a little higher, and on the home-stretch made a magnificent finish that stirred the blood of the crowd.

The echoes of these two speeches will be educative voices long after the sixth of June has sped by to mark wet or dry on the idea of June.

In pursuance with the resolution I voted for at Mansfield, I have been before the police jury, and, with others, the election was fixed by them for us on the sixth day of June. As clerk of the Dry Campaign Committee, I am in touch with sources of information from the eight wards, and I think it will be dry, dry, indeed, to many a wet throat.

Mr. Editor, I wonder if you can beat Drs. Cooper and LaPrade making dry speeches. They tell me you were very fine at that in Mississippi.

H. W. RICKEY.

THE SCHOOL QUESTION.

As some of my brethren seem to misunderstand my position, I desire to call attention:

1. To the exact statement made in my communication in the ADVOCATE, of May 18, viz.: that "I will open a college for girls and young ladies at Oxford, Miss., next September for the North Mississippi Conference and for the church."

2. That I will have no partner in the school, and will alone be responsible for its entire management. Bro. Standifer has no further connection with the enterprise than to sign the paper securing the plant.

3. That the property will be tendered to the church without asking the church to pay out a single dollar. Whatever part of the purchase money Oxford does not pay I will assume for a lease on the property.

4. My action in this whole matter has been based upon the conscientious belief that this is the best opportunity that has ever presented itself to us in the history of our Conference for the education of our girls, and that this providential door open to us had to be entered now, or never. J. W. MALONE.

It is better to make a mistake while attempting to do right, than to do nothing at all for fear of making a mistake.—Selected.

GOING AWAY.

Passing out of the shadow
Into a purer light,
Stepping behind the curtain,
Getting a clearer sight.

Laying aside the burden,
This weary mortal coil,
Done with the world's vexations,
Done with its tears and toil.

Tired of all earth's playthings,
Heartsick and ready to sleep,
Ready to bid our friends farewell,
Wondering why they weep.

Passing out of the shadow
Into eternal day.
Why do we call it dying,
This sweet going away?

Communications.

"THE PASTOR AND THE EVANGELIST."

MR. EDITOR: I think myself happy, because I shall answer for myself before you and the minds of your many readers "touching the things whereof I am accused" in your paper, of May 11, by Rev. W. L. Anderson. I beseech the editor and my dear fathers and brethren "to hear me patiently." For receiving money for my labors as an evangelist "I am called in question." It can not be proven that I have ever entered any man's pulpit contrary to his consent and invitation. Nor can it be proven that I have ever preached any doctrine contrary to our church. I am a local elder, holding ordination papers signed by Bishop C. B. Galloway. When a man's mind becomes prejudiced against another man on account of a few dollars, like Bro. Anderson's is against me, he is led to publish things that are calculated to injure the cause of Christianity and slander a man's character before the public. My hard-earned character is all I have in this world. It is surprisingly strange to notice how Bro. Anderson, or anyone else, can profess "to judge me after the law, and command me to be smitten contrary to the law." I am amenable to the Quarterly Conference for my official character, and not to the "Pastoral and Theological Institute of the Durant district."

Viewing the matter from the contents of Bro. Anderson's communications to the ADVOCATE, my personal ministerial character and usefulness was arrested—"reviewed"—witnesses examined, and the sentence of condemnation passed upon me, and now that "action" has been published to the church. That trial, or "action," took place in my absolute absence and ignorance of the whole affair. The pastors together assembled in that Institute had a right to discuss any subjects they saw proper for the glory of the Master and the spread of his kingdom. But they had no right under the law to call in question my ministerial character, and publicly cripple my usefulness, and condemn and pronounce me a Judas, without first referring my case to the proper authorities, and giving me a chance as the law provides. They have gone contrary to the law, and are, therefore, held responsible for it. I am a preacher of the same church they are, and know the law, and claim the same right to protection by the law as any other brother. I love the dear brethren, and have always felt and endeavored to show the profoundest respect for them ever since I started out a poor boy to make a preacher, and get home to heaven. Our church has always had honorable local preachers, who have been useful in helping to save the world. I am prepared to prove before the proper church court that I have been true to the church. I am not free from mistakes; but what blunders I have made were made during my most earnest and sincere endeavors to lead blood-bought souls to Christ, and to help build up the church of God. Every court under heaven provides for the accused to be heard in self-defense, except the mob law. And I most heartily agree with Dr. Hoss on that subject. I would have all the brethren to remember that my character as a Methodist preacher is as sacred to me as any of theirs. Our Discipline says (page 117, Sec. 4, Ques. 1), "To whom is a local preacher amenable for his conduct?" Par. 280 answers, "To the Quarterly Conference, which shall have power to try; and acquit, suspend, or expel him." On pages 119, 120, Ques. 5, Par. 288, we have the following instruction: "What shall be done when a local elder or deacon is complained of as being so unacceptable or inefficient as to be no longer useful in his work, and the Quarterly Conference, for that reason, refuses to pass his character? The Quarterly Conference next succeeding shall proceed to investigate the case (not a District Institute, if you please); and if it appear that the complaint is well founded, and if he fail to give the Conference satisfactory assurance that he will amend or voluntarily surrender his credentials, the Conference may depose him from the ministry. He may defend himself before the Conference, in person or by representative."

Now, if I have been condemned by a few brethren—all of whom I honor—contrary to the plain law, I certainly have the right, as one among them, to say so, and show where, and plead for justice according to the law. "We shall all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ." Making a preacher has not been a small matter with me. "My manner of life from my youth, which was at the first," and is now well known among as intelligent and as loyal a class of Methodist people here at Corinth as can be found elsewhere in North Mississippi. At eighteen years of age I was powerfully and scripturally converted to God at the back of my father's field, about noon, while I was on my knees wrestling, like Jacob, for salvation, when I had surrendered myself into the hands of God. "Suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing, mighty wind," and the light of God flashed on my face and into my heart, and I praised God aloud and fell over on the ground. I have declared this to the world, and will declare it. I confess that after the manner of what they call "evangelistic work," I have been preaching the gospel "of my fathers" ever since Bishop Wilson gave me an honorable "certificate of location at Fort Worth, Texas, Nov. 21, 1893," which says, "He is, therefore, authorized to exercise his ministry as a local elder in this church, according to the rules and regulations ordained by the same." I have worked in all harmony and "good conscience" among our preachers to this day. I have always thought it beneath the dignity of a Christian gentleman and minister to think of holding revival services within the bounds of a pastoral charge without the consent and invitation of the pastor. If it is a violation of my vows to preach the gospel of my Lord in connection with the pastors of our church which I love, I want some one who knows to tell me, and then I will know what to do. I appeal to the Bishops. They are great and good men, and know the law. There are thousands of local preachers in our church who desire, above everything else, to live loyal to God and to his church, and help bring the world to Christ and get to heaven. We need information from our chief pastors on this point of law.

Dear Bishops of the M. E. Church, South, please answer the following question: Is it in keeping with perfect harmony with our vows and the law of the church for local elders and deacons to go out of the pastoral charges where they hold membership, on invitation of other pastors, and assist them in revival meetings, and receive pecuniary remuneration for their labors?

I represent one of a growing class of consecrated local ministers who most sincerely desire the correct information on this point. It is time this question was settled one way or the other. Every true local preacher in the church will rightly honor and appreciate an answer from our Bishops. Tell us plainly, yes or no.

I believe in and preach all things contained in the Holy Scriptures, to the best of my ability, by the help of God; I believe in the interpretation of the Word according to our doctrinal standards; I believe in our Book of Discipline; I believe in the communion of saints, and in loyalty and "brotherly kindness" among preachers and all men. Those who know me intimately will consent that I "have hope toward God."

Dr. Sullivan and Bro. D. W. Babb "will bear me witness" that I am in perfect standing as to my official and private character at Corinth, Miss., where I have been familiarly known from childhood.

I have been wronged, publicly "unoondemned." I am myself a minister called of God and ordained to the office of an elder by the "imposition of hands." I have met all of the prescribed conditions of the law by which to become a Methodist preacher. The brethren know that I passed the various committees with creditable examinations, and was unanimously elected an elder in the godly judgment of the North Mississippi Conference. This all meant something to me. If I have committed anything worthy of the penalty of death, I refuse not to die as a Methodist preacher; but if the complaints be a mere matter of opinion about my having "received" a few dollars for my labors, or my "methods" of conducting revivals, what "instances" I should have "related," what I should have "prayed for," etc., then I only have to say to the brethren, Let him among them who has not some, or all, of these "faults" (?) "cast the first stone at" me.

As to Bro. Anderson's "pertinent questions" that he "thinks eminently proper" for this "particular evangelist to be allowed to answer," "to the satisfaction of the church," I shall answer to the satisfaction of God and truth, as all of us shall have to answer at the judgment.

Bro. Anderson wrote up my work on the Rural Hill circuit some time ago, and misrepresented what I knew to be the facts; but some prominent ministers suggested that I pay no attention to it. I always disliked a wrangle with a brother preacher. Any intelligent person can see at a glance down the column containing his "pertinent questions" that it's more of a "money matter" with him than anything else. I quote his questions, and give answers below, and readers can make their own decisions.

"1. Is it not true that the evangelist above referred to (W. D. Bass) received $265 for three weeks' work on Rural Hill circuit in 1896, while the pastor only received $264.25 for twelve months' work?"

No, it is not true; but if I had, it would have only proven that my work was that much more appreciated by the people. What they did give me was strictly the business of those dear people under the godly advice and control of the preacher in charge. The North Mississippi Conference knows that Rural Hill circuit was not very strong, financially, at that time. But some of the best people on earth are on country circuits like that, and only need men full of faith and the Holy Ghost to develop them into good works. I began with Rev. W. A. Bowlin at Center Ridge, on Rural Hill circuit, the latter part of August, 1896. The meeting was held under a brush arbor. We had a great meeting. The pastor said about "one hundred conversions." Above fifty, I think, joined our church. The latter part of the week I was preaching on the third chapter of Malachi. Rev. J. H. Mitchell, P. E., came. Soon after he was seated I remarked in my discourse, "Here it is the latter part of August, and Rural Hill circuit hasn't paid the pastor but $50." Bro. Mitchell interrupted me for a moment, and remarked that it was not quite that much, and as well as I remember, stated the correct amount from his book. I took a collection for the pastor that night, and the people subscribed above one hundred dollars, which was paid him that Fall. The people paid me at that place, through Bro. Bowlin, $78.90. Then the pastor had me to go with him to Plattsburg and hold another meeting, for which I received $35.15. Next to Rural Hill Church, where we had a great meeting, that I never shall forget. There the people paid me $54.30. Add this all up, Bro. Anderson, and we have $168.35, which is the amount I "received," except, possibly, some other little mites not put down. I take these figures from my memorandum which I had at that time. As to the figures on the "fourth Quarterly Conference Record," it is positively an error, for which I am not responsible. In all three of those meetings I took collections and secured the pastor's salary before he took any collection for this "particular evangelist" (that sentence is well used; I have endeavored to be particular). In these meetings I preached 57 times. The pastor said that I got him about "one hundred dollars that would not have been paid." I took those collections for him under his advice and that of the stewards. I love those dear people yet. W. D. BASS.

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL LIBRARY.

In the equipment for a Sunday-school there is, perhaps, nothing which fills so important a place as the library.

When we consider that in many places the number is small of those parents who thoroughly supervise the reading of their children, and who conscientiously provide books and papers for them adapted to their needs and capacities as immortal creatures, we should not think of the Sunday-school circulating library as an unnecessary expense or useless adjunct. In order that the influence of the Sunday teaching be perpetuated through the week and made the more effective, good books should be furnished to the pupils adapted to their various tastes and ages. Much religious teaching of parents, pastors and Sunday-school teachers fails of the good designed for lack of appropriate reading-matter in the hands of the children, or it is neutralized by the bad character of the books and papers that they do read.

This is emphatically a reading age. Everybody, old and young, of capable mind is reading that which is either helpful or harmful to the mind and to the soul. The printing presses are pouring upon the reading public books of every conceivable character, size, and price, both good and bad. Corrupt and pernicious literature is widespread; it is pressed upon us by the dealers, newsboys, and mails; it confronts us in the homes of the rich and the poor, in business houses, workshops, and offices. The minds and hearts of our youth are being poisoned by these books and papers, the reading of which leads to wicked and ruined lives by destroying moral feeling and exciting evil passions. Therefore, it becomes all guardians of the rising generation to use all possible means to prevent the circulation and counteract the influence of bad reading-matter. This can most effectively be done by putting into the hands of the children and young people attractive and useful books, such as are suited to their various tastes and conditions.

If we would save our pupils from the damaging influence of bad books, we must supply them with good ones. It is worse than useless to warn our young people against light, trashy, or vicious reading, if nothing better is put within their reach. While the church is sleeping the enemies of truth and purity are sowing the tares of corrupt literature broadcast, and it is needless to ask, "What shall the harvest be?" if their works of darkness are not counteracted by "the children of light."

From these considerations we think any reasonable person can see the great importance of having and using circulating libraries in all of our Sunday-schools, in order to their more effective service in bringing souls to Christ, and building them up in the knowledge and practice of Christianity.

Our great church is not wanting in facilities for supplying all demands of our people for "something good to read." Hundreds of volumes of the choicest books, carefully selected for the purpose, are on the shelves of our "Publishing House" at Nashville, Tenn., at lowest wholesale rates, for Sunday-school libraries; and the Sunday-school Board of the North Mississippi Conference proposes to add one dollar for every two dollars invested by a Sunday-school for this purpose. By this plan a school can procure books by the payment of about one-half the retail price. Surely we can, with these liberal advantages, during this year put libraries into most of our schools.

Brethren of the ministry and laity, help us. Write me for information, catalogues, etc.

WINONA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The District Conference for the Winona district has come and gone, leaving a pleasant impression. The meeting was greatly enjoyed by our citizens, and it was a common remark by the preachers that they had never attended a better. The only disappointing feature to our people was the small number who attended. At no time during the meeting was there present more than half those for whom entertainment had been provided. All told, members and visitors, about fifty persons attended. The business sessions were both pleasant and profitable. Able papers were read on various phases of church work, and interesting discussions followed. The more serious issues of the meeting were at intervals interrupted by the flash of wit and the play of humor, which added to the enjoyment of all. Of course, all did not always see everything alike, but after full and frank discussion all readily yielded to the judgment of the majority on all questions.

Reports from the various pastoral charges showed the condition of the church to be wholesome and growing, both in material and spiritual things. New church and parsonage enterprises are being carried forward. Among the most noted we mention the new $10,000 church at Winona, which is soon to be ready for occupancy, and a $10,000 one at Greenwood, which will be ready for use within the next forty days. They are elegant, substantial buildings, which will stand for generations as monuments to the wise leadership of the pastors, Rev. George H. Lipscomb and Rev. John H. Mitchell, and eloquent proofs of the large liberality of the Methodists of those two rapidly-growing towns. Carrollton will, within the next few days, let the contract for a new parsonage, which will be one of the most substantial, tasteful and best-arranged in the North Mississippi Conference.

The singing was an important and pleasing feature of the meeting. A fine choir, composed of our best singers, led and directed by Mr. Henry Spence, of Nashville, Tenn., greatly pleased and edified the large congregations which assembled from day to day. The preaching during the week was done by Revs. T. G. Freeman, W. C. Lester, J. A. Leech, J. H. Mitchell, J. W. Malone, L. M. Lipscomb, and John Rickey. It was plain, practical, and spiritual, and enjoyed by the people.

Two pleasant and welcomed visitors were Rev. J. W. Malone, of Grenada College, and Rev. W. S. Lagrone, representing the Methodist Orphans' Home at Water Valley. The congregation contributed fifty dollars to the home.

The Conference granted license to preach to Robert Paine Neblett and James S. Purcell, Jr., and recommended Wm. Thomas Browning for elder's orders, and Wm. E. M. Brogan to the Annual Conference for admission on trial into the traveling connection.

J. R. Bingham, J. B. Streater, A. H. George and Thomas P. Turner were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference, with T. C. Sledge and F. O. Reagan, alternates.

"The Twentieth Century Educational Movement" is engaging the attention of Methodists everywhere. It is being given special prominence in all Conferences. Great emphasis was given it here. On Wednesday night Dr. Murrah spoke on Christian education—an utterance of profound depth and broad scope, which marks him as one of the great thinkers of our times. As president of Millsaps College, he is doing a work the value of which only the eternities will fully reveal.

On Saturday, Bishop Galloway delivered an address on "The Twentieth Century Movement" to a congregation which filled the auditorium and vestibule of the church. A fine presence, flashing eye, alert mind, cultivated intellect, and a voice of marvelous compass and richness, combine to make Bishop Galloway one of the foremost orators of this generation. The matter of this address, and the manner of its delivery, stamp him a thinker and speaker of the first rank. For more than an hour he held the undivided attention of the vast audience. It seems to us that all that is needed to make this great movement a success is for Bishop Galloway to visit all parts of the church and speak to the preachers and people.

On Sunday, to accommodate the great crowds who were eager to hear the Bishop, the service was held in the Baptist Church, the largest building in our town. Every pew was filled, chairs placed in all the aisles and every vacant space, and the window-sills and the pulpit floor used for seats. The service was opened by the congregation singing, "Come, Thou Almighty King." Then followed a fine anthem by the choir. The sermon was striking in conception, full of great thoughts, elegantly, yet simply expressed, felicitously illustrated, and profoundly impressed the mind and greatly stirred the hearts of the audience.

At 3:30 o'clock there was a delightful celebration of the Lord's Supper, when a large number of communicants partook of the emblems of the broken body and shed blood of Christ the Lord. At night Rev. Jno. Ritchey preached a suggestive sermon, after which the congregation sang, "God Be with You 'Till We Meet Again," and this closed one of the most delightful meetings it was ever our pleasure to attend. The next session of the Conference will be held at Indianola in 1900.

The Rev. H. T. Cunningham made an ideal Conference host, and was untiring in his efforts for the comfort of the members of the Conference. The following resolutions express the feelings of the Conference:

Resolved, That our thanks are due and are hereby tendered to the town of Carrollton for the excellent entertainment given us during the session of the Conference.

To the pastors and members of the Presbyterian and Baptist Churches for the use of their houses of worship, and to the citizens of the community generally for uniform courtesy and kindness.—Carrollton (Miss.) Conservative.

Gleanings from letter of Miss Sallie Smylie: "I attended a public meeting of the South Side Society last night. This society is doing well. Bro. Hicks Ellis was with us and gave us a very fine talk on the work. The address of our district secretary, Mrs. Phillips, was full of encouraging news and enthusiasm. She is an excellent worker and so much interested in her work. Miss Mary Andrews was with us and read a very fine paper on the work.

"All of the officers of the society are interested in the work, and exert themselves to make others interested.

"Our Central Church Society rarely holds a meeting that there are not new members reported.

"I am glad to tell you that recent news from Miss Bettie Hughes is that her health is better than for six months past.

"Mrs. Trueheart's reports from the foreign fields are very encouraging. I wish I could say as much of all our work.

"A letter from Miss McNemar today (April 10) says Miss Gibson had just returned from Chicago. You know she had rheumatism all the Winter, and went there to be treated. I hope to attend the Missionary Institute to be held at Forest, the twenty-ninth.

"I have a supply of mite-boxes, and Buds and Blossom cards, and will be glad to send them to all societies that will order them.

"The Woman's Board meets at Nashville, May 18. I hope all societies will observe May 5—the day set apart by the Board for fasting and prayer.

"Our Conference will hold the annual meeting at Hattiesburg, June 24. They have a good auxiliary recently organized there, and I think we should encourage these new auxiliaries by meeting in that part of the State."

A letter from Mrs. Scott Phillips, Vicksburg, dated March 25, just received, in which she wrote: "Tomorrow night our missionary society holds its public meeting, and a very interesting programme has been arranged. We hope to make one of our most beloved women a life member. I will ask Mrs. Watkins to send a report of it for publication. [We regret that it has not been received.—Editor.]

"Vicksburg district is doing very good work." MRS. E. D. JONES.

The best defense of Christianity that can be presented to the world is a clear illustration of its spirit and teachings in the life and conduct of its professors. Men may resist logic, but they can not overthrow facts; they may reject a theory, but they can not gainsay a life. If professing Christians lived their religion and exemplified in their every-day conduct the power of Christ to save from sin, it would stop the mouths of gainsayers, and prove their religion to be divine.—Rev. John Scott, D. D.

Anyone can carry his burden, however heavy, till nightfall. Anyone can do his work, however hard, for one day. Anyone can live sweetly, patiently, lovingly, purely, till the sun goes down. And this is all that life ever really means.—Exchange.

PERSONAL REMINISCENCES OF REV. ROBT. B. DOWNER.

(Concluded.)

I had an appointment near the end of dry land, on West Pearl river. Old men, and wives, and children of our Confederate soldiers, made the audience. High water wrecked a bridge over a stream I must cross, the night previous. I was advised not to waste time attempting the impossible. Having a rule, never to say I can't until I had given an honest, hearty trial, I proceeded upon my way. On approaching the bridge place, it seemed a total wreck. Close inspection revealed the frame unharmed, and the flooring alone was gone. At the base on both sides, and at the comb, a few planks remained intact; planks were floating about. I planned to go over by placing planks endwise from comb to base on both sides. When my temporary bridge was constructed, I knelt down and prayed for God to make "Mack" willing and confiding, obeying my wishes. Boldly I moved towards the frail structure, leading the mule, and without any hesitancy Mack followed, as though a two-plank bridge was an every-day affair. And yet, at a subsequent period, he ran away with me, because he thought two cows, with young calves, was the "Behemoth" of Scripture. Often that year I rode Mack over unfrequented paths, "as nigh-cuts," when it was ten, or more, miles between houses. Should I be thrown to the ground, I would have no hope of rescue, as men folks were scarce and paths were rarely traversed. I felt that it was my duty to go where duty called, without regard to dangers. My life was an incidental matter, of no great special importance, compared with a failure to meet an appointment to preach the gospel. I have made it a life rule to begin on time, without regard to size of congregation present.

Looking over my life since the Winter of 1858, and noting how God has opened up my way, and since 1867 blessed me with the companionship of a consecrated, patient, loving wife, who has proved a blessing to others, and made it possible for me to do what is on record; granting me children of whom I am not ashamed, and true friends wherever I have served, now that in my old age I find myself free from the pastoral relation by action of my brethren, and allowed to go out into the busy world to begin life anew, I find myself almost alone with God. I attend prayer meetings, yet hear no one pray; the preached Word, yet rarely ever know what has been said. My presence around the fireside of friends entails suffering to their vocal chords. Yet, while I am cut off from a means of livelihood except by manual labor, my soul is in a state of profound quiet, perfectly willing to suffer anything yet in store that God may see proper to permit or inflict. It does not take much now to make me silent aloud the praises of God.

Had I an hundred lives to live at my disposal as to choice of occupation, no hardship, privation, or sufferings incident to the itineracy would deter me from asking the honor of being counted worthy to labor for Christ as a poor piney woods circuit rider.

Whatever of good in me is found, the church, under God's blessing, has produced it. The church gave me a holy, consecrated mother and wife; obedient, affectionate children, and friends everywhere that I have labored, who, I feel sure, will never allow me to suffer to distress. I have not pleased everybody, for I have tried to please Christ. I have made mistakes that cause me regret, but, as far as I know, no one will charge me with being a time-server, or unfaithful in dealing with their souls in public and private. I have tried faithfully to practice what I preach, and live in good conscience with all men. If I have an enemy, I don't know it. The most difficult lessons ever presented me to learn are now before me: 1. Be dependent upon others, without ability to make adequate compensation of service rendered. 2. Be burdened with the spirit of preaching, and nobody expecting me to fill an appointment.

May God's choicest blessings abide upon my beloved brethren of the Mississippi Conference, and the kind people that I have been privileged to serve these forty years! Should heaven be an hallucination of the mind, all right. I am now paid for all I have ever done for him. Glory to God, though, I believe his word, and where he is, I expect to be, and though I now "see through a glass darkly," after awhile it will be "the King in all his beauty."

TWO BIG PREACHERS.

"They have a mighty big preacher in B., and he has another big preacher helping him in a meeting;" so said a good woman to me a few days ago. A big preacher being assisted in a big meeting by another big preacher ought to accomplish big results. This was the conclusion I came to. But, upon reflection, does it not take something more than big preachers and big preaching to reach the hearts of the people and bring them to Christ? Jesus said to his disciples, "Tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high." And, "Ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you." It is said, "These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women." "And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place." Nothing is said about big preachers or big preaching, but there was much earnest praying done by men and women, until the power of God came down upon them, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost. Then followed an unpretentious sermon by a Spirit filled man, and three thousand people were converted in a day.

About eight years after this, "There was a certain man in Cæsarea called Cornelius; a devout man, and one that feared God with all his house, which gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God always." "And Cornelius said to Peter" (who had come to him in response to a message from him and from above), "Four days ago I was fasting until this hour; and at the ninth hour I prayed in my house, and behold a man stood before me in bright clothing, and said, Cornelius, thy prayer is heard, and thine alms are had in remembrance in the sight of God." "Now, therefore, said Cornelius, are we all here present before God to hear all things that are commanded thee of God." Then Peter proceeded to preach a plain gospel sermon, simple and true, and "while Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word," and many souls were saved.

What a lesson for us in these times of spiritual dearth! After fastings, almsgivings, and much prayer, a plain sermon by a Spirit-filled man is blessed of God with great results. If Peter had read his sermon on that occasion, or if he had made an effort without his manuscript to preach a big sermon, or to pose as a big preacher, no such results would have followed his preaching. What the church and the world need today is not big preachers or big preaching, in the ordinary sense of those terms, but more fasting, humility, almsgiving, and prayer; and more of the power of the Holy Ghost coming upon us.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

The discussion of the third item, "How to Get our Collections in Full," was led by Rev. C. A. Powell. One of the sources of failure was attributed to the low state of piety of the individual member. The remedy suggested is an appeal to the individual conscience. His remarks were based on Rom. x, 15. He said that home and foreign missions sustained the same relation, and the mission of the church is to the unsaved wherever found. Our obligation to carry the gospel to the lost is not lessened by the amount of space intervening. Christianity is missionary in nature and design. Non-appreciation of this argues moral and mental stupidity. An anomalous state of affairs, he said, existed in the church, viz.: intense enthusiasm in the matter of professing personal sanctity, but a painful lack of expressed interest in the material advancement of the church. No type of piety is superior to the material expression of it in the interest of the unsaved. All profession of sanctity is spurious which does not materialize in dollars and cents. The resources of the church are sufficient to meet all its demands, even the salvation of more than a thousand millions of the unsaved. To deny this is to charge God with folly—or his demanding of the church that which can not be done for the lack of means which he has failed to supply. The amount of ability committed, he said, is the measure of the duty of the church or individual. The censure lies at the door of individuals who compose the church. The apathy of individuals is the cause of the church's failure. Its leaders are in accord with the design of the gospel, and the intelligent sentiment far superior to the willingness manifested to give success. The duty of the church is to preach the gospel to every creature. It is too late, he said, to flaunt that old hackneyed objection that the gospel is not designed for all men. The heathen can not believe whom they have never heard, can not hear without a preacher, can not preach except they be sent, and can not go without the money. The duty of the church is to go or send. Millions will perish for the lack of the truth and individual members will be held responsible. There is only one missionary to every five thousand heathen, and the average individual contribution is about five cents a month. Thousands give nothing. Nineteen hundred years have elapsed with barely one-fourth of the human race reached.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. H. O. White, Lake Providence, La., May 25, 1899: "We have just closed a meeting of one week's duration here at Lake Providence, with good results. Many (perhaps 40 or 50) souls were blessed of God; not all converted, but many of them had backslidden in heart and life, and have been made anew in Christ. I think the number of persons converted for the first time quite small, but the number converted over is many. Rev. Robt. A. Davis, of Waterproof, did all the preaching, which was after the apostolic style, 'They spake as he was moved by the Holy Ghost.' The future looks brighter than before. This, we hope, is but the forerunner of a very gracious revival at a time not far distant. Money is very scarce in these ends of the earth; therefore, it is difficult to move forward where it requires money to move. The people are taking tolerably good care of their preacher, but without much money. Our congregation and church have been very much depleted, both financially and in membership, since Conference; so much so that I fear very little can be done there. Only a probable congregation of about 20 persons. That would be a very large one. We hope to build a church in that community soon. The money has been subscribed for a year, perhaps, but not much of it has been collected. If we can collect and carry out Bro. Parker's plans, we will have a beautiful church."

Rev. H. Armstrong, Spring Hill, La., May 31, 1899: "On reaching Spring Hill, I found no house of worship and no church membership, except six. Now we have a church, and money in hand for the purchase of an organ, a flourishing Sunday-school, and last week Bro. P. O. Lowery held a series of meetings here, resulting in about twelve professions of faith and ten additions to the church. The mill paid last year only $23 for ministerial support. It has paid the pastor $50 this year to date, and at the close of the meeting, last week, Bro. Lowery was presented with a purse of $28. The charge consists of four churches, all on the railroad, and the pastor has a free pass. It is very sickly here. If I can keep up, you shall hear of better things than these."

Motherhood is a woman's brightest crown.

It is a woman's glory to be strong and capable in a feminine way. Her worst misfortune is to have any physical weakness affecting the delicate, special organism which is involved in motherhood. To insure the complete health and normal capability of this most important structure, is the purpose of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It gives tone and vitality to the entire nervous system; and strength and vigor to the organism of maternity. It makes motherhood possible, safe and comparatively easy and painless.

Its wonder working capacity is exemplified in the trying experience of Mrs. A. Block, No. 321 Jackson St., Trenton, N. J., who writes: "I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription shortly before confinement with my sixth child, as I felt miserable, and it helped me so much that I had an easy time and felt well soon after. Four years ago, on the 17th of January, when the mercury was five below zero my seventh child was born, after I had been waiting on my sick husband for nine weeks. With the help of your medicine I stood it all. For the last year I have been doing nearly all my work including the care of eight children. I think I am doing well, thank God, and hope I will be able to continue. I owe my health to God and your medicine."

One of the greatest helps a mother can have in nursing and rearing her children and carrying them safely through all the little sicknesses and ailments to which children are subject is Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page illustrated book, the "People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." A paper-bound copy will be sent free for 21 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of mailing only, or in heavy, French cloth covers for 31 stamps. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y. This book should be owned by every mother. It is like a family doctor always at hand.

Best Edition of the World's Best Books

—THE—

"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangment for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

THURSDAY, JUNE 8, 1899.

"We need not bid for cloistered cell
Our neighbor and our work farewell,
Nor strive to wind ourselves too high
For sinful man beneath the sky:
The trivial round, the common task,
Would furnish all we ought to ask—
Room to deny ourselves; a road
To bring us daily nearer God."
—Exchange.

I have lived to know that the secret of happiness is never to allow your energies to stagnate.—Adam Clarke.

Unhappy is the man for whom his own mother has not made all other mothers venerable.—Richter.

When a man has not got a good reason for doing a thing, he has one good reason for letting it alone.—Thos. Scott.

And we may always be sure, whatever we are doing, that we can not be pleasing Him if we are not happy ourselves.—Ruskin.

A book is valuable not solely nor chiefly for the knowledge which it furnishes, but rather for the stimulus which it gives.—Exchange.

Even when your own heart is bleeding you ought not to forget that you are sent of God as a minister of mercy to others who are in distress.—Selected.

Faith draws the poison from every grief, takes the sting from every loss, and quenches the fire of every pain; and only faith can do it.—J. G. Holland.

The man who does not overcome ennui by occupying himself, soon tries to fly from it by intemperance. The idle man is almost necessarily vicious.—Raimondi.

I can hardly understand how any great imaginative man, who has deeply lived, suffered, thought and wrought, can doubt of the soul's continual progress in the after life.—Alfred Tennyson.

He who in poverty, or sickness, or solitude, can preserve a merry heart and a cheerful countenance is a benefactor to society, a testimony to his God, and the best of all possible friends to himself.—Bishop Thoroid.

Love, the true love of God, is the love of his truth, of his holiness, of his whole will; the true love is that which reflects itself in obedience; the true love is that which stirs and purifies the conscience.—Vinet.

My experience of life makes me sure of one thing which I do not try to explain—that the sweetest happiness we ever know comes not from love, but from sacrifice—from the effort to make others happy.—O'Reilly.

Jesus Christ ended the miracles, he only began the parables; and it is for us to carry out those parables and multiply them according to the ever-varying color and tone of the times in which we live.—Joseph Parker.

We are prone to make our lives too commonplace and monotonous, and to plod in a matter-of-fact way, forgetting that there is anything higher than our every-day tasks. In this condition we only half live; our eyes are not lifted from the dead level of mere existence, and our hearts are strangers to the refined enjoyments which might be ours.—Selected.

TAKING OUR BEARINGS.

Just as the seaman, in voyaging over the pathless ocean, makes observations daily in order to ascertain his bearings, so the Christian, as he journeys through the world, ought frequently to examine himself and closely consider the trend of his life, lest he unwarily be deflected out of the right course by the currents of sin and the winds of temptation. "Examine yourselves," says Paul, "whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves." Unless we are careful to take our spiritual bearings every now and then, we are sure to drift with the world, and at last suffer shipwreck on the rocks and shoals of sin.

We are over in danger of forgetting that the world's moral standard is far short of that set forth in the gospel; that its ideals of success and honor are of the earth, earthy. Society condones vice in its gilded forms, encourages shiftlessness, and oft puts a premium on trickery and aristocratic exclusiveness. It measures men not by what they are, but by what they are worth, by the dignity of the positions they occupy. The world sets the seal of approval upon many things that, if not absolutely evil, at least tend to lower the spiritual life, and weaken religious convictions. It pretends to see no harm in the Sunday newspaper, in the dance that has corrupted thousands, in cards, the recognized tools of gamblers; in the theatre, which, in the majority of instances, scarcely deserves any better name than that of "a school of vice and vulgarity." The world ever puts gain before godliness, show before substantiality, self-gratification before self-denial, prudence before principle, policy before truth.

It matters little, according to the world's notions, that a man is selfish and extravagant, that he is not God-fearing and prayerful, that he is a neglecter of religion. If he be a man who succeeds in business and who shows himself public-spirited, he is regarded as a model citizen. But, alas! there are many who conform to this standard who are deficient in the eyes of God. "Going about to establish their own righteousness, they have not submitted themselves to the righteousness which is of God."

We can easily ascertain our religious state by asking ourselves what we love most. Our lives are no better than the object that is supreme in our thoughts and affections. Whatever we are most concerned about determines whether we are moving heavenward or heliward. We ought frequently to ask ourselves questions like these: "Which worries us most—loss of goodness or goods? A fall from grace or a fall of stocks? Which interests us most—the conversion of a soul to Christ, or the conversion of a note into cash? Are we coming to feel more and more at home in the thought of heaven and the angels and the life of the Spirit?"

It is only the man whose life is a real offering to God who can say, "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed to him." God does not give his peace to a half-hearted disciple any more than a king would entrust his treasures to a subject whose loyalty was under suspicion. "Love not the world, neither the things of the world," says the Apostle John. "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." As Henry Drummond significantly remarked: "John says of the world, not that it is wrong, but simply that it passeth away. There is a great deal in the world that is delightful and beautiful, that is great and engrossing, but it will not last. All that is in the world—the lust of the eye, the lust of the flesh, and the pride of life—are but for a little while. Therefore, love not the world. Nothing that it contains is worth the life and consecration of an immortal soul."

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

The Hon. John D. Long, Secretary of the Navy, contributes to Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly, for June, a complete and interesting account of "The Building of the New Navy." Besides Secretary Long's illustrated article upon "The New Navy," the number contains the following articles: "The Building of a Battleship," by Frederick J. Gauntlett, with splendid pictures of the new Kearsarge and Kentucky; "From Stone to Steel," by George Willis Bardwell, a richly illustrated paper reviewing the history of arms and armor, from the rude weapons of the stone age to the modern Krag-Jorgensen rifle; "In Hayti in War-Time," by Reuben Briggs Davenport; "The Horseless Carriage," by Mary Sargent Hopkins, and "Women as Travelers," by Margherita Arlina Hamm, in the popular Woman in Action series.

Among the important papers in the June Forum are: "The Crisis in the Church of England," by Francis Allston Channing, M. P.; "The Value of Porto Rico," by Robert T. Hill; "England's Decadence in the West Indies," by Brooks Adams, and "Some Light on the Canadian Enigma," by A. Maurice Low.

The leading article in Appletons' Popular Science Monthly, for June, contains an important announcement by Prof. G. F. Wright regarding a "New Method of Estimating the Age of Niagara Falls." "San Francisco of the North" is an article by Prof. Angelo Heilprin, giving an account of Dawson, the metropolis of the Klondike. "The Reptiles and Fishes of the West Indies," by Dr. F. L. Oswald, describes and pictures a number of the curious creatures which inhabit the newest of our possessions. Prof. Pelham Edgar contributes an interesting essay entitled, "Tendencies in French Literature." "The Botany of Shakespeare," by Thomas H. Macbride, calls attention to one of many interesting sides of the great bard's work.

In the American Monthly Review of Reviews, for June, Mr. Byron W. Holt contributes an article on "Trusts—The Rush to Industrial Monopoly," in which he sets forth the facts in connection with the recent startling development of the trust-forming mania, as it is beginning to be called. Mr. W. T. Stead writes on "Oliver Cromwell and the National Church of England." The Hon. Charles W. Kindrick, United States consul at Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, contributes an interesting account of the Mormon settlements in Mexico, of which little is known in this country. Mrs. Leonora Beck Ellis describes the recent progress in agricultural methods made by the Southern States, as illustrated in the work of the Georgia Experiment Station.

The June number of The American Illustrated Methodist Magazine opens with "Shakespeare's One Hero: a Drama of 1599," referring, of course, to "Henry V." "A Ramble in Naples," by Dora M. Jones, is of exceptional interest, both in matter and illustrations. The fourth in the series of "Famous Hymn Writers" papers treats of Joseph Addison. "The Theology of Byron" is the rather startling subject of a beautifully illustrated article. The fourth part of "The Illustrated History of Methodism" treats of the Wesleys in America. The paper is richly illustrated with Georgia scenes which are of especial importance in this article because of their association with John Wesley, the founder of Methodism.

The June Century is an out-of-doors number. Outdoor papers in this number are Capt. J. C. Ayres's "After Big Game with Packs," an illustrated account of a hunting expedition in which pack-mules played an important part; "Out of Doors in Texas," by E. S. Nadal, author of the delightful "Notes of a Professional Exile," and "Out of Doors in Colorado," by H. P. Ufford. In the same out-of-doors category is "The Tramp and the Railroads," in which Josiah Flynt, the well-known expert in tramp life, presents the results of an investigation of the means adopted by a great railroad to abate the tramp nuisance on its lines. Mr. Crawford's "Via Crucis" is continued, and there are short stories by Tudor Jenks, Ruth McEnery Stuart, and Senmas McManus, author of "Through the Peat Smoke."

Sister Harriet Gibson, of Summit, Miss., in renewing her subscription to the ADVOCATE, writes: "I have just passed my seventy-fifth natal day, and have had my church paper in my home for the past sixty-five years." This is an excellent record. Would that all Methodist homes were of this type.

RESOLUTIONS.

The following preamble and resolutions were offered May 9, 1899, by Board of Trustees, Grenada Female College, in called meeting:

"Whereas, Rev. J. W. Malone, A. M., has unconditionally tendered his resignation as president of Grenada Female College; And, whereas, Dr. Malone has accomplished more for our school than the most sanguine friends of the institution expected, and by his wise management, safe financial methods, and untiring efforts, he has increased the patronage of our college beyond the capacity of the present building—best of all, he and his noble Christian wife, aided by their excellent faculty, have developed the Christian experience and usefulness of the daughters committed to their care; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we highly appreciate Dr. Malone's wise, active, faithful and valuable services for Christian education throughout the North Mississippi Conference for our girls.

"Resolved, That we have implicit confidence in his ability to further the very important interests of educating our daughters.

"Resolved, We truly regret to lose him and his excellent and efficient wife from Grenada College.

"Resolved, That our earnest prayers and sincere regards shall be with him for his continued success."

The above preamble and resolutions were voted upon as a whole, and unanimously adopted by the Board. JNO. W. GRIFFIS, Sec'y.

THE MILLSAPS COLLEGIAN.

The June number of the Millsaps Collegian will give a fair picture of college life. It will contain eleven full-page pictures and much interesting reading matter. It is desired to put a copy in the hands of every boy who thinks of going off to college. The Collegian will appear about June 25. As the edition is not large, every friend of the college who would like to see a copy of the magazine is invited to file his application at once. Apply by postal card to the business manager, E. H. Galloway, Jackson, Miss.

W. L. WEBER.

MILLSAPS COMMENCEMENT.

The commencement sermon of Millsaps College will be preached by Bishop W. A. Candler, Sunday morning, June 18. At night the Rev. Dr. W. T. Bolling, of the Louisiana Conference, will preach the annual sermon before the Y. M. C. A.

Bishop Candler will deliver the annual address Monday morning, the nineteenth. The Board of Trustees will meet Monday morning.

Entertainment will be provided for our preachers if they will notify our pastors, the Rev. R. J. Jones or the Rev. R. W. Bailey, of their purpose to attend. W. B. MURRAH.

REMARKABLE MOVEMENT IN FRANCE.

The Methodist Times, of London, brings intelligence of a most remarkable religious movement in France; which is nothing less than the breaking away of hundreds and thousands of priests and people from the Roman Catholic Church. The matter was lately called to the attention of the president of the British Wesleyan Conference by the Bishop of one of the Oriental churches. After hearing the matter the president called into the Conference Mr. Percy F. Bunting, one of the most honored and trusted of British Wesleyan laymen, with the result that the Abbe Bourrier, the leader of the movement, was invited to London, and was Mr. Bunting's guest for a week. Full information on the subject was given by the French expriest, who also accepted an invitation to return to London during the sitting of the British Wesleyan Conference in July, and attend a meeting of the ministers, and address them on the subject.

It is believed that when the movement has been properly developed four or five thousand Romish priests will be found in it. Hundreds have already committed themselves, and are preaching a pure and simple gospel. This is its character—a revival of pure religion and the abandonment of the corruptions of the papacy. The Romish hierarchy does not seem able so far to stem the tide. So good and pure a man is the Abbe Bourrier that his former associates have not adopted their usual methods of scurrilous attack; they still treat him with respect.

A paper has been started in the interest of a new Reformation which is said to have not fewer than fifteen hundred subscribers among the priests, a number of whom are attending the lectures of Protestant professors of theology.

This is, in brief, the case as outlined by the Times. To what it may grow, no one can tell. Much influence in awakening this state of affairs is attributed to the late Spanish-American war. It has opened the eyes of many to the real conditions of the Romish world. It is the most significant that these things should appear in France, heretofore for many years the political bulwark of the papacy. Further information will be awaited with interest.—Pittsburgh Advocate.

SUNDAY NEWSPAPERS IN ENGLAND.

The second attempt to start Sunday newspapers in London is not likely to succeed any better than the one made some years ago by an enterprising American. Two of the leading dailies recently announced a Sunday edition. An indignant storm of protests was raised at once. The Bishop of London, John Burns the labor leader, Sidney Webb the socialist, Hugh Price Hughes and other Nonconformists were united in opposing this robbery of the British working-men in taking away their day of rest. Lord Rosebery declared his opposition to the plan and publicly besought the rival proprietors to declare a "truce of God." The secretary of state for home affairs, replying to a deputation of prominent leaders, declared that, while he did not see how the Government could take action, he was entirely in sympathy with the opposition to the new departure. One of the offending publishers offered to suspend further publication if his rival would do the same, but up to this time he has not consented. In the face of such a wide-spread opposition, added to the fact that the venture is a losing one, it is not likely that there will be many more issues of Sunday papers in England for some years to come.—Zion's Herald.

A PROBLEM.

There is a strange thing seen in the difference with which men often treat others in the journey of life. While the faithful toilers are in the ordinary walks, trying to discharge their duties and do the work before them, there are many to criticise and discount their works or methods. This disposition seems to become more marked toward one who shows signs of success and of reaching a high place in the esteem of the world or the church. It seems hard for some people to forgive a man who succeeds. That seems to be the case, at least, until he reaches the highest success. At that point the ordinary fault-finders cease their carpings and proceed to invest the fortunate hero with all the virtues of their ideal perfection. Only the boldest carpers then keep up the firing. Why is this so? Why do some people want to keep others down as long as they can; and, when they fail, why do they turn their fault-findings into adulations? This is a problem in depraved humanity! Who can solve it?—Wesleyan Advocate.

Bishop Hendrix, in a lecture, is reported to have said: "Methodism to-day preaches the gospel in more tongues than were spoken in the whole Roman empire in her proudest days; and her children taken together in all lands outnumber the entire hosts of Christianity at the end of the first two centuries."—Exchange.

An early-to-bed club is an organization which has recently been started in Washington. There is an attempt being made in that city, and also in Philadelphia, among society leaders to inaugurate a reform in the hours for evening entertainments. This movement has reached organization, and is known as the "Early Hour League" in Philadelphia, and the "Early-to-Bed Club" in Washington, where it has the sanction of many women prominent in official life, among them Mrs. Lyman J. Gage, one of the most delightful of the Cabinet hostesses. The Washington society proposes to enter upon an educational campaign in this line by means of lectures by specialists on this particular phase of hygienic living. The necessity for sleep at night, and the practice of turning night into day, will be points to which special attention will be called. The movement, as started by the society set, is of value, and should work at least a modicum of reform.—Standard.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Jackson, La., EDITOR.

The Mississippians will not forget their coming Conference. Time—June 22-25. Place—West Point, Miss.

Those who heard Bro. Joe Ramsey at Wator Valley in '97 will not miss hearing him at West Point. Joe is an all-right, up-to-date Leagner.

Rev. P. L Cobb will be present to stir the missionary conscience of the Mississippians. Lonisiana responded liberally at Crowley; Mississippi will, doubtless, do her part.

The five-cent assessment for State work should be paid at once by each Leagner in Mississippi. Let the treasurer of each chapter see to this, and remit at once to Miss Vic Thompson, Tupelo, Miss.

Those who expect to attend the Conference should send their names at once to Miss Josie Critz, West Point, Miss. This is important; do not delay.

Of course, great things are expected of Bishop Galloway and Dr. DuBose. Mississippi claims them both, and is justly proud of her sons, who now deservedly occupy high places in the "connection."

We have not had the pleasure of perusing the programme, but are sure that it will equal and, perhaps, excel any previously arranged in Mississippi. From every part of the State the young people are expected. West Point extends unbounded hospitality, and will open wide her doors to receive the honored guests.

The Louisiana Leagners are hereby reminded of the address of their newly-elected treasurer: A. S. Daniels, Esq., 348 Oliver street, Algiers, La. He is in a receptive mood, and will be glad to hear from the Leagues who recently pledged amounts for "Specials."

The Shreveport and Arcadia districts have recently held very interesting and helpful League Conferences within their bounds—the one at Shreveport and the other at Minden. Encouraging reports reach us from these gatherings among the young people, and we are assured of development and larger efficiency in the work which God has called them to do. Lonisiana is in line, and moving to the front.

The photo and description of the Albert Sidney Johnston monument, which recently appeared in the Epworth Era, was furnished by Mr. F. J. W. Pflug, the efficient foreman of the printing force of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

The Epworth League at Ocala, Fla., recently observed "Old Folks' Day." Invitations were issued to all the old church members, and carriages were sent for those unable to walk. The church was handsomely decorated, and beautifully printed Scripture verses for the encouragement of the aged were hung upon the walls. A programme was arranged, and a sermon preached by the pastor. The day marked an epoch in the lives of these "fathers and mothers in Israel." May God bless these young Leagners for their thoughtful care and kindness toward the aged!

TAKE NOTICE.

The Inter-State (Mississippi, Alabama and Lonisiana) Epworth League Conference will be held (D. V.) on Seashore Camp Ground, near Biloxi, Miss., Aug 15-25.

The object of this gathering of Leaguers and Christian workers is to promote systematic study of God's Word, awaken a more intelligent interest in missions, and to bind into closer union these Christian workers in order that the Gulf States may be won for Christ.

To accomplish the above the following branches of work have been organized, viz.:

I.—BIBLE CLASSES.

One of the greatest needs of our League is properly organized Bible study; therefore, special efforts will be made to train Leagners in this work that they may go back to their Leagues and teach. There will be two Bible classes taught at the same hour each morning. It is desired that each student take up one of these courses, and for this reason the classes will meet at the same hour. One well-defined course thoroughly covered will be of more benefit than two courses lightly or hurriedly studied. Two competent, experienced, successful teachers will conduct those classes. Bring your Bible and note book.

II.—MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

One hour each forenoon will be devoted to the study of modern missionary movements and methods. This important branch will be conducted by P. L. Cobb, of Nashville, Tenn., assisted by an efficient corps of workers.

III.—CONFERENCE.

An open Conference will be held each day for the practical discussion of principles and methods pertaining to League work.

IV.—DECISION MEETINGS.

Every evening at twilight there will be held on the beach a short meeting for the purpose of getting the unconverted to decide for Christ and the Christians to decide to engage in some specific work for the Master.

V.

Addresses and lectures will be delivered each evening by prominent speakers. The list of names will be published later.

RECREATION.

The entire afternoon of each day will be given to recreation.

EXPENSES.

Board can be had on the grounds as cheap as five ($5) dollars per week. No tuition will be charged; but a gate fee of fifty cents will be taken on entering the grounds; a season ticket will be sold for one dollar.

The Camp Ground is on the L. and N. R. R, 78 miles from New Orleans, and 62 miles from Mobile, Ala. Reduced rates will be given over this road.

While the Conference is called primarily for Epworth Leagners, yet any who will come will be granted all the privileges and will receive a cordial welcome.

You can spend your vacation in no more delightful or profitable way than by attending this Conference or Summer school.

To the Members of the Shreveport District Conference

VERNON AND SABINE.

We found all moving on well on the Florien circuit; Rev. S. S. Holladay, preacher in charge. The Quarterly Conference, held at Holly Grove, in Vernon parish, on Wednesday, May 24, was largely attended, and the pastor reported both foreign and domestic missions as paid in full. It is confidently expected that a perfect report will go up from this charge, in which event the people desire to be given their former and time-honored name of Anacoco.

Taking train to Many, and buggy in company with Rev. J. S. Sanders, we were on hand at Fort Jessup to preach the commencement sermon for the splendid institution located at that historic point. President C. C. Lewis informed us that he had enrolled 172 students, which indicates prosperity. He is assisted by an able faculty, and good work is being done for the youth of both sexes who attend at Fort Jessup. Midway between the Red and Sabine rivers, it is one of the highest points in Northwest Lonisiana and unsurpassed for healthfulness. The society and moral surroundings are most excellent, and there are no saloons to destroy the young. In the long ago Fort Jessup was the headquarters of one of the U. S. military districts; and, while Gen. Zachary Taylor was in command and residing there, young Lieut. Jefferson Davis ran off with and married his daughter. We saw the pillars standing yet of the old fort, and went into an old, but well preserved and capacious house, where Rough and Ready made his residence. The old style of fireplace is the very expression of hospitality; it is so wide, deep and high, and the rooms are no pent-up Uticas, either. I have rarely enjoyed a drink of water as I did that drawn from the bottom of the deep well out of which Taylor, Davis and other military chieftains used to drink. We drank from the old oaken bucket itself, and found the draught cool and refreshing, and felt strengthened to fight Indians, Yankees, Spaniards and any comers. Let us hope, however, that arbitration and peaceful settlements will hereafter be had among the nations to the forever passing of the dread abitrament of arms.

After holding Quarterly Conference at Jessup, and noting the fine report of Rev. J. S. Sanders, the preacher in charge, who has his work on rising ground, missionary collections up and out-look encouraging; and, after the Conference had made a wise declaration on a vexed organ question as to whether that instrument should remain or be put out of a certain progressive church on the circuit, we returned to Many, and next day by train went to Zwolle, and then by buggy to Bayou Scie Church, where we found the pastor, Rev. R. P. Howell, in the midst of a gracious revival. The Quarterly Conference at Bayou Scie showed the Zwolle charge to be in first-class condition. Bro. Howell has good ground to feel that at Monroe, in December, he can say to Bishop Galloway: "Everything in full, Bishop, and many souls saved." These three brethren down on the K. C., P. and Gulf railroad have all had success in the chief thing God has given them to do—the winning of precious souls. Back in Shreveport, we occupy our room just for a night and are off in the morning. JOHN T. SAWYER.

PAINT TALKS—XVII.

THE SECONDARY EVILS OF "CHALKING."

If it were true that all other paints excepting white lead come off in scales or flakes and that all paints do come off in time, the assertion that chalking is a virtue might have some plausibility. But, fortunately, the assertion is not true. All paints wear out in time, from the abrasive action of the elements; but if we have two paints, one of which wears away from the surface by the grinding action of rain, hail, snow and dust, leaving the remaining paint still impervious and resisting, while the other paint decomposes, becomes porous, and disintegrates throughout its entire substance, it is evident that the former of these two paints affords the better protection.

"Chalking" or crumbling is an inherent defect in all pure white lead paints, and no care in manufacture or preparation will obviate it. It is due to the unstable chemical nature of the pigment and to its low oil-carrying capacity. On the other hand, properly made zinc paints do not chalk, but wear away.

It is easy to understand why painters like a chalking paint. Even if they have no selfish motive in wishing the paint to decay quickly, they like to be able to brush off the dusty old paint and soak in a new coat: the job is so ridiculously easy, and then the spongy surface uses up a great deal of paint, which makes it profitable.

But this porous surface which so greedily absorbs oil, takes up water with as much avidity, as any one can demonstrate by applying a soaked sponge to a chalky surface. This casual fact simply means that a chalky paint no longer protects the surface, but actually acts as a sponge to hold water, and thus does more harm than good.

Another secondary evil of the chalking and dusting off of white lead is the poisonous nature of the dust. The action of lead on the system is slow, but it is sure, and no one that is exposed to it can entirely escape its consequences.

The remedy is obvious. Use a paint that does not chalk. Such paints are offered in abundance, and they are all based on zinc white. Or if anyone is so prejudiced that white lead has become a fetich, at least give it some semblance of durability by covering it with zinc white, or by having zinc white ground into it; and zinc in a paint, whatever other ingredients it may contain, absolutely prevents chalking.

SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR PANORAMA
is one of the war books which is likely to be in continuous demand. It is a panoramic record of the triumph of Yankee Doodle. The eagle flaps his wings on every page, and "Old Glory" waves around and above every scene. Prominent officers connected with the war are here portrayed, as well as many of the "men behind the guns." Military life is pictured to the eye, from recruiting to guard mount and skirmish line. Nor is the ludicrous omitted. The company cook receives the attention due to his importance; the mess is shown; cavalry scenes are given; the hospital arrangements are depicted; the heroines of the Red Cross service are displayed; street scenes in Havana, Santiago and elsewhere are unrolled, the new citizens or subjects (which are they?) of Uncle Sam appear and disappear as the leaves are turned.
In a word, the gazer visits the new localities and sees the tumultuous new life, without the risk or expense of a sea voyage.

SOCRATES died from a cup of poison administered by the hand of a friend. How many in this land have died by poisonous remedies given by friendly hands to combat diseases? THE COMPANY WHO TRY.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

Yes, I love the little winner,
With the medal and the mark;
He has gained the prize he sought for,
He is joyous as a lark.
Everyone will haste to praise him;
He is on the honor list.
I've a tender thought, my darlings,
For the one who tried, and missed.

One? Ah me! they count by thousands
Those who have not gained the race,
Though they did their best and fairest,
Striving for the winner's place.
Only few can reach the laurel;
Many see their chance flit by.
I've a tender thought, my darlings,
For the earnest band who try.

'Tis the trying that is noble,
If you're made of sterner stuff
Than the laggards who are damned
When the bit of road is rough.
All will praise the happy winners;
But when they have hurried by,
I've a song to cheer, my darlings,
The great company who try.

—Success.

WHAT IS A BEAUTIFUL HOME?

The other day I happened to hear a girl of about sixteen say in a discontented and rather vexed tone: "We certainly have the meanest, homeliest, most dilapidated old house ever built. Maybe I don't wish the old thing would catch itself on fire, and I tell you I would make it burn all the harder by throwing in those old chairs that look as though they were made in the year one, and those hideous old curtains that would take the prize anywhere for their ugliness, and then that miserable, horrid, old book-case. Mama, where on earth did you manage to get such an ugly piece, anyway?"

The mother's reply was: "Well, dear, those chairs do look rather old, but we got them when we could afford no better, and as times are still hard, they will have to do till times change. Those curtains are not the latest, but they are all we have, and while the book-case is not a good one, it holds some of the best of books, and what more would you ask? We ought to be very thankful for what we have, and not always be grumbling because we do not have more."

The daughter did not reply, but rather sullenly left the room, and I could not help thinking that if that kind, gentle mother should be taken out of that home, her daughter would think differently about what she had just been saying. Or if her pleasant, hard-working father and her jolly, good-hearted, brother should have to leave that home, she would see that it is not the furniture that makes a home pleasant, but the hearts that are in it.

And is not this the way with a great many of us? We are constantly grumbling because we have not something that we would like to have, while if we would stop to think what we do possess, and if some of those that are so dear to us should be taken out of our homes, what we would not possess, we would surely stop our grumbling and live more happy and contented lives.

What more ought we to ask for than to have those we love and cherish with us, and with these we can surely make the poorest of houses the happiest and most beautiful of homes. H.

GOOD ASSOCIATES.

How careless parents are in regard to the associates of their children and who their instructors are! Much depends on this. It is not at all difficult to see the changes produced on the minds of children by their contact with different companions. It is the same as to the influence of instructors. Give a child a true, noble man as a teacher, a man of character and decision, and the mark will be left upon the child. This was illustrated very prominently in Dr. Arnold, of Rugby. The influence he exercised upon the young mind was simply wonderful. A biographer says of him: "His very presence seemed to create a new spring of health and vigor within them, and to give life an interest and elevation which remained with them long after they had left him, and dwelt so habitually in their thoughts as a living image, that when death had taken him away the bond appeared to be still unbroken, and the sense of separation almost lost in the still deeper sense of a life and a union indestructible." It was the same with Dugald Stewart. Of him a prominent Englishman says: "To me his lectures were like the opening of the heavens; I felt that I had a soul. His noble views, unfolded in glorious sentences, elevated me into a higher world. They changed my whole nature."

We can not at all estimate how much good goodness makes. No man that is good is alone. And his goodness, like the circle caused by throwing a stone into the water, widens until it has reached the shores of the better land. There are men in whose presence we are sure to feel almost as though we were in the presence of an angel. It will certainly be for our advantage if we seek as our companions the truly good, whether it be their living presence, or the power and influence they have left through their books. The radiating force they exert is great. If we come within that circle, we can not help but feel their power on our own lives and character. Do you wish to be like Christ? Then seek his company. Do you desire to feel the influence of good men? Then walk with them, talk with them, and you will feel the touch of that which inspires.—The Christian World.

OUT OF LIFE'S SILENCE.

The gems of the world's literature, the marvelous inventions of science and art, grand thoughts and words which live age after age, are results of long pondering in silence. From the silent studio of a Raphael comes at length the work of art before which the world pauses in rapt enthusiasm.

The poet broods long in silence, and then gives to the world his immortal song, and it sings on for ages in the hearts of men.

The inventor knits his brow and bends over his models with intent, absorbing interest, in the hush of many a midnight, and by and by you see his perfected machine—a boon to the toiling race.

The orator shuts his doors, and in secret evolves great thoughts, and writes grand sentences, and polishes majestic periods; and thousands are moved and swayed by his burning eloquence when he comes forth to speak; and tyranny, oppression, and wrong are swept away.

The Christian lingers longer in the solemn hush of prayer and meditation, and when he reappears his face glows, his voice is fired with an inspiration born of heaven, and his arm is strong to do valiant deeds for his Lord.—Selected.

DUTY OF HAVING TACT.

Tact in speech and in action is a potent factor in personal influence. "Tact" means touch; it is commonly used as meaning skillful and delicate touch. He who would touch others without paining or repelling them must touch tenderly and wisely. An oculist must have a care while removing a speck of dust from the eye, to reach the speck without harming the eye; that requires tact. A man who would correct another for a fault, needs to indicate the fault without disturbing the temper; that requires tact. Touch that does what is needful without doing what is not necessary, is tact. Tact is something that we may lack, to begin with, but we have no right to live without it. Christina Rossetti says: "Tact is a gift; it is likewise a grace. As a gift, it may or may not have fallen to our share; as a grace, we are bound either to possess or to acquire it."—Sunday-School Times.

This is true sunshine, for "Love is sunshine."—The King's Messenger.

There is always some one to smile at, somebody to give your chair to, somebody to whom a book, flower, or even an old paper, would be a boon. These small attentions will open the way to confidence, will make it possible that in need these friends will give you opportunities to help them, which, unless you had shown thoughtfulness and regard for them, they could never have done. A quiet, sympathetic look or smile many a time unbars a heart that needs help which you can give.—Exchange.

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT,

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living

Hygiene.

SLEEP AS A REMEDY.

Of two men or women, otherwise equal, the one who sleeps the best will be the most moral, healthy, and efficient. Sleep will do much to cure irritability of temper, peevishness, and uneasiness. With some modification, the following from an exchange is commended: It will restore to vigor an overworked brain. It will build up and make strong a weary body. It will cure a headache. It will cure a broken spirit. It will cure sorrow. Indeed, we might make a long list of nervous and other maladies that sleep will cure.

"FRUIT CURE" THE LATEST.

According to a health expert, blanched almonds give the highest nerve or brain and muscle food, and the man who wishes to keep up his brain power will do well to include them in his bill of fare. Juicy fruits give nerve or brain food. Apples supply the brain with rest. Prunes are said to afford proof against nervousness. They should be avoided by those who suffer from the liver. It has been proved that fruits do not have the same effect upon everybody. Some men can not eat apples without suffering from acute dyspepsia. "Fruit cure" is a form of treatment which is quite the rage in continental Europe now with persons suffering from real or imaginary maladies.

That fruit is a most valuable article of food can not be denied, and that many diseases may be greatly benefited by a diet largely composed of fruit is true enough. It is a fact, too, that the majority of people eat more meat than they require. Meat eaten once a day is sufficient for a person not engaged in manual labor, or who does not take much strong out-door exercise. A large number of the complaints contracted owe their origin to the consumption of food which entails a greater drain on the gastric juices than the system is able to withstand. The cures attributed to the grape occur, for the most part, with those who are accustomed to high living, and are really owing to the fact that the organs of digestion are given a much-needed rest. Semi-starvation would answer the purpose almost as well. For the person whose work lies chiefly indoors, a mixed and varied diet is most conducive to good health.—New York Medical Record.

IMPORTANCE OF FRUIT.

Prof. Gradley says: Each year people appreciate more fully the value of fruit, and eat it, not as a luxury, but as a food. Fruits are nourishing, refreshing, appetizing and purifying, and consequently have effect upon the health and the complexion. Grapes and apples are highly nutritious. Grapes usually agree with the most delicate persons, for they are easily digested. Nothing is easier to digest than a baked apple, taken either with or without cream. Oranges, lemons and limes are of some value as a means of improving the complexion, and they are especially good if taken before breakfast, with moderation.

Ripe peaches are easy of digestion and are fattening. Nothing is better to enrich the blood than strawberries, which contain a larger percentage of iron than any other fruit. Fruits with firm flesh, like apples, cherries or plums, should be thoroughly masticated, otherwise they are difficult to digest. The skin of raw fruit should never be eaten, and before eating grapes or any small fruit, care should be taken to remove all impurities by washing. Never swallow grape stones. Stale fruit and unripe fruit should never be eaten, and very acid fruit should not be taken with farinaceous foods.—Practical Review.

OUR $1 OFFER.

Much has been said about reducing the subscription price of the ADVOCATE. The only way in which a reduction can be brought about is by an increase in the number of subscribers. In order to facilitate this result, we make the following offer: Until further notice we will take new subscriptions at the rate of $1 for eight months. When seven thousand five hundred new names have been sent in at this rate with the cash, we will extend the time four months longer, thus reducing the price to $1 per annum. When the extension is made, old subscribers will get the benefit as well as new ones, provided they first pay up all arrearages. Of course, no commissions can be given under this offer. Address

KENT—COBB—A most sad thing has occurred with us on Pleasant Grove circuit, at which Church, Panola county, Miss. As we pass along the road now we go by a home entirely desolate, since death has taken every inmate from it. On March 15 the soul of Mr. JEFF. KENT left the world, and while we were gathering for the funeral service, Grandma ELIZABETH COBB died March 16, and while arranging her body for the grave, Sister HARRIET KENT, her daughter, and wife of Bro. JEFF. KENT, was taken very ill, and lingering in great pain, departed April 5, 1899. Then Sister N. A. COBB, who had been in the home attending the sick, was seized with violent pneumonia, and died also April 12, 1899.

Bro. Kent professed conversion some years since under the ministry of our sainted Bro. H. P. GIBBS, but never joined any church.

Grandma Cobb was a faithful Christian and member of our church, and whose life was sweet and fragrant. Her deeds of kindness and spirit of love will be long remembered. A large alliance was present upon the funeral service, which, by her request some years before, was conducted by Bro. W. H. Eskies.

Sister Harriet Kent was an active, consistent member of the M. E. Church, South. She loved her church, with its services and ministry. We visited her in her painful illness, and talked and prayed with her. She said it was all right, and she awaited patiently for the Lord's will to be done.

Sister N. A. Cobb, wife of C. M. Cobb, was an active member of the Baptist Church fifty years, and belonged to Peach Creek congregation. She was one of the pillars of her church, regular in her attention to all of its interests, and very much loved by its members. She prepared for death beforehand, selecting the text and preacher for the funeral service. Bro. W. H. Eskies, L. E., preached a touching discourse to a large audience in the church where she had so long worshiped; then we laid her away gently in the neat cemetery near by, which her own care had prepared, because she loved those who slept there.

May God, in his infinite goodness, comfort the sorrowing daughter and strengthen the faith of all of us, that we may humbly bow to his will, and wait until what we "know not now, but shall know hereafter," shall be revealed, and all those who sleep in him shall be united in our heavenly home!

BEN P. JACO, P. C.

Pleasant Grove, Miss.

TILLMAN—The home of C. H. Tillman was a happy one—a fond father, a devoted mother, brothers and sisters. But the great interest and love of the family seemed centered in the two little ones, "WILLIE BENNETT" and ROSA, both so near the same age—so inseparable in life, so truly devoted to each other, that when scarce two months ago death entered that happy home and "Willie Bennett" was taken from their midst, Rosa, fair-haired, blue-eyed, beautiful baby child, grew lonely and heartsick for "little sister," and wanted to go, too. Can we say that God did not hear her plaint, and in loving kindness send the "little sister" after her? It was of just such little ones that Christ said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." And on the eighteenth of April little Rosa, the pet and idol, left the home desolate, the hearts of the devoted ones almost broken, while sympathizing neighbors and friends could only "sit in the shadow and weep," knowing that God alone could comfort such grief. The shadows are now deep over their pathway, but how bright and joyful will be the day when father and mother and children will be reunited in the beautiful life above that does not end in death and the grave!

"There is never a cross so heavy
But His loving hands are there,
Outstretched in tender compassion,
The burden to help us bear.
There is never a heart that is broken
But the loving Christ can heal,
For the heart that was pierced on Calvary
Doth still for his people feel."

COUSIN ANNIE.

CRANBERRY—BENJAMIN F. CRANBERRY was born Oct. 1, 1817, and died in Coplah county, Miss., Feb. 10, 1899. He was truly converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Pleasant Valley Church, September, 1848, under the faithful and earnest ministry of the Rev. S. L. L. Scott. He lived a consistent Christian life ever afterward, and was noted for his great zeal and the sterling integrity of his character. One of his neighbors, who had known him for many years, said that he had never known a better man—one more true and faithful in all the relations of life. He had a ripe Christian experience, and was ready at all times to give a reason for the hope that was in him. His religion was a happy reality to him. His life was, indeed, fashioned after the blessed life of the Immaculate Son of God. For many years he filled faithfully and well the important office of recording steward. He took an active part in the Sunday-school, and, in fact, all the work of his church. His home was always open to the weary itinerant Methodist preacher. They found a cheerful welcome there. He was a true friend to all in trouble and distress, and a kind and obliging neighbor. Although quite feeble for several years before his death, yet he was cheerful and happy through it all.

He was twice married. His first wife was Amelie Rembert. They were married Dec. 16, 1841, and lived in great happiness for twenty-two years. They were the parents of ten children, five of whom are living. His second wife was Serena Mullins. Both of his wives were noble Christian women. Death had no terrors for him. He has, doubtless, entered into that beautiful home of the soul that our blessed Savior has gone to prepare for all his faithful followers. J. S. PARKER.

WALKER—EMILY WALKER was born in Virginia about the year 1823. She left there in the year 1860, and moved to Mississippi, and married J. H. Walker in November, 1861, and moved from there to Louisiana (Ouachita parish), and lived with him until his death, Aug. 17, 1884. In December, 1884, she moved to Texas (Bell county), and lived there till she died. She joined the M. E. Church, South, when a girl, and died in that church. She said she was willing to go; that she was going to heaven. She talked to her two children; told them to be good and meet her in heaven. She left a son with one child, and a daughter with four children, and one dead. Both of her children are members of the church, but not the church of which she was a member. She was a good mother and a true Christian, and has gone to rest with God. She died at her son's home and her home. Her son did all he could for her as long as she lived. She had been afflicted for fifteen months, so she could not walk. She died Feb. 13, 1899. At her death she said to take care of the negro girl that waited on her the most of her time while she was afflicted, and whom she raised from an infant. She has one sister living in Virginia.

Written by her son, J. Y. WALKER.

FLYNN—Bro. WILLIAM FLYNN was born in the parish of West Baton Rouge, La., Jan. 8, 1851, and died at his home in the city of Baton Rouge, Oct. 6, 1898. He was converted under the ministry of Rev. Mr. Shea in Faunin county, Texas, and united with the church in 1877. At the time of his death he was engaged in planting interests in the vicinity of Baton Rouge. He was a man of genuine worth, sound integrity, and retiring, unassuming demeanor; of good report in secular affairs, and of accredited Christian character. To the day of his death he remained in the fellowship of the M. E. Church, South.

During his last sickness it was my privilege to see him frequently. He was eager for the consolations of the Word of God, and enjoyed the ministry of intercession. The precious promises of the gospel were his constant support and prayer, the sustaining exercise of his faith. In the confession of simple trust in Christ, after a protracted sickness, he was gathered home to God. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." F. N. PARKER.

MOORE—Resolutions of New Salem Sabbath-school, March 12, 1899:

Whereas, Death has again visited our community and claimed one of our members, and caused a deep shadow to fall upon our hearts. The victim was Mrs. MATTIE MOORE. Mrs. Moore was one of our most untiring workers in the Sabbath-school. With heart and hands she was ever ready to do her duty. She was our secretary for a number of years, and performed her duty faithfully. Her bright face and smiles and kind words greet us no more on earth, but she has gone to that home where sorrow, pain and death can never come. While we feel a great loss, her last testimony assures us that it is her eternal gain. Blessed are they that die in the Lord. One by one we will all be gathered home; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we tender our sympathy to her grief-stricken husband and father, mother, brother and sisters, and pray that the Holy Spirit that upheld her in her last hours may be their guide through life, and console their hearts. Blessed assurance that they shall meet beyond the river, where the surges cease to roll.

Resolved, That these resolutions be placed on our Minutes, and a copy be sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, with request to publish same. J. W. YOUNG, for Com.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

JOB EARNED HIS TITLE BY GREAT SUFFERING. Had he flourished in these days, his recourse for consolation would not have been the company of three nagging friends, but a bottle of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL, which has a wonderful power to dissipate the inflammation, cool the feverishness, and completely cure boils and carbuncles.

NAPOLEON LOST THE BATTLE OF LEIPSIC because of a fit of indigestion. One dose of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL would have given him instant relief, and the fate of the kingdoms of Europe been decided differently. A Great Combine
Trusts and Combines in many lines of production, and controlling the output of many factories, have recently been formed, some Capitalized at Millions and other similar organizations are projected. It is not our purpose to discuss here the influence of these trusts, whether beneficial to public interests or otherwise; but we wish to announce to our readers that which is not prejudicial to any interests, but which, on the contrary, is directly in favor of every reader of this paper.
WE HAVE ENTERED A COMBINATION
HERE IS THE PLAN
A splendid illustrated MONTHLY, devoted to the cause of Methodism throughout this broad land and called THE AMERICAN ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE, is published in St. Louis, with offices in New York and Chicago. It is the peer of the best of the popular magazines in illustration, literature, and typographical excellence, and is designed to be to the Methodist membership of about six millions in America, what the popular secular magazine is to the general reading public. The Magazine is not a competitor of any of the other Church periodicals; it is general in its scope. It is the ONLY ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE PUBLISHED MONTHLY IN THE UNITED STATES, and occupies a field distinctly its own. Its aims and purposes are of the highest. Its ideals are: THE PUREST IN LITERATURE, THE HIGHEST IN ART, THE NOBLEST IN METHODISM. It is a worthy exponent of the great Church it so ably represents.

Some Opinions of Representative Methodists, North and South.

"The American Illustrated Methodist Magazine should be welcomed by the whole Methodist family. Many a number will contain articles worth ten times the subscription price." —Bishop Charles C. McCabe.

"Fair, sweet-toned, appetizing." —Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.

"Our common Methodism is to be congratulated on this valuable accession to our periodical treasures. I hope every Christian will have this beautiful Magazine." —Bishop John F. Hurst.

"It takes rank with the best for its varied and rich table of contents. A valuable auxiliary to our Epworth League work." —Bishop E. R. Hendrix.

The Press, Denominational and Secular, Speak in Highest Terms.

"A future of gratifying success and large usefulness is assured it." —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"The contributions compare well with those of any other Magazine of the day and its illustrations are excelled by none." —Pittsburg (Pa.) Daily News.

"Interesting and attractive, not only to Methodists but also to the general reading public, for the matter which fills the pages is of a character broader than the title would indicate." —Columbus (O.) Dispatch.

"The prospectus of the Magazine indicates that there is an abundant feast of good things in store for its readers; but the Magazine itself is better than any prospectus." —The Pittsburg (Pa.) Times.

"The scholarship of the Magazine is insured by the editorship of Revs. James W. Lee and Naphtali Luccock, who are known and loved in St. Louis and throughout the West." —St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"It compares favorably with the best of them, and is a brilliant success from the beginning." —Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.

"We most heartily commend it to our people as a high-grade periodical, worthy to take its place in every Methodist home." —New Orleans Christian Advocate.

"It will aim to advocate and magnify the things which world-wide Methodism holds in common, and especially to be a factor in the cultivation of fraternal relations between the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." —Central Christian Advocate.

"The letter press is superb, the illustrations first-class and the reading matter thoroughly instructive, entertaining and edifying." —Pennsylvania Methodist.

"A triumph of literary talent and mechanical art." —St. Louis Christian Advocate.

"We welcome it, relish it and recommend it." —Western Christian Advocate.

"It takes high rank with the best periodical literature of the day." —Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

"We cannot but give to the Magazine our best wishes, and hope for it great success." —Texas Christian Advocate.

To these might be added hundreds of testimonials from Church officials, pastors and laymen, North and South, all praising the Magazine for its intrinsic worth and its lofty purpose.

"THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF METHODISM," which is being published serially in the Magazine, is a feature of marked interest, and is alone worth the subscription price; but the History is only one of the many interesting and artistic features of each number.

Every Methodist family should be a subscriber. Its price is so small all can afford it, but in combination with this paper an opportunity is offered to secure both publications for little more than the cost of one alone.

The subscription price of THE AMERICAN ILLUSTRATED METHODIST MAGAZINE is $1.00 a year; the subscription price of this paper is $2.00 a year. We will supply BOTH one year for $2.65 in advance.

This is our GREAT COMBINE—a TRUST organized solely in the interests of our readers, and which they are invited to join. Do not delay.

THIS OFFER WILL EXPIRE JUNE 8.

Take notice that in order to get the benefit of this offer you must first pay all arrearages. In order to ascertain the amount of your arrearage, look at the label on your paper and count the months from the date there given to May, '99. Then send 16⅔ cents for each month. Add to this $2.65.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

An election was beldin this city, on Tuesday, in which the question of drainage and sewerage was decided. Only property holders, or their proxies, were entitled to vote. A large majority for drainage and sewerage.

The new mortgage of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company is for $200,000,000. The mortgage is in favor of the Mercantile Trust Company, of New York. The revenue stamps required for the papers cost $60,000. The mortgage will be recorded in every county through which the road passes, between Baltimore and Chicago.

The announcement at Madrid, in the speech from the throne to the Cortes, that Spain had ceded the Carolino Islands and Palaos and the Marianna to Germany was received with surprise The cession marks the relinquishment of Spanish possessions in the far East, save the Island of Fernando Po and dependencies on the African coast.

At the Cabinet meeting held Friday, the President and his advisers practically decided not to issue a call for volunteers for the present, but to send to the Philippines 5000 additional regular troops taken from Cuba and Porto Rico. It is held that it would be poor policy to send fresh volunteers to the Philippines during the rainy season, which has now set in.

The Court of Cassation, on June 3, rendered a verdict in favor of a revision of the Dreyfus case and ordering a new court-martial, to sit at Rennes, sixty miles from Nantes, for the trial of the prisoner. Previous to the announcement of the verdict crowds of people assembled at the palace of justice and its neighborhood, awaiting the decision. Perfect calm prevailed.

Spain, reserving for herself three coaling stations in each group, has entered into a convention under the terms of which the Carolino, Palaos and Marianna Islands are ceded to Germany. These excepted possessions Germany agrees to defend in perpetuity and for the purchased territory pays $5,000,000, and guarantees to Spain "the advantage of the favored nation clause in all her trading with the islands."

Balfour in introducing a vote of £30,000 ($150,000) for Lord Kitchener in the House of Commons, said the fact that the power of mahdism was crushed was due to the genius of the man they desired to honor and reward. He expressed the hope that those who objected to the policy of the Soudan advance would not think that a reason for resisting the vote, as such a course would be introducing politics into military matters.

On Sunday there was a demonstration against President Loubet, on the race course at Paris, which must be considered as of the gravest character as such matters go in France. It was not merely the rabble that took part in the hostile attack upon M. Loubet, but men whose position lends importance to their acts. The outbreak was not merely an anti-Semitic riot, but was a political demonstration in which royalists, anti-Dreyfusites and others took part.

A vigorous campaign was begun on Saturday against General Pio del Pilars' force of 2000 rebels in the foothills at the mouth of Laguna de Bay and in the towns of Cainta, Taytay and Antipola, and the supervision of General Lawton. General Hall, with 2500 men, moved southeast from the pumping station, under Colonel Whalley, who relieved General King in command of his brigade, proceeded east from San Pedro Macati, the two divisions approaching each other. Colonel Whalley captured Cainta with small loss, the rebels fleeing before the advance of the United States troops. General Hall drove the Filipinos from the vicinity of Mariquina, sweeping them towards Colonel Whalley's column.

"YOU MAY BEND THE SAPLING but not the tree." When disease has become chronic and deep seated it is often difficult to cure it. That is the reason why it is best to take Hood's Sarsaparilla when disease first shows itself.

HOOD'S PILLS are the favorite family cathartic.

On Friday the President received the Duke D'Arcos, the new Spanish Minister, and the Queen Regent of Spain received the lion. Bellamy Storer, the new Minister of the United States at Madrid. The ceremonies in both cases were of simplest character; but the exchange of civilities shewed a total absence of bitter feeling or any display which might tend to wound the feelings of the Spanish. With this formal act, diplomatic relations between the two countries, severed more than a year ago by the outbreak of war, have been regularly resumed.

The Grounds are opened April 1, and closed Nov. 1, for occupying cottages and reception of visitors. Modern and ample accommodation have been provided for the multitudes that annually visit this refreshing and delightfully cool and bracing place of rest, free from malaria and contagious diseases.

The sea bathing is unsurpassed by any resort on the Mississippi Sound, while the supply of pure, sparkling drinking water is furnished by one of the finest of artesian wells, whose waters possess rare virtues.

The Grounds represent a beautiful grove of rare attractiveness, with its abundance of 20-odd varieties of shade trees, which afford shelter from the Summer heat.

The exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued, and act as a tonic to the debilitated visitors from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns. Boats for sailing and fishing always on hand. The drives along the seashore present magnificent views, and are over ten miles in length. Visitors are not expected to arrive or depart on the Sabbath day.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 5 to 22, inclusive, and be good to return on until Aug. 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. A fine hotel, with a frontage of 75 feet, equipped with electric lights and all modern conveniences, has been erected.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the New Orleans, Seashore and Mobile District Conferences.

THE MASTER-BUILDER.

The unhewn marble does not know
The place it has to fill;
That we may fit thy temple's plan,
Lord, shape us to thy will.

We ask not that thy tools, O Lord,
On us may lightly rest;
We only ask thou make us what
Will serve thy purpose best.

If, as thy column we shall rise,
Engraved with noble line,
Whereon thy goodness is set forth—
The glory all is thine.

Or if some corner be our lot,
Then do not spare thy hand,
And we will trust the shaping stroke
We can not understand

For still the lowest, darkest place
Remains the place of power
Whence springs the arch to span thy way
In thy triumphal hour.

INCIDENTS OF THE WORK IN KOREA.

BY REV. C. T. COLLYER, SONGDO, KOREA.

In a far-away land, cut off from association with friends and beyond the reach of those who could give us counsel and advice, we, perhaps, see the more plainly that God is with us, that we are being guided by the Holy Spirit, and that he is working through us. That such is the case, let me illustrate by the following cases which recently occurred in one day upon this circuit:

Less than six months ago, in a casual way, my colporteur told me, among a number of other cases, there was one of two old gentlemen and the son of one of them, who had purchased several books from him, and were diligently reading them. In the course of two or three months he several times visited them, and each time sold more books. Shortly before Christmas I visited the old gentleman, and was entertained in the house of the elder brother, whose name and title is Mun Manho. The title "Manho," literally translated, is, ten thousand horses. His rank is "captain of a third-rate guard-post," or, in other words, a ruler over village settlements comprising ten thousand houses.

A more fascinating picture than the one that occupied my attention when I first saw Mun Manho would be hard to find. Imagine a background of Korean houses, and an old gentleman of sixty, with a long, snowy beard, and clad in a white robe, rushing, with outstretched hands, across the courtyard to the great gate to receive the weary and travel-stained itinerant! A few enquiries elicited the information that he dated his great desire to be baptized from the death of his nephew (the young man above referred to). This nephew was a young man of about one and twenty. He had been ailing for a long time. One evening he called his father and uncle to him and told them that he was dying a believer in Jesus. He then took up the Gospels bought from our colporteur, read several passages from them, and prayed. I have been into the eight-foot square room where he died; its very walls seem sacred to me. What a glorious and victorious sight the angels beheld as they saw that young fellow who had never been to church or seen a missionary, yet who, while he lay dying, instructed his aged relatives in the way of life, and prayed for their conversion! It reminded me of Goldsmith's beautiful expression, "Allured to brighter worlds, and led the way." There is no doubt but that the experience of the young man's last hours made a deep impression upon both his father and uncle. The latter told me that they did not employ a sorceress (as is usual) to perform "mysterious ceremony and incantations" over his grave, because he died differently from the way in which Koreans do.

The next time I visited that place the old gentleman told me that they had quite made up their minds to become Christians. I called their attention to the fact that one of the requirements before baptism was, that they should "renounce the devil and all his works," and that, so long as they retained any fetish, they could not be looked upon as Christians. "We are aware of that," they replied, "and were only waiting for your coming, that we might destroy all the things we have pertaining to devil worship." They then collected the rags, torn paper, straw, etc., that were hung from the rafters; then, diving into trunks and baskets, a large pile of clothing for the use of the sorceress during her incantations was brought forth; from odd nooks and corners a number of curiously-shaped hats were produced. These were all carried into the courtyard and burnt. When nothing of the things they had worshiped for tens of years was left but smoke and ashes, I invited them to come in and worship the living God, whom I contrasted with that heap of debris. Though it was immediately after morning prayers that they commenced collecting the fetish, etc., more than six hours had passed away ere the service was over. This is the first time I have ever seen a full equipment of devil-worship paraphernalia, and I trust I may many a time again witness the destruction of things so hateful to God.

After service was over I asked where the family ancestral tablets were. They were produced and given to me, for, as Mun Manho said, they were now treading the heavenly road, and there was no more use for them. The ancestral tablet is always the hardest and the last thing for a Korean to give up, because he believes if there is no one to pray before the shrine of his spirit after he is gone, then there will be no rest for his soul. Whatever the future may be, "Mun Manho" is a name that will live in my memory.

To continue the history of that day: After eating dinner we walked four miles to a riverside town to hunt up a Mr. Choi, who had once walked fourteen miles to attend church in Songdo. To walk three or four miles is a pleasure when roads are good, but when the path is on top of steep banks, and only six or eight inches wide, it is quite another matter. Just before reaching Husarkang there is a small river with a wide stretch of deep, soft mud on either side to cross. It was very tantalizing that the ferryman should leave us on the mud exposed to a cutting wind, while he, under shelter at the other side of the stream, haggled with us to give an exorbitant fare. Though we did not know his address, we experienced no difficulty in finding Mr. Choi's house. Everyone had heard that he had been to the foreigners. There are no secrets among the Koreans. Mr. Choi is a storekeeper, but his stock in trade is so small, and comprises things of such slight value, that an American merchant would wonder how it could be possible to make profit enough to keep the wolf away. We were very cordially welcomed into the living-room behind the shop, and invited to take seats upon the heated floor. After a while supper was served upon a separate little table for each guest. The supper consisted of rice and small dishes of vegetables, snails and eggs, all highly seasoned with red pepper. While we were eating our delectable repast we could not help listening to a good deal of fuss going on in the woman's part of the house, which grew in intensity until it broke into a storm of passion. Upon enquiries we found that our hostess had been consulting a sorceress about her husband's going to church, and had been advised to persecute him at every turn; hence the trouble. After thinking over the matter I decided that it would be better to walk two miles through the dark to the next village. It never would have done for us to have moved into one of the inns in Husarkang, for if we had, we should have caused Mr. Choi to "lose face." When leaving, Mr. Choi accompanied us some distance along the road. We tried to comfort him and encourage his faith in Jesus. We pointed out that the only help we could give him was to pray for him and for the conversion of his wife. To anticipate history a bit, for our day's work was not then finished: About a fortnight later I saw Mr. Choi, and his face was radiant as he told me that the Lord, in answer to our prayers, had changed his wife's mind; that while she persecuted him before, she now repented of her sins and wanted to become a Christian.

Without mishap, and by the aid of a paper lantern, we reached the next village at almost nine o'clock, but could find no room in the inn. A man of that village, who had piloted us over from Husarkang, very kindly took us into his two-roomed house. He carried his wife and children over to his brother's house, so that there might be room for us. Until a late hour that night we sat in a circle on the floor telling some of the gospel stories. Mr. No (our host) was at first delighted, then grave, over the story he heard. I remember seeing the tears collect in his eyes as he, for the first time, heard about the crucifixion. Glory to God! this simple-hearted countryman took in all that he heard that night, and has since shown evidences of his change of heart, for he has brought, first, his own brothers, then his father, to believe in Christ.

I can not close without a reference to my recent severe illness, which, for nearly three months, has incapacitated me for work. The Lord has dealt very graciously with us, and to him alone we owe the restored life. As my strength is gradually coming back again, so I am taking up, one by one, the lines of work which I had been forced to lay aside for awhile. In every direction we see signs of the Lord's work, and pray that if such be his will, we may be spared to work many years in Korea's white harvest fields.

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

The weather is hot and dry. It looks as if it had forgotten how to rain in this part of Mississippi. The gardens and the farms are suffering greatly. No one need tell me again that cold weather kills out malaria and bugs and worms. We had the coldest Winter ever known, and yet chills are common up here in the hills, and the bugs and worms have been more destructive than ever before.

It seems we are to have some discussion and agitation on the school question in North Mississippi this year. There has been much disturbance in church circles for several years past. The Presbyterians, the Baptists, the Episcopalians, the Catholics and the Methodists have all been disturbed, rent and torn by internal strifes. No matter how, or about what, the controversy begins in any of the churches, it soon degenerates into a personal matter, and gets to be a contest about men more than about things. What is the meaning of all this? What will be the end of it all? The same spirit seems to prevail in the political world. We have ceased to discuss great questions and principles, and discuss great men. The churches displace the men, but settle nothing. The questions involved remain just where they were. The men spring up in another place, or go to another church to disturb the peace of Zion, and to continue bones of contention among the people of God. It is to be hoped we will discuss the school question in North Mississippi, and not the school men. They are good, true men—men who love the church and the cause of God.

The agitators in the several churches are hard to satisfy. They get after a man, or men, and pursue them to the bitter end. The majority act, but the minority will not acquiesce. They are not willing that Zion should have peace throughout her borders. This is manifest from the controversies and contentions going on in the several leading denominations in this country.

It seems to me there is a growing disposition to ignore lawful authority, to yield to church discipline, and to abide by church action. With some individualism is more important than connectionalism. The spirit of unity is wanting;—hence the bond of peace is not maintained. The spirit of unity is so important to the progress of the church that it does seem that individuals and minorities might concede something of their personal views and feelings for the good of the whole, and in order to promote the peace and harmony of the church. It strikes me that this contest over men in the churches tends to intensify the individualism of the parties engaged in it. They are more bitter and persistent in their opposition, or defense, of men than they are in their contentions over things, doctrines, and principles. Bitter words are spoken and written, and ill-feelings engendered, that will hurt the church for fifty years to come. The parties engaged in these personal contests will have to die before these wounds are healed. In some cases an heritage of ill-will will descend from father to son. The contests of the present will be projected into the future. The sea of both Church and State seems disposed to cast up, mainly, mire and dirt.

This is a time that calls for calmness in thinking, and for moderation in writing and speaking. Our ink should not be made of gall. Spleen is not pretty on paper. Love hides a multitude of faults, or if it must deal with them, it does so tenderly and kindly.

In several of the leading denominations in this country there seems to be a large class that will not hear the church when she speaks. The investigations by the church may be calm and thorough, and the utterance of the church may be wise, dignified, and in Christian spirit, but this class have not had their way, and so they will not yield. If this continues long, the necessary and self-evident end will come soon—the church, the churches, will split up into parties and factions. Thus it has been in the past, and thus it will be down to the end of time, or so long as this spirit prevails.

It is better to endure some things in the church than to keep up a perpetual disturbance over them. We may wake up more snakes than we can scotch or kill; do more harm than the good proposed; spread an evil worse than the one we propose to cure. In every case we might pause to ask, What real good can I accomplish by keeping up an agitation of this question, or by pursuing this man?

I have been reading the leading papers of several of the churches, and have been led into this train of reflections.

ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Alexandria District Conference of the M. E. Church, South, met in the Lecompte Church at 4:15 P. M., May 24, 1899, with Rev. J. A. Parker, D. D., presiding elder, in the chair, who called the Conference to order, announced a hymn, and led in prayer. Bro. H. G. Goodwyn, editor of the Colfax Chronicle, was elected secretary, and Bro. P. K. Abel and Rev. H. S. Johns, assistants. During the Conference about twenty preachers and eighteen lay delegates answered to their names. Also several visiting ministers were present, among them Dr. I. W. Cooper, of Centenary College, and Rev. J. J. Smylie, traveling evangelist.

It was expected that Bishop Key would be present to preside, but as he was called to the Indian Territory to attend to some important business for one of the church schools, he sent a letter expressing his regrets at not being able to attend.

Rev. J. A. Parker, D. D., presiding elder, presided over the Conference with great ability, and gave eminent satisfaction to all.

The decorum and facility with which the business of the Conference was transacted showed their zeal in the work in hand, and won the confidence and esteem of the community, which extended to all the ministers and delegates attending the most courteous hospitality and cordial entertainment.

An unusually large amount of important and interesting business was transacted by the Conference, of which we can not give even a synopsis, for lack of space.

The licenses of the following local preachers were renewed: P. A. Swan, L. L. Roberts, R. M. Horn, and Dransin Luneau.

Rev. L. L. Roberts was recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial.

The following brethren ministered in holy things during the session: Revs. Geo. Jackson, J. W. Lee, W. E. Aiken, H. S. Johns, J. J. Smylie, Robert Randle, Dr. I. W. Cooper, J. P. Haney, and Dr. Parker. Large audiences greeted the preachers, and five persons joined the church during the Conference.

Two of the most effective discourses were delivered by Dr. I. W. Cooper, of Centenary College, who is a very eloquent preacher, polished Christian gentleman, and scholar of fine attainments. There is little wonder at the success of Centenary with such an able and attractive manager in charge of its affairs.

Rev. P. A. Swan, W. A. White, H. G. Goodwyn and R. H. McGimsey were elected as delegates to the next Annual Conference, with Dr. S. P. Ward and S. H. Kelly as alternates.

It was decided to hold the next District Conference at Bunkie.

The reports of the preachers, in the main, showed that honest work was being put forth, and successes even by the little was being won. Already the collection for foreign missions exceeds that of last year for the district, and more to follow. Accessions were reported in nearly all the charges. The Sabbath-school work—and, in fact, all the interests of the church—were carefully looked after.

Rev. Dr. I. W. Cooper, president of Centenary College, Jackson, La., made an address on education, and raised $30 for some needy students at the college.

The usual committees made their reports, some of which provoked the usual Conference debates. Everything, however, passed off pleasantly.

The following was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we heartily endorse the editorial management of the Christian Advocate, published at Nashville, and the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, published at New Orleans, and urge subscriptions thereto.

Whereas, Rev. W. C. Black, D. D., editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, has offered to reduce the price of the said ADVOCATE to $1 per annum as soon as the subscription list shall reach 7,500; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we urge the 100,000 members in the three patronizing Conferences to subscribe, so this desirable end may be attained.

The Conference adjourned on the evening of May 27 with benediction.

ADDITIONAL "ECHOES."

Since my letter, of May 15, Rev. J. T. Abney has reported twenty-two and 5-100 dollars from Roxie, and he "hopes and prays for great results." Rev. Isaac L. Peebles, McComb, one hundred dollars on Education Day, and, "of course, we expect to see every member and to get every dollar possible." A like determination and effort on the part of all will soon bring complete victory. Rev. A. T. Bell sends an additional report from Shubuta of sixty-seven and 75-100 dollars, making a total of one hundred six and 45-100 dollars from that charge, and adds: "I think we will secure one hundred and fifty dollars, or more. Quite a third of my membership is still left to be seen." Carrollton reports an additional contribution of one dollar, received from a young man now residing one thousand miles from Carrollton.

I have heard a discouraging note from only one charge. The preacher is doing heroic and faithful work there, and will continue. From several quarters I learn the interest is growing, and I expect to receive many favorable reports ere long.

It is earnestly hoped that every preacher who has not observed Twentieth Century Education Day will speedily make preparation therefor, and put forth his best effort to succeed. At our next Annual Conferences may there not be one preacher of whom it may not be said, "He has done what he could." We will be satisfied with that, but with nothing less. Dismiss from your mind all notion that the work is too great to be accomplished. "We are well able."

"So nigh is grandeur to our dust,
So near is God to man,
When duty whispers low, Thou must,
True faith replies, I can."

A VICTORY-VOTED VENGEANCE.

On June 6 we witnessed the burial of the saloon. Strong hands laid hold of its remains, carried it out into the thicket, where it could not offend the senses, and lowered it into its political grave. The reverently bared-head buzzards were summoned as pall-bearers, and the whip-poor-will raised the tune from the limb of a tree, "Dick's done with liquor." Whilst thus reciting the ballad of its joy the broken-down politicians gathered around to shed their tears over the best friend they ever had, killed with ballots, not bullets, on that high day in June. Selah!

Mr. Editor, the parish went dry by 39 majority, for which we devoutly thank God and take courage.

"THE PASTOR AND THE EVANGELIST."

(Concluded.)

"2. Is it trne that this same evangelist persnaded the pastor at McCool, the same year, to allow him to hold a meeting at that place?" etc.

No, it is not trne that I "persnaded" him. I went from the conntry to that place to take the train home. I met the pastor there, and as some persons had spoken to me about holding a meeting there, I introdnced the matter to the paster. He was nndecided, but made an appointment for me to preach that night, stating that he wonld let me know next day. The next day he and I met at the chnrch before preaching, and I wanted to learn what he had decided npon, and I asked him the direct question. It was my place and bnsiness to do so. The main points, or sentences, were about as the following: "Well, Bro. Evans, everybody wants the meeting. What do yon say about it?" "Bro. Bass, I don't know what about it. I don't know what we could do for you in the way of remnneration." To this I replied, "I will let that matter take care of itself." The pastor then said, "Well, go ahead; we shall see what can be done." I preached in the spirit of my Master. We had a good meeting. The people treated me nicely. I was made quite welcome. It is true I was not on the interior of the pastor's mind. I can not say how mnch he had to "persnade" himself "to allow me to hold a meeting." But I do know that he treated me with becoming courtesy and "brotherly kindness," or I would not have assisted him at all. I am as far from forcing myself on a pastor, when I know it, as any man in Southern Methodism. It is my privilege to offer my services to whom I wish. It is the pastor's bnsiness to accept or reject, as he sees proper. He certainly ought to be able to decide what he wants. The fact of the bnsiness is what made some "good people" get the idea that I was snch a "money man" was simply because I preached and talked on the "dnty of snpporting the pastor," and took collections for that pnrpose. I have not heard of any pastor getting after me for doing "good work on raising his salary." They all admit that I preach "good sermons" and did "mnch good." But all I say is not like they say things every time; and, again, I "received" snch and snch an amonnt of money. Dear brethren, I don't get mnch money. I always make a record of what little the Lord gives me. I give what I do get to the snpport of dear ones depending upon me—mother and sisters—and to other pnrposes.

"3. In that same and other meetings, did not this same evangelist threaten the people by saying that he wonld pray a calamity upon them if they didn't 'pay up,' and relate instances in which he had done the like?"

No, I did not. "Many good people" oftentimes misnnderstand, and consequently misinterpret, what preachers really do say. More especially is this true in time of a heated revival. An evangelist of an opposite denomination once before reported a lot of this sort of things on me. I had assisted one of onr pastors in a revival in a certain town, and about seventy-five had joined our chnrch. Afterwards this man was given some of the different stray shells, or disconnected sentences, which were taken to him from the battle-ground, and he pnt them into his own molds, and rnn ont qnite a ridicnlons little article. It is true that I have preached to a great "many good people;" bnt who has a better right to know what I said than I do? One fact the reader mnst bear in mind is, that Bro. Anderson himself has never heard me preach, or say any of these things. However, it is sufficient to say that so long as I preach, I shall continne to "relate" snch "instances" as have fallen nnder my observation as a minister whenever occasions demand.

As to my "prayers," I offer them np to God in the name of his Son, Jesns Christ, and oftentimes thank God he answers me. I will give yon an illnstration as to how I pray what yon call "calamities" upon people. It will do for yon and others to think about in the fntnre. I pray that the good Lord, in his tender mercy and loving-kindness, may reveal to all concerned that a mistake has been made in the case of this "particnlar evangelist." Amen!

"4. Did not this same evangelist say to Mr. John Dempsey, in Winston connty, whose wife was seriously ill with chronic affliction, that if he wonld pay $20 to the meeting, his wife wonld get well?" etc.

Here is another nnconpled and side-tracked car that only needs to be rnn on to the main line, and pnt into its original and intelligent connection, to show its trne meaning. I will just say that I gave that brother an intelligent and scriptural reply to his many pnblic reqnests for prayer, which I thought appropriate to his individnal case. And an educated and consecrated pastor said, "Amen!" Readers can draw their own conclnsions.

"5. Does not this same evangelist abnse many good commnnities, and offend many good people, and belittle their work in the Lord?"

No, I do not. I preach the straight gospel from the records of eternal trnth. Sometimes people get offended. I preach the Word baptized with the Holy Ghost, and do my level best, in the best English at my command, to send the trnth home to the hearts and consciences of the people. "The offense of the cross is not ceased" yet. I do my level best on preaching a loving, simple, plain gospel as it is in Christ. I depend npon this method to draw the crowds. I always have very good crowds, and the Lord honors his work in saving sonls and bnilding np the chnrch. May God bless Bro. Anderson, and send a sweeping revival thronghont his circnit! Mnch love to all the brethren.

I will now introdnce to the readers of the dear ADVOCATE some witnesses. These are witnesses that have been with me in the battles, and that have known me from the beginning. Hear them.

First, we will hear from Rev. Amos Kendall, a man who has been for years among the most prominent and greatest preachers of the North Mississippi Conference; the man who met me on the streets of Corinth not a great while after my conversion, and frankly advised me to get license to preach. He did not make a mistake, for I had felt my call from a child. He licensed me to preach the same year at Burnsville, Miss.—June 23, 1883. I was with him, more or less, for seven years. He knew me nnder most all sorts of circnmstances dnring that time. He says: "To all whom it may concern: I had a personal and an intimate acqnaintance with Rev. W. D. Bass from the time he was licensed to preach nntil he began his evangelistic work. While presiding elder I had him in my district several years. He always did his work well. He was trnthfnl, loyal to the chnrch, pions, and consecrated. What he has been, and what he has said and done since, of course, I am not prepared to say, though I know no reasons why my opinion of him should be changed."—Amos Kendall, Sardis, Miss., May 24, 1899.

Next, I use a qnotation from Rev. J. C. Lowe's letter to me. Bro. Lowe is a man of fine cnltnred attainments, taste, and ability; one among the most cantions, painstaking and lovable pastors it has ever been my pleasnre to assist in revival work. In 1897-'98 I assisted him at Verona, Nettleton, and Pickens, Miss. These are among the most refined little towns in the State. In those three revivals I preached the straight trnth in love. The dear people treated me nicely. In a recent letter Bro. Lowe says: "As I stated in my article written after each meeting yon helped me in, so I say now: that I heartily approved all the doctrines yon preached, and all the methods yon employed in bnilding np the chnrch and in bringing sinners to God, and yonr deportment was that of a Christian gentleman." . . . "And I have heard no complaint of the work done after the meetings were closed," etc. —J. C. Lowe, Pickens, Miss., May 23, 1899.

We will now hear from another conscientions and intelligent pastor with whom I have labored.

"Mr. Editor: I want to say that Rev. W. D. Bass has been with me in six protracted meetings. While I was on the Poplar Creek charge he helped me in two meetings—at old Bethel and Wesley Chapel. In those two meetings we had about eighty accessions to onr chnrch, and over one hnndred conversions. And while I was on the Walthall charge he helped me in four meetings, with good results. Many conversions and accessions to the chnrch. The Lord was with ns in great power in all of those meetings. Bro. Bass is a strong preacher, good revivalist. I regard him as an intelligent Christian gentleman. Bro. Bass, no donbt, has made mistakes. Where is the man that never made a mistake? He is not on earth. And onr criticisms of the brethren shonld not be too severe."—J. H. Rogers, Ellzey, Miss., May 24, 1899.

I will next nse some extracts from a letter received to-day from Bro. Bowlin, the pastor whom I assisted in those revivals on "Rural Hill circnit in 1896." The letter is very brotherly—wonld be glad to give it all, bnt space forbids.

"Yonr character needs no defense; it will stand anywhere. I have known yon qnite awhile, and have had yon with me in a nnmber of meetings, and have always fonnd yon to be an honest, hnmble, and consecrated Christian gentleman. And being acqnainted with all the facts concerning yonr work on the Rural Hill circnit, can say that Rev. W. L. Anderson's article referring to the same is nnjnst, nnkind, and nnbrotherly, and is slanderons in tone and spirit. I called yon there from Dangherty, I. T., and yon agreed to come without the promise of one cent; not even traveling expenses. I merely told yon that we wonld give yon plenty to eat, and if yon snoceeded in reviving the people, they might pay yonr railroad fare one way. I couldn't afford to promise yon anything from the fact that nine months of the year had gone, and I hadn't received $50 from five chnrches, and it does seem, too, that if yon had been seeking pelf, as the brother charges, that yon wonld have songht more promising fields. I am sorry my book showing the exact amonnt that was paid to yon has been misplaced, and I can't get hold of it just now; bnt yonr statement of the amonnt is about correct. [I had written him from the West what I thonght it was before I reached home recently.] And as to what was paid to me, I am snre that I got $100 more than I wonld have gotten. Bro. Anderson's statement with reference to what yon said to Mr. John Dempsey is altogether different from my recollection of what yon said. I know I endorsed what yon said to Dempsey, and I wonldn't have endorsed what Anderson states that yon said," etc.

He then states in his letter about what was said. I received this testimony from Bro. Bowlin after having already written my answers. I have never helped a more loyal and godly man than dear Bro. Bowlin. The above letter was written nnder date, May 25, 1899, by Rev. W. A. Bowlin, Buena Vista, Miss. (North Mississippi Conference).

In the most recent revival I have conducted, which was in the Choctaw Nation, where the pastor had not received bnt $5 dnring the year in the town where he wanted me, and wrote and told me so, I wrote and told him to be personally responsible for my railroad fare, and I wonld come and help him, if I didn't get a cent. I wonld not have held him responsible for the ticket money, bnt I had to get some money from others to travel on, and I don't like to borrow without a "probability of paying." Bnt, thank God! we had a good meeting. Several preachers attended and enjoyed it. The pastor wrote me the following, to be nsed in this connection: "I have known Rev. W. D. Bass for several years. He has assisted me in two meetings. I believe him to be a trne-hearted Christian and a man of God. I can heartily endorse his manner of preaching. All who desire evangelistic help can not do better, in my jndgment, than to secnre the services of Rev. W. D. Bass."—C. F. Mitchell, P. C., Antlers circnit, Indian Mission Conference, May 19, 1899.

We could give others, bnt forbear.

Finally: "The bearer hereof, Rev. W. D. Bass, is in good standing with his chnrch at home. He is highly esteemed by all, and especially among those who have known him longest. His deportment, both as a minister and a man, has been good, and he enjoys the confidence of all onr people."—T. W. Lewis (his pastor), Corinth, Miss., May 25, 1899.

God bless Bro. Anderson, and make him a power for good in the chnrch, and in winning precions sonls to Christ!

Dear brethren, let ns all rally aronnd the blood-stained flag of onr Lord, and wave it high, and wave it long, until universal harmony, peace and love shall spread throughont the ministry and the chnrch of God. Let us stand together, recognizing the fact that there is enongh room and work for us all on the battle-field against the devil and sin. Success and blessings crown the efforts of all to do good nntil we shall cast onr trophies down at onr Master's feet, and mingle onr praises together on the haven of eternal joys.

Very trnly, W. D. BASS.

REPORT OF THE WOMANS' BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The twenty-first Annnal Session of the W. B. of F. M. was held in Tnlip Street Chnrch, Nashville, Tenn., May 18-24. Every officer and bnsiness manager present, and all save three of the thirty-four Conferences represented. These, together with the many celebrities residing in Nashville, made the meeting one of nnnsnal interest and power.

The opening service, Thnrsday evening, of praise, testimony, and commnnion, led by onr mnch-loved president, Mrs. M. D. Wightman, gave evidence of a strong faith and snstaining grace, as an nnnsnally large nnmber of the Board had been called npon to snffer dnring the year, either in the loss of loved ones, or throngh months of lingering illness. Bnt God wronght ont of it all blessings to his children.

To tell of the charming hospitality of Nashville, and the many courtesies shown ns, wonld take mnch space. Snffice it to say that Bro. Stewart, pastor of Tnlip Street Church, and all the other pastors in the city; presiding elder, Bishops Hargrove, Fitzgerald, and Wilson; Pnblishing House managers and connectional officers, the Vanderbilt faculty, together with the elect women of Nashville, made onr stay one of continnal joy and gladness in the trnest and best sense.

Friday was given to the foreign and home work, being brought ont fully in Mrs. Trueheart's report. She, being secretary of Home and Foreign Affairs, keeps in close touch with every missionary, knowing fnll well the needs, success, and failnre of each, and is prepared to say wherein we can meet the demands, as she also knows the strength and work of every Conference in Southern Methodism.

Our hearts were made to rejoice over the success in every field, specially in China, Mexico, and onr newest possession, Cnba. While some of onr work is almost self-snstaining, and there is advancement on that line, the needs were never more nrgent, as new places are to be occnpied, and in all fields increased facilities are needed.

Friday evening was given to the addresses of welcome by Bro. Stewart, Mrs. T. P. Weakley; and Mrs. Stewart, the president of the Tennessee Conference Society, responded to on behalf of the Board by Mrs. F. D. Swindell, of North Carolina.

Next came onr president's address, in her own inimitable manner, without notes, and without a snbject, bnt a heart-to-heart talk of onr past and present blessings, and opportunities of the fntnre. Her motto this year is, "And they were all of one heart to make Jesns king." This was her theme, and she often said dnring the meeting, "Sisters, we need Jesns."

Satnrday A. M., presentation and discnssion of work in China and Korea. The latter remains the children's field, and the results of the year's work is very encouraging.

Miss Gibson brought a fine report from the Training-school. Though she had been kept from her post as president by an illness of six months' dnration, she had only praise and thanksgiving for the lessons learned, and felt better prepared for her work in the fntnre. Her place was well filled by onr own dear "Sister Mary," Mrs. Hargrove, assisted by Miss Billingsly. The girls lovingly called Mrs. Hargrove "mother," and the motherly pride and interest shown the five gradnates that attended the Board meeting, to be given work in foreign fields, testified of the mntnal affection.

At 4 P. M. the reception of fraternal delegates and loving messages of good-will were brought from the Baptist, Episcopal, Cnmberland, Christian and Presbyterian Churches. How the great thought of bringing the world to Christ makes ns one in heart and pnrpose!

Satnrday evening a delightfnl entertainment, complimentary to the Board, was given by the Daisy Co workers and the yonng ladies of Tnlip. Miss Tnla Daniel, of Kentncky, responded to their cordial greetings on behalf of the Board.

Sunday, the crowning day, dawned clear and cool, inviting large crowds to the services, which began with the Snnday-school. Most of the visitors assembled in a large class-room of Dr. O. E. Brown. It was indeed a treat to hear his fine thonghts on Christ before the high-priest; also bringing ont the characteristics in Peter's life.

Our annnal sermon was preached by Bishop Wilson. Text: John xiv, 12. The Bishop was at his best, and stirred the vast andience as he carried them np, np, to the pinnacle of faith, showing that all things necessary for the bnilding np of Christ's kingdom can be secnred by faith. "If yon have faith, dare to do anything. Catch Cnba with one hand and China with the other, and lovingly bring them to Jesns. If there is money needed, there is a fish ont yonder," and on and on till we were inspired to dare to do great things for onr Lord. The Bishop remained throngh the entire session, giving mnch valnable information regarding onr work in the East.

Snnday afternoon fonnd a large crowd of boys and girls assembled to hear an address by Miss Barns, editor of the Little Worker; also an address by Miss Moore, a returned missionary from Brazil, and Miss Pyles from China.

I leave for Miss Smylie, of the Mississippi Conference, to tell of Dr. Lambnth's address Snnday night, of the six missionary candidates, and of the three last days so fnll of interest.
